PREFACE.

"Prefaces are great wastes of time, and though they seem to proceed of modesty, they are bravery."

FRANCIS BACON.

THIS book is a collection of what is quotable, as well as of what is quoted. Passages have not been included unless they have either proved their right by actual and effective quotation, or have seemed likely to be of general acceptability and usefulness, as "words which come home to men's business and bosoms." The method of arrangement adopted will, it is hoped, commend itself to all lovers of literature as preferable to the plan, sometimes employed in similar compilations, of "classification" under "subject" headings. The best classification is a very ample index, and in this respect "A BOOK OF QUOTATIONS" will be found to be most thoroughly supplied. Many excellent handbooks of proverbs, and also of classical and foreign quotations, have already been published, but none, as far as I am aware, with a full verbal index.

I have to acknowledge considerable indebtedness to the volumes of that useful repository of literary research, "Notes and Queries," not only in regard to tracing many English quotations, but also in the elucidation of the origin of many proverbs and household words, and notable passages from Greek, Latin, and modern languages. This collection is, however, in every section, the result of careful personal research and reference, extending over a period of more than fifteen years. Perfection is not possible in such a compilation, because absolute completeness is not attainable. At least—and at most—this volume can claim to be more elaborate and more comprehensive, as a book of reference, than any of its predecessors; and I venture to hope that, whilst its main purpose is utility, it may also justify the saying of Emerson, "Neither is a dictionary a bad book to read."

A BOOK OF QUOTATIONS.

BRITISH AND AMERICAN AUTHORS.

JOSEPH ADDISON (1672-1719).

The great, th' important day, big with the fate

Of Cato and of Rome. Cato. Act 1, 1.

Thy steady temper, Portia,
Can look on guilt, rebellion, fraud, and Cæsar,

In the calm lights of mild philosophy. Ib.

Greatly unfortunate, he fights the cause
Of honour, virtue, liberty and Rome. Ib.

Love is not to be reasoned down, or lost
In high ambition and a thirst of greatness ;
'Tis second life, it grows into the soul. Ib.

'Tis not in mortals to command success,
But we'll do more, Sempronius, we'll deserve it. Act 1, 2.

Your cold hypocrisy's a stale device,
A worn out trick : would'st thou be thought in earnest?

Clothe thy feigned zeal in rage, in fire, in fury! Act 1, 3.

'Tis not my talent to conceal my thoughts,
Or carry smiles and sunshine in my face,
When discontent sits heavy at my heart.
Act 1, 4.

And if, the following day, he chance to find
A new repast, or an untasted spring,
Blesses his stars, and thinks it luxury. Ib.
The pale unripened beauties of the north. Ib.
My voice is still for war. Act 2, 1.

A day, an hour of virtuous liberty,
Is worth a whole eternity in bondage. Ib.

But what is life?

'Tis not to stalk about, and draw fresh air,
From time to time, or gaze upon the sun ;
'Tis to be Free. When Liberty is gone,
Life grows insipid, and has lost its relish.
Act 2, 3.

Chains or conquest, liberty or death.
Act 2, 4.

Young men soon give, and soon forget affronts ;

Old age is slow in both. Act 2, 5.

When love's well timed, 'tis not a fault to love.

The strong, the brave, the virtuous, and the wise,

Then do not strike him dead with a denial,
But hold him up in life, and cheer his soul
With the faint glimmering of a doubtful

When love once pleads admission to our hearts,

In spite of all the virtue we can boast,
The woman that deliberates is lost. Act 4, 1.

Curse on his virtues! they've undone his country :

Such popular humanity is treason. Act 4, 4.

Falsehood and fraud shoot up on every soil,
The product of all climes. Ib.

How beautiful is death when earned by virtue! Ib.

When vice prevails, and impious men bear
sway,

The post of honour is a private station. Ib.

Once more farewell !

If e'er we meet hereafter, we shall meet
In happier climes, and on a safer shore. Ib.

It must be so,—Plato, thou reasonest well!—
Else whence this pleasing hope, this fond desire,

This longing after immortality? Act 5, 1.

Eternity, thou pleasing, dreadful thought.
Ib.

Unhurt amidst the war of elements,
The wrecks of matter, and the crush of worlds. Ib.

He knows not how to wink at human frailty,
Or pardon weakness that he never felt.

Act 5, 4.

Whilst I yet live, let me not live in vain. Ib.
The best may err. Ib.

From hence, let fierce contending nations
know

What dire effects from civil discord flow. Ib.

Here swarthy Charles appears, and there
His brother with dejected air.

To Sir Godfrey Kneller.

That is well said, John, an honest man, that is not quite sober, has nothing to fear.

I should think myself a very bad woman
if I had done what I do for a farthing less. Ib.

We are growing serious, and, let me tell you, that's the very next step to being dull.

The Drummer. Act 4, 6.

There is nothing more requisite in business than despatch.

Act 5, 1.

Critics in rust. Dialogue—Ancient Medals.

To have a relish for ancient coins, it is necessary to have a contempt for the modern.

Ib.

They are all of them men of concealed fire, that doth not break out with noise and heat in the ordinary circumstances of life, but shows itself sufficiently in all great enterprises that require it.

The Present State of the War.

He more had pleased us had he pleased us less.

English Poets.

(Referring to Cowley.)

For wheresoe'er I turn my ravished eyes,
Gay gilded scenes and shining prospects rise;

Poetic fields encompass me around,
And still I seem to tread on classic ground.

Letter from Italy.

How has kind Heaven adorned the happy land,
And scattered blessings with a wasteful hand!

Ib.

A painted meadow, or a purling stream. Ib.
Unbounded courage and compassion joined,
Tempering each other in the victor's mind,
Alternately proclaim him good and great,
And make the hero and the man complete.

The Campaign.

Rides in the whirlwind, and directs the storm.

Ib.

Such easy greatness, such a graceful port,
So turned and finished for the camp or court!

Ib.

And those who paint them truest, praise them most.*

Ib.

Music, the greatest good that mortals know,
And all of heaven we have below.

Song for St. Cecilia's Day. St. 3.

Nothing is capable of being well set to music that is not nonsense.

The Spectator. Vol. 1, No. 18.

A perfect tragedy is the noblest production of human nature.

No. 30.

The seeds of punning are in the minds of all men, and though they may be subdued by reason, reflection, and good sense, they will be very apt to shoot up in the greatest genius.

No. 61.

In all thy humours, whether grave or mellow,

Thou'rt such a touchy, testy, pleasant fellow,

Hast so much wit and mirth and spleen
about thee,

There is no living with thee or without thee.

No. 68. Tr. of Martial, Epig., Bk. 12, 47. See "Difficilis, facilis."

There is not so variable a thing in Nature
as a lady's head-dress.

Vol. 2, No. 98.

Everyone that has been long dead has a due proportion of praise allotted him, in which whilst he lived his friends were too profuse and his enemies too sparing.

No. 101.

Sunday clears away the rust of the whole week.

No. 112.

Sir Roger told them, with the air of a man who would not give his judgment rashly, that much might be said on both sides.

No. 122.

The knight is a much stronger Tory in the country than in town.

No. 126.

Softly speak and sweetly smile.

Vol. 4, No. 229 (Tr. from Boileau).

There is nothing in Nature so irksome as general discourses.

No. 267.

I have often thought, says Sir Roger, it happens very well that Christmas should fall out in the middle of winter.

No. 269.

These widows, sir, are the most perverse creatures in the world.

Vol. 5, No. 335.

Melancholy is a kind of demon that haunts our island, and often conveys herself to us in an easterly wind.

No. 337.

For oh! Eternity's too short

To utter all thy praise.

*Vol. 6, No. 453. Hymn,
"When all thy mercies."*

The spacious firmament on high,
With all the blue ethereal sky,
And spangled heavens, a shining frame,
Their great Original proclaim.

Ode. No. 466.

Soon as the evening shades prevail,
The moon takes up the wondrous tale,

And nightly to the listening earth

Repeats the story of her birth.

Ib.

And spread the truth from pole to pole.

Ib.

For ever singing as they shine,

"The Hand that made us is divine."

Ib.

A woman seldom asks advice before she has bought her wedding clothes.

Vol. 7, No. 475.

He dances like an angel . . . He is always laughing, for he has an infinite deal of wit.

Ib.

* Cf. Pope, "He best can paint them who can feel them most."

Our disputants put me in mind of the scuttle-fish, that when he is unable to extricate himself, blackens the water about him till he becomes invisible.

The Spectator. Vol. 7. Ode. No. 476.

I value my garden more for being full of blackbirds than of cherries, and very frankly give them fruit for their songs. No. 477.

There is nothing truly valuable which can be purchased without pains and labour.

The Tatler. No. 97.

I remember when our whole island was shaken with an earthquake some years ago, there was an impudent mountebank who sold pills, which, as he told the country people, were very good against an earthquake. No. 240.

MARK AKENSIDE (1721-1770).

Where Truth deigns to come,
Her sister Liberty will not be far.

Pleasures of the Imagination.

Book 1, 23.

Such and so various are the tastes of men.

Book 2, 567

Milton's golden lyre.

Ode on a Sermon against Glory.

The man forget not, though in rags he lies,
And know the mortal through a crown's disguise.

Epistle to Curio. 197.

Seeks painted trifles and fantastic toys,
And eagerly pursues imaginary joys.

The Virtuoso. 10.

Youth calls for Pleasure, Pleasure calls for Love.

Love: An Elegy.

JAMES ALDRICH (1810-1856).

Her suffering ended with the day;

Yet lived she at its close,
And breathed the long, long night away
In statue-like repose.* A Death-bed.

But when the sun, in all his state,
Illumed the eastern skies,
She passed through Glory's morning gate,
And walked in Paradise. Ib.

T. BAILEY ALDRICH (1836-1907).

Somewhere in desolate, wind-swept space,
In shadow-land, in no man's land,
Two hurrying forms met face to face,
And bade each other stand.

"And who are you?" said one agape,
Shuddering in the gloaming light;
"I know not," said the other shape,
"I only died last night." Identity.

* See Hood.

HENRY ALDRIDGE (OR ALD- RICH), Dean of Christchurch, (1647-1710).

If all be true that I do think,
There are five reasons we should drink;
Good wine—a friend—or being dry—
Or lest we should be by and by—
Or any other reason why. †

SIR WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Earl of Stirling. (See STIRLING.)

HENRY ALFORD, Dean of Canter- bury, (1810-1871).

Law is king of all.

The School of the Heart. Lesson 6.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM (1824-1889).

Where Day and Night and Day go by
And bring no touch of human sound.

The Ruined Chapel. St. 1.

Now autumn's fire burns slowly along the woods,
And day by day the dead leaves fall and melt.

Autumnal Sonnet.

The soft invisible dew on each one's eyes.

Ib.

His blissful soul was in Heaven, though a breathing man was he;
He was out of time's dominion, so far as the living may be.

Poems.

Can running water be drunk from gold?
Can a silver dish the forest hold?
A rocking twig is the finest chair,
And the softest paths lie through the air,—
Good-bye, good-bye to my lady fair!

The Bird.

W. ALLSTON (1779-1843).

Yet, still, from either beach,
The voice of blood shall reach,
More audible than speech,

"We are one!"

America to Great Britain.

CHRIS. ANSTEY (1724-1805).

If ever I ate a good supper at night,
I dreamed of the Devil, and waked in a fright.

The New Bath Guide.

Letter 4.—A Consultation of the Physicians.
Granta, sweet Granta, where, studious of ease, Seven years did I sleep, and then lost my degrees. Epilogue.

† Translated from a Latin epigram said to be by Père Sirmond (16th Century):—

Si bene commemorini, causæ sunt quinque bibendi;
Hospitis adventus; præsens sitis atque futura;
Et vini bonitas, aut quælibet altera causa.

Given in Isaac J. Reeve's "Wild Garland,"

v. 2.

[Dr.] J. ARBUTHNOT (1667-1735).

Law is a bottomless Pit.

Title of Pamphlet.

To bliss unknown my lofty soul aspires,
My lot unequal to my vast desires.

J. ARMSTRONG, M.D. (1709-1779).

Th' athletic fool, to whom what Heaven denied

Of soul, is well compensated in limbs.

Art of Preserving Health.

Book 3, l. 206.

For want of timely care

Millions have died of medicable wounds.

l. 519.

Virtuous and wise he was, but not severe;
He still remembered that he once was young.

Book 4, l. 226.

Much had he read,

Much more had seen: he studied from the life,

And in th' original perused mankind.

l. 231.

Distrust yourself, and sleep before you fight.
'Tis not too late to-morrow to be brave.

l. 456.

Music exalts each joy, allays each grief,
Expels diseases, softens every pain,
Subdues the rage of poison and of plague.

l. 510.

Britain's best bulwarks are her wooden walls.

Britain's Best Bulwarks.

SIR EDWIN ARNOLD (1832-1904).

We are the voices of the wandering wind,
Which moan for rest, and rest can never find;

Lo! as the wind is, so is mortal life,
A moan, a sigh, a sob, a storm, a strife.

The Deva's Song to Prince Siddārtha.

The slow, dull sinking into withered age.

The Light of Asia. Book 4.

Pity and need

Make all flesh kin. There is no caste in blood,

Which runneth of one hue; nor caste in tears,

Which trickle salt with all. Book 6.

Shall any gazer see with mortal eyes,

Or any searcher know by mortal mind?

Veil after veil will lift—but there must be

Veil upon veil behind. Book 8.

Nor ever once ashamed,

So we be named.

Press-men; Slaves of the Lamp; Servants of Light.

The Tenth Muse. St. 13.

Our past lives build the present, which must mould

The lives to be.

Adzuma. Act 1, 1.

If hearts be true and fast,

Ill fates may hurt us, but not harm, at last.

Act 1, 3.

One can be a soldier without dying, and a lover without sighing.

Act 2, 5.

Such sight spreads bright behind that blindness here

Which men name "seeing."

At Bethlehem. l. 200.

For love of Him, nation hates nation so
That at His shrine the watchful Islamite Guards Christian throats.

Book 4. The Parables. l. 164.

MATTHEW ARNOLD (1822-1888).

The barren optimistic sophtries

Of comfortable moles.

To a Republican Friend.

Ennobling this dull pomp, the life of kings,
By contemplation of diviner things.

Mycerinus.

But deeper their voice grows, and nobler their bearing,

Whose youth in the fires of anguish hath died.

A Modern Sappho.

Others abide our question. Thou art free.

We ask and ask: thou smilest and art still
Out-topping knowledge.

Shakespeare.

But so many books thou readest,

But so many schemes thou breedest,

But so many wishes feedest,

That thy poor head almost turns.

The Second Best.

Yet they, believe me, who await

No gifts from chance, have conquered fate.

Resignation.

Curled minion, dancer, coiner of sweet words.

Sohrab and Rustum.

Truth sits upon the lips of dying men. l. b.

Their ineffectual feuds and feeble hates—

Shadows of hates, but they distress them still.

Balder Dead.

To hear the world applaud the hollow ghost.

Which blamed the living man.

Growing Old.

Let the long contention cease!

Geese are swans, and swans are geese.

The Last Word.

* Sleep.

There's a secret in his breast,
Which will never let him rest.

Tristram and Iseult. Part 1.

Her look was like a sad embrace :
The gaze of one who can divine
A grief, and sympathise. lb.
Now the great winds shoreward blow,
Now the salt tides seaward flow ;
Now the white wild horses play,
Chump and chafe and toss in the spray.

The Forsaken Merman.

Eyes too expressive to be blue,
Too lovely to be grey.

Faded Leaves. 4. On the Rhine.

Wandering between two worlds—one dead,
The other powerless to be born.
Stanzas from the Grande Chartreuse. St. 15.
The kings of modern thought are dumb.

St. 20.

Years hence, perhaps, may dawn an age.
More fortunate, alas ! than we,
Which without hardness will be sage,
And gay without frivolity. St. 27.
Children of men ! the Unseen Power, whose eye

For ever doth accompany mankind,
Hath looked on no religion scornfully,
That men did ever find. Progress.

Still bent to make some port he knows not where,
Still standing for some false impossible shore. A Summer Night.
The same heart beats in every human breast.

The Buried Life.

And then he thinks he knows
The hills where his life rose,
And the sea where it goes. lb.

Nor bring, to see me cease to live,
Some doctor full of phrase and fame,
To shake his sapient head, and give
The ill he cannot cure a name. A Wish.

Radiant with ardour divine !
Beacons of hope, ye appear !
Languor is not in your heart,
Weakness is not in your word,
Weariness not on your brow.

Rugby Chapel.

What shelter to grow ripe is ours ?
What leisure to grow wise ?

In Memory of the Author of "Obermann."

Too fast we live, too much are tried,
Too harassed, to attain
Wordsworth's sweet calm, or Goethe's wide
And luminous view to gain. lb.
For tyrants make man good beyond himself ;
Hate to their rule, which else would die away,
Their daily-practised chafings keep alive.

Merope.

All this I bear, for, what I seek, I know :
Peace, peace is what I seek, and public calm,
Endless extinction of unhappy hates. lb.
Old age is more suspicious than the free
And valiant heart of youth, or manhood's firm, Unclouded reason. lb.

How many noble thoughts,
How many precious feelings of men's heart,
How many loves, how many grates,
Do twenty years wear out, and see expire !
lb.

When a wretch
For private gain or hatred takes a life,
We call it murder, crush him, brand his name,
But when, for some great public cause, an arm
Is, without love or hate, austere raised Against a power exempt from common checks,
Dangerous to all, to be but thus annulled—
Ranks any man with murder such an act ?
lb.

With women the heart argues, not the mind.

Give not thy heart to despair.
No lamentation can loose
Prisoners of death from the grave. lb.
The man who to untimely death is doomed.
Vainly you hedge him from the assault of harm ;
He bears the seed of ruin in himself. lb.
For this is the true strength of guilty kings.
When they corrupt the souls of those they rule. lb.

That even in thy victory thou show,
Mortal, the moderation of a man. lb.
Be neither saint nor sophist-led, but be a man. Empedocles on Etna.

But we are all the same—the fools of our own woes ! lb.

We do not what we ought,
What we ought not, we do,
And lean upon the thought
That chance will bring us through. lb.

The brave, impetuous heart yields everywhere
To the subtle, contriving head. lb.

And truly he who here
Hath run his bright career,
And served men nobly, and acceptance found,
And borne to light and right his witness high,
What could he better wish than then to die,
And wait the issue, sleeping underground ?
Westminster Abbey. July 21, 1881.

For this and that way swings
The flux of mortal things,
Though moving only to one far-set goal.
Westminster Abbey. July 21, 1881.

After light's term, a term of cecity. Ib.
Folly revived, refurbished sophistries,
And pululating rites externe and vain. Ib.
Thus sleeping in thine Abbey's friendly shade
And the rough waves of life for ever laid !
I would not break thy rest, nor change thy doom.

Even as my father, thou,
Even as that loved, that well - recorded friend—

Hast thy commission done; ye both may now
Wait for the leaven to work, the let to end.
Ib.
Proud of port, though something squat.
Poor Matthias.

Culture is "To know the best that has been said and thought in the world." *

Literature and Dogma. Preface (1878).

Culture is reading. Ib.
When we are asked further, what is conduct? let us answer, Three-fourths of life.
Chap. 1, Religion Given.

Conduct is three-fourths of our life and its largest concern. Ib.

The not ourselves, which is in us and all around us. Ib.

The not ourselves which makes for righteousness. Ib.

The enduring power, not ourselves, which makes for righteousness. Ib.

Inwardness, mildness, and self-renounce-ment do make for man's happiness.

Chap. 3, Religion New-Given.

The eternal not ourselves which makes and of opium.

Chap. 11, The True Greatness of the Old Testament.

Sweet reasonableness.†

St. Paul and Protestantism. Preface (1870).

DR. THOMAS ARNOLD (1795-1842).

First, religious and moral principles;
secondly, gentlemanly conduct; thirdly, intellectual ability. Address to his Scholars.

Preserve proportion in your reading. Keep your view of men and things extensive. Ib.

* See "Culture is the passion for sweetness and light."

† Also repeated many times in "Literature and Dogma" and other works.

ROGER ASCHAM (1515-1568).

JANE AUSTEN (1775-1817).

To sit in the shade on a fine day and look upon verdure is the most perfect refreshment. Mansfield Park. Chap. 9.

Where an opinion is general, it is usually correct.‡ Chap. 11.

It is happy for you that you possess the talent of flattering with delicacy. May I ask whether these pleasing attentions proceed from the impulse of the moment, or are the result of previous study?

Pride and Prejudice. Chap. 14.

Nobody is on my side, nobody takes part with me; I am cruelly used, nobody feels for my poor nerves. (Mrs. Bennet).
Chap. 20.

"I am afraid," replied Elinor, "that the pleasantness of an employment does not always evince its propriety."

Sense and Sensibility. Chap. 13.

ALFRED AUSTIN (1835-1913).

I love the doubt, the dark, the fear,
That still surroundeth all things here.

Hymn to Death.

The time will come when men
Will be as free and equal as the waves,
That seem to jostle, but that never jar.

The Tower of Babel. Act 2, 1.

Every life, even the most selfish and the most frivolous, is a tragedy at last, because it ends with death. Savonarola. Preface.

If Nature built by rule and square,
Than man what wiser would she be?
What wins us is her careless care,
And sweet unpunctuality.

Nature and the Book.

Till the half-drunk lean over the half-dressed. The Season.

Here lies who, born a man, a grocer died.‡

The Golden Age.

mort épiciier.*

And Clara dies that Claribel may dance.

The Golden Age

Lo, where huge London, huger day by day,
O'er six fair counties spreads its hideous
sway,
A tract there lies by Fortune's favours blest,
And at Fame's font yclept the happy West.

Ib.

You want a seat? Then boldly sate your itch.
Be very radical, and very rich.

There may be danger in the deed,
But there is honour too.

Lays of the Scottish Cavaliers.

The Island of the Scots, 3.

They bore within their breasts the grief
That fame can never heal—
The deep, unutterable woe
Which none save exiles feel. Ib., 12.

Woman's love is writ in water!
Woman's faith is traced on sand!

Charles Edward at Versailles.

[Sir] FRANCIS BACON (Lord Verulam and Viscount St. Albans) (1561-1626).

Then grew the learning of the schoolmen to be utterly despised as barbarous.

Proficiency and Advancement of Learning.

Book 1.

A credulous man is a deceiver. Ib.
Time which is the author of authors. Ib.

And to speak truly, "Antiquitas sæculi, juvenus mundi." These times are the ancient times, when the world is ancient. Ib.

If a man will begin with certainties, he shall end in doubts; but if he will be content to begin with doubts, he shall end in certainties. Ib.

[Knowledge,] a rich storehouse, for the glory of the Creator, and the relief of man's estate. Ib.

There is no power on earth which setteth up a throne, or chair of state, in the spirits and souls of men, and in their cogitations, imaginations, opinions, and beliefs, but knowledge and learning. Ib.

Libraries, which are as the shrines where all the relics of the ancient saints, full of true virtue, and that without delusion or imposture, are preserved and reposed.

Book 2.

Of the nature of the sun, which passeth through pollutions, and itself remains as pure as before. Ib.

Aristotle noteth well, "that the nature of everything is best seen in his smallest portions." Ib.

Antiquities are history defaced, or some remnants of history which have casually escaped the shipwreck of time. Ib.

Cæsar, in modesty mixed with greatness, did for his pleasure apply the name of a Commentary to the best history of the world. Ib.

And now last, this most happy and glorious event, that this island of Britain, divided from all the world, should be united in itself. Ib.

It is the true office of history to represent the events themselves, together with the counsels, and to leave the observations and conclusions thereupon to the liberty and faculty of every man's judgment. Ib.

It [poesy] was ever thought to have some participation of divineness, because it doth raise and erect the mind by submitting the shows of things to the desires of the mind; whereas reason doth buckle and bow the mind unto the nature of things. Ib.

The knowledge of man is as the waters, some descending from above, and some springing up from beneath; the one informed by the light of nature, the other inspired by divine revelation. Ib.

There was never miracle wrought by God to convert an atheist, because the light of nature might have led him to confess a God. Ib.

Democritus said, "That the truth of nature lieth hid in certain deep mines and caves." Ib.

They are ill discoverers that think there is no land, when they can see nothing but sea. Ib.

It being the nature of the mind of man, to the extreme prejudice of knowledge, to delight in the spacious liberty of generalities. Ib.

Medicine is a science which hath been, as we have said, more professed than laboured, and yet more laboured than advanced; the labour having been, in my judgment, rather in circle than in progression.

Proficiency and Advancement of Learning.

Book 2.

Words are but the current tokens or marks of popular notions of things. Ib.

The great sophism of all sophisms being equivocation or ambiguity of words and phrase. Ib.

Words, as a Tartar's bow, do shoot back upon the understanding of the wisest, and mightily entangle and pervert the judgment. Ib.

Words are the tokens current and accepted for conceits, as moneys are for values. Ib.

So hath he [man] sought to come forth of the second general curse, which was the confusion of tongues, by the art of grammar. Ib.

A dance is a measured pace, as a verse is a measured speech. Ib.

There is no man but speaketh more honestly than he can do or think. Ib.

As Plato said elegantly, "That Virtue, if she could be seen, would move great love and affection." Ib.

As it hath been wisely noted, the most corrected copies are commonly the least correct. Ib.

It is one method to practise swimming with bladders, and another to practise dancing with heavy shoes. Ib.

In life there is no man's spirit so soft, but esteemeth the effecting of somewhat that he hath fixed in his desire, more than sensuality. Ib.

We are much beholden to Machiavel and others, that write what men do, and not what they ought to do. Ib.

Men must pursue things which are just in present, and leave the future to the Divine Providence. Ib.

For as the ancient politicians in popular estates were wont to compare the people to the sea, and the orators to the winds; because as the sea would of itself be calm and quiet, if the winds did not move and trouble it, so the people would be peaceable and tractable, if the seditious orators did not set them in working and agitation. Ib.

Did not one of the fathers* in great indignation call poesy, vinum dæmonum? Ib.

All good moral philosophy, as was said, is but a handmaid to religion. Ib.

By aspiring to a similitude of God in goodness, or love, neither man nor angel ever transgressed, or shall transgress. Ib.

States, as great engines, move slowly, and are not so soon put out of frame. Ib.

Man seeketh in society comfort, use, and protection. Ib.

Many are wise in their own ways, that are weak for government or counsel. Ib.

It is as hard and severe a thing to be a true politician as to be truly moral. Ib.

No man's fortune can be an end worthy of his being. Ib.

Liberty of speech inviteth and provoketh liberty to be used again, and so bringeth much to a man's knowledge. Ib.

Another precept of this knowledge is, by all possible endeavour, to frame the mind to be pliant and obedient to occasion. Ib.

Nothing is more politic than to make the wheels of our mind concentric and voluble with the wheels of fortune. Ib.

Surely the continual habit of dissimulation is but a weak and sluggish cunning, and not greatly politic. Ib.

Fortunes . . . come tumbling into some men's laps. Ib.

That other principle of Lysander, "that children are to be deceived with comfits, and men with oaths." Ib.

It is in life, as it is in ways, the shortest way is commonly the foulest, and surely the fairer way is not much about. Ib.

Their discourses are as the stars, which give little light, because they are so high. Ib.

There are in nature certain fountains of justice, whence all civil laws are derived but as streams. Ib.

This writing seemeth to me . . . not much better than that noise or sound which musicians make while they are in tuning their instruments, which is nothing pleasant to hear, but yet is a cause why the music is sweeter afterwards. Ib.

The inseparable propriety of time,† which is ever more and more to disclose truth. Ib.

That ancient and patient request, "Verbera, sed audi." ("Strike, but hear"). Ib.

That which is imprinted upon the spirit of man by an inward instinct, according to the law of conscience, which is a sparkle of the purity of his first estate. Ib.

Those which have not sufficiently learned out of Solomon, that "the causeless curse shall not come." Ib.

* St. Austin. See Latin, "Poesis est," etc.

† "Inseparable propriety," i.e. invariable property.

Generally, music feedeth the disposition of spirit which it findeth.

Sylva Sylvarum. Century 2, 114.

A dry March and a dry May portend a wholesome summer, if there be a showering April between. 9, 807.

Their law of keeping out strangers is a law of pusillanimity and fear.

New Atlantis.

God's first creature, which was light. Ib.

The reverence of a man's self is, next religion, the chiefest bridle of all vices. Ib.
The mind is the man.

Mr. Bacon in praise of Knowledge.

A man is but what he knoweth. Ib.

Is it not knowledge that doth alone clear the mind of all perturbations? Ib.

Is truth ever barren? Ib.

The industry of artificers maketh some small improvement of things invented; and chance sometimes in experimenting maketh us to stumble upon somewhat which is new; but all the disputation of the learned never brought to light one effect of nature before unknown. Ib.

All this is but a web of the wit; it can work nothing. Ib.

They learn nothing there [at the universities of Europe] but to believe; first to believe that others know that which they know not; and after that themselves know that which they know not. Ib.

The sovereignty of man lieth hid in knowledge; wherein many things are reserved that kings with their treasure cannot buy, nor with their force command. Ib.

It is no less true in this human kingdom of knowledge, than in God's kingdom of heaven, that no man shall enter into it, "except he become first as a little child."

Valerius Terminus of the Interpretation of Nature. Chap. 1.

A religion that is jealous of the variety of learning, discourse, opinions, and sects, as misdoubting it may shake the foundations, or that cherisheth devotion upon simplicity and ignorance, as ascribing ordinary effects to the immediate working of God, is adverse to knowledge. Chap. 25.

Universities incline wits to sophistry and affectation. Chap. 26.

Envy, which is proud weakness, and deserveth to be despised.

Filum Labyrinthi.

In government change is suspected, though to the better. Ib.

What is truth, said jesting Pilate; and would not stay for an answer.*

Essays (First series and edition, 1597). 1. Of Truth.

One of the fathers, in great severity, called poesy, vinum dæmonum. Ib.

It is not the lie that passeth through the mind, but the lie that sinketh in, and setteth in it, that doth the hurt. Ib.

No pleasure is comparable to the standing upon the vantage ground of truth.† Ib.

It is heaven upon earth to have a man's mind move in charity, rest in providence, and turn upon the poles of truth. Ib.

Men fear death, as children fear to go in the dark. 2. Of Death.

It is as natural to die, as to be born. Ib.

Above all, believe it, the sweetest canticle is "Nunc dimittis," when a man hath obtained worthy ends and expectations. Death hath his also; that it openeth the gate to good fame, and extinguisheth envy. Ib.

All colours will agree in the dark.

3. Of Unity in Religion.

Revenge is a kind of wild justice.

4. Revenge.

A man that studieth revenge keeps his own wounds green. Ib.

Prosperity is the blessing of the Old Testament; adversity is the blessing of the New, which carrieth the greater benediction. 5. Of Adversity.

Virtue is like precious odours, most fragrant when they are incensed and crushed; for prosperity does best discover vice, but adversity doth best discover virtue. Ib.

It is good that a man's face gives his tongue leave to speak.

6. Of Simulation and Dissimulation.

Children sweeten labours; but they make misfortunes more bitter.

7. Of Parents and Children.

He that hath a wife and children, hath given hostages to fortune.

8. Of Marriage and Single Life.

* "Pilate asked, Quid est veritas? And then some other matter took him in the head, and so up he rose and went his way before he had his answer. He deserved never to find what truth was."—Bishop Andrews, sermon, Of the Resurrection, 1613.

† Paraphrase of Lucretius. See Latin, "Sed nil dulcius est," etc.

There are some other, that account wife and children but as bills of charges.

Essays. 8. Of Marriage and Single Life.

Wives are young men's mistresses; companions for middle-age; and old men's nurses. Ib.

He was reputed one of the wise men that made answer to the question, when a man should marry? "A young man not yet; an elder man not at all." Ib.

The speaking in perpetual hyperbole is comely in nothing but in love. 10. Of Love.

The arch-flatterer, with whom all the petty flatterers have intelligence, is a man's self. Ib.

Men in great place are thrice servants.

Essays (Edition of 1612).

11. Of Great Place.

It is a strange desire, to seek power, and to lose liberty. Ib.

By pains men come to greater pains; . . and by indignities men come to dignities. Ib.

Happy, as it were, by report. Ib.

Set it down to thyself, as well to create good precedents, as to follow them. Ib.

Ask counsel of both times; of the ancient time what is best; and of the latter time what is fittest. Ib.

Severity breedeth fear, but roughness breedeth hate. Even reproofs from authority ought to be grave, and not taunting. Ib.

As in nature things move violently to their place, and calmly in their place; so virtue in ambition is violent, in authority settled and calm. Ib.

He said it that knew it best.

12. Of Boldness.

There is in human nature, generally, more of the fool than of the wise. Ib.

In civil business, what first?—Boldness. What second and third?—Boldness. And yet boldness is a child of ignorance and baseness. Ib.

Boldness is an ill keeper of promise. Ib.

In charity there is no excess.

13. Of Goodness, and Goodness of Nature.

If a man be gracious and courteous to strangers, it shows he is a citizen of the world. Ib.

It is a reverend thing to see an ancient castle or building, not in decay.

14. Of Nobility.

New nobility is but the act of power, but ancient nobility is the act of time. Ib.

Nobility of birth commonly abateth industry. Ib.

The four pillars of government, . . . religion, justice, counsel, and treasure.

15. Of Seditions and Troubles.

The surest way to prevent seditions, if the times do bear it, is to take away the matter of them. Ib.

Whatsoever is somewhere gotten is somewhere lost. Ib.

Money is like muck, not good except it be spread. Ib.

The remedy is worse than the disease. Ib.

God never wrought miracle to convince atheism, because his ordinary works convince it. 16. Of Atheism.

A little philosophy inclineth man's mind to atheism; but depth in philosophy bringeth men's minds about to religion. Ib.

Atheism is rather in the lip than in the heart of man. Ib.

There is a superstition in avoiding superstition. 17. Of Superstition.

Let diaries therefore be brought in use.

18. Of Travel.

It is a miserable state of mind to have few things to desire, and many things to fear. 19. Of Empire.

Princes are like to heavenly bodies, which cause good or evil times; and which have much veneration, but no rest. Ib.

Books will speak plain, when counsellors blanch. 20. Of Counsel.

There is no secrecy comparable to celerity.

21. Of Delays.

There are some that can pack the cards, and yet cannot play well; so there are some that are good in canvasses and factions, that are otherwise weak men. 22. Of Cunning.

I knew one that when he wrote a letter, he would put that which was most material in the postscript, as if it had been a by-matter. Ib.

Nothing doth more hurt in a state, than that cunning men pass for wise. Ib.

Be so true to thyself, as thou be not false to others. 23. Of Wisdom for a Man's Self.

It is the nature of extreme self-lovers, as they will set a house on fire, and it were but to roast their eggs. Ib.

It is the wisdom of the crocodiles, that shed tears when they would devour. Ib.

He that will not apply new remedies, must expect new evils; for time is the greatest innovator. 24. Of Innovation.

It were good, therefore, that men in their innovations would follow the example of time itself, which indeed innovateth greatly, but quietly and by degrees scarce to be perceived. Ib.

I knew a wise man that had it for a by-word, when he saw men hasten to a conclusion, "Stay a little, that we may make an end the sooner."

Essays. 25. Of Despatch.

To choose time, is to save time. Ib.

The French are wiser than they seem, and the Spaniards seem wiser than they are.

26. Of Seeming Wise.

It had been hard for him that spake it to have put more truth and untruth together, in a few words, than in that speech: "Who-soever is delighted in solitude is either a wild beast, or a god." 27. Of Friendship.

A crowd is not company, and faces are but a gallery of pictures. Ib.

No receipt openeth the heart but a true friend. Ib.

It redoubleth joys and cutteth griefs in halves. Ib.

When all is done, the help of good counsel is that which setteth business straight. Ib.

Cure the disease, and kill the patient. Ib.

Riches are for spending. 28. Of Expense.

A man ought warily to begin charges, which once begun will continue. Ib.

Neither is money the sinews of war, as it is trivially said. Ib.

No people overcharged with tribute is fit for empire. Ib.

Thus much is certain; that he that commands the sea is at great liberty, and may take as much and as little of the war as he will. Ib.

Age will not be defied.

30. Of Regiment of Health.

Suspensions, amongst thoughts, are like bats amongst birds, they ever fly by twilight.

31. Of Suspicion.

There is nothing makes a man suspect much, more than to know little. Ib.

Intermingle . . . jest with earnest.

32. Of Discourse.

He that hath a satirical vein, as he maketh others afraid of his wit, so he had need be afraid of others' memory. Ib.

Discretion of speech is more than eloquence. Ib.

Be not penny-wise; riches have wings, and sometimes they fly away of themselves, sometimes they must be set flying to bring in more. * 34. Of Riches.

[Dreams and predictions] ought to serve but for winter talk by the fireside.

35. Of Prophecies.

He that plots to be the only figure among ciphers, is the decay of a whole age.

36. Of Ambition.

Nature is often hidden, sometimes overcome, seldom extinguished.

38. Of Nature in Men.

A man's nature runs either to herbs or weeds. Ib.

They come home to men's business and bosoms.

Essays (Edition of 1625). Preface.

A man that is young in years may be old in hours, if he have lost no time.

42. Of Youth and Age.

Men of age object too much, consult too long, adventure too little, repent too soon. Ib.

Beauty is as summer fruits, which are easy to corrupt, and cannot last.

43. Of Beauty.

Houses are built to live in, and not to look on.

45. Of Building.

God Almighty first planted a garden: and indeed it is the purest of human pleasures.

46. Of Gardens.

It is generally better to deal by speech, than by letter.

47. Of Negotiating.

Costly followers are not to be liked; lest while a man maketh his train longer, he make his wings shorter.

48. Of Followers and Friends.

There is little friendship in the world, and least of all between equals. Ib.

Studies serve for delight, for ornament, and for ability.

50. Of Studies.

To spend too much time in studies is sloth. Ib.

Natural abilities are like natural plants, that need pruning by study. Ib.

Read not to contradict and confute; nor to believe and take for granted; nor to find talk and discourse: but to weigh and consider. Ib.

Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested. Ib.

Reading maketh a full man; conference a ready man; and writing an exact man. Ib.

Histories make men wise; poets, witty; the mathematics, subtle; natural philosophy, deep; moral, grave; logic and rhetoric, able to contend. Ib.

Light gains make heavy purses.

52. Of Ceremonies and Respects.

Small matters win great commendation. Ib.

A wise man will make more opportunities than he finds. Ib.

He that is too much in anything, so that he giveth another occasion of satiety, maketh himself cheap.

Essays. 52. Of Ceremonies and Respects.

Fame is like a river, that beareth up things light and swoln, and drowns things weighty and solid. Id.

The arch-flatterer, which is a man's self. Id. [See No. 10 (1597 ed.).]

It was prettily devised of Æsop: The fly sat upon the axle-tree of the chariot-wheel, and said, What a dust do I raise!

54. Of Vain-Glory.

The place of justice is a hallowed place.

56. Of Judicature.

The true religion is built upon the rock; the rest are tossed upon the waves of time.

58. Of Vicissitude of Things.

He is the fountain of honour. Of a King.

They serve to be recited upon occasion of themselves. They serve if you take out the kernel of them, and make them your own.

A Proposal for Amending the Laws of England.

Vix enim datur, auctores simul et admirari, et superare. (It is scarcely permitted for authors to be admired and at the same time to excel.)

Instauratio Magna. De Augmentis Scientiarum.*
Prefatio. De Statu Scientiarum.

Gloria et honor, virtuti, pro stimulis et calcaribus, subserviunt. (Glory and honour serve as goads and spurs to virtue.)

Part 1. Lib. 6, cap. 3, Soph. 10.

* "De Augmentis Scientiarum," an enlarged version, in Latin, of "The Advancement of Learning." Quotations already given from this book are not here repeated, though, for the most part, the passages extracted re-appear, in Latin, in the "De Augmentis Scientiarum."

Deformes naturam ulcisci solent. (Deformed persons are wont to avenge themselves on nature.) Part 1. Lib. 6, cap. 3.
Exempla Antithetorum. 2 Forma.

Virtus, ut gemma nobilis, melius inseritur sine multo auro et ornatu. (Virtue, as a transcendent gem, is better set without much gold and ornament.) Ib.

Senes omnia metuunt, præter Deos. (Old men fear all things, except the gods.)
3. Juventus.

Corpus sanum, hospes animæ est; ægrum, ergastularius. (A healthy body is the guest [chamber] of the soul; a sick, its prison.)
4. Valeitudo.

Divitiæ bona ancilla, pessima domina. (Wealth is a good servant, a very bad mistress.) 6. Divitiæ.

Vox populi habet aliquid divinum: nam quomodo aliter tot capita in unum conspirare possint? (The voice of the people has about it something divine: for how otherwise can so many heads agree together as one?)
9. Laus, Existimatio.

Ne mireris si vulgus verius loquatur, quam honoratior; quia etiam tutius loquitur. (Do not wonder if the common people speak more truly than those of higher rank; for they speak with more safety.) Ib.

Cogitamus secundum naturam; loquimur secundum præcepta; sed agimus secundum consuetudinem. (We think according to nature; we speak according to rules; but we act according to custom.) 10. Natura.

Stultitia unius, fortuna alterius. (One man's folly is another man's fortune.)
11. Fortuna.

Præstat nullam habere de diis opinionem, quam contumeliosam. (It is better to have no belief in the gods than a dishonouring belief.) 13. Superstitio.

Magni hypocritæ sunt veri atheistæ. (Great hypocrites are the real atheists.) Ib.

Invidia festos dies non habet. (Envy has no holidays.) 16. Invidia.

Qui misericordiam inimico impertit, sibi denegat. (Who shows mercy to an enemy deprives himself of it.) 18. Crudelitas.

Justitiæ debetur, quod homo homini sit Deus, non lupo. (It is due to justice that man shall be a God to man, and not a wolf.)
20. Justitia.

Nil terribile nisi ipse timor. (Nothing is terrible except fear itself.) 21. Fortitudo.

Basis virtutum constantia. (Constancy is the foundation of virtues.)

23. Constantia.

Lectio est conversatio cum prudentibus ; actio fere cum stultis. (Reading is converse with the wise ; action generally with fools.)

26. Literæ.

Sapere ex regula et experientia, plane contrariæ rationes sunt ; ut qui alteri assuefactus sit, ad alterum sit ineptus. (To be wise by rule and by experience are utterly opposite principles ; so that he who is used to the one is unfit for the other.)

16.

Opportuna prudentia non est, quæ celeris non est. (Prudence is of no service unless it be prompt.)

27. Promptitudo.

Qui cito errat, cito errorem emendat. (He who errs quickly is quick in correcting the error.)

16.

Colere populum est coli. (To worship the people is to be worshipped.)

30. Popularitas.

Nil moderatum vulgo gratum est. (Nothing moderate is pleasing to the crowd.)

16.

Silentium stultorum virtus : itaque recte ille silenti : Si prudens es, stultus es ; si stultus, prudens. (Silence is the virtue of fools : so he rightly said to the silent man : "If you are wise, you are a fool ; if you are a fool, you are wise.")

31. Loquacitas.

Dissimulatio dissimulationem invitat. (Dissimulation invites dissimulation.)

32. Dissimulatio.

Quod actio oratori, id audacia viro civili ; primum, secundum, tertium. (What action is to the orator, that is boldness to the public man ; first, second, third.)

33. Audacia.

Pessima solitudo, non veras habere amicitias. (The worst solitude is to have no true friendships.)

37. Amicitia.

Vindicta privata, justitia agrestis. (Private revenge is wild justice.)

39. Vindicta.

Non jam leve est periculum, si leve videatur. (If the danger seems slight, then truly it is not slight.)

43. Principiis Obstare.

Suspicio fidem absolvit. (Suspicion absolves faith.)

45. Suspicio.

Suspicionum intemperies est mania quædam civilis. (Superabundance of suspicion is a kind of political madness.)

Books are men of higher stature.
And the only men that speak aloud for future times to hear.

Lady Geraldine's Courtship.

My life is read all backward, and the charm of life undone. Ib.

And the large musing eyes, neither joyous nor sorry,
Sing on like the angels, in separate glory,
Between clouds of amber.

Lay of the Brown Rosary.

Of all the thoughts of God that are Borne inward into souls afar,
Along the Psalmist's music deep,
Now tell me if that any is,
For gift or grace surpassing this,—
"He giveth His beloved, sleep?"

The Sleep.

A little faith all undisproved. Ib.

O earth, so full of dreary noises!
O men, with wailing in your voices!
O dely'd gold, the wailers heap!
O strife, O curse, that o'er it fall!
God strikes a silence through you all,
And giveth His beloved, sleep. Ib.

Let One, most loving of you all,
Say, "Not a tear must o'er her fall!
He giveth His beloved, sleep." Ib.

Do you hear the children weeping, O my brothers,
Ere the sorrow comes with years?

The Cry of the Children.

But the young, young children, O my brothers,

They are weeping bitterly!
They are weeping in the playtime of the others,

In the country of the free. Ib.

I am sad-voiced as the turtle
Which Anacreon used to feed.

Wine of Cyprus.

And the rolling anapæstic
Curled like a vapour over shrines. Ib.

Knowledge by suffering entereth,
And life is perfected in death.

Vision of Poets.

Life treads on life, and heart on heart,
We press too close, in church and mart,
To keep a dream or grave apart.

Ib. (Conclusion).

God himself is the best Poet,
And the Real is His song.

The Dead Fan.

God's gifts put man's best dreams to shame. Sonnets from the Portuguese. 26.

Two human loves make one divine.

Isobel's Child.

ROBERT BROWNING (1812-1889).

The past is in its grave,
Though its ghost haunts us. Pauline.

And many a thought did I build up on thought,
As the wild bee hangs cell to cell. Ib.

Truth is within ourselves: it takes no rise
From outward things, whate'er you may believe.

There is an inmost centre in us all,
Where truth abides in fulness.

Paracelsus. Part 1.

Are there not, dear Michal
Two points in the adventure of the diver,
One,—when, a beggar, he prepares to plunge?

One,—when, a prince, he rises with his pearl?

Festus, I plunge. Part 2.

God is the perfect poet,
Who in His person acts His own creation. Ib.

'Tis only when they spring to Heaven that angels

Reveal themselves to you. Part 5.

Progress is
The law of life; man is not man as yet. Ib.

The great beacon-light God sets in all,
The conscience of each bosom.

Strafford. Act 4, 2.

Who will may hear Sordello's story told. Sordello. Book 1.

Would you have your songs endure?
Build on the human heart! Book 2.

Youth once gone is gone:
Deeds, let escape, are never to be done. Book 3.

Only, do finish something! Ib.

God's in His heaven—
All's right with the world!

Pippa Passes. Part 1.

All service ranks the same with God—
With God, whose puppets, best and worst,
Are we: there is no last nor first. Part 4.

Lovers grow cold, men learn to hate their wives,

And only parents' love can last our lives. Ib.

For what are the voices of birds,
Ay, and of beasts—but words, our words,
Only so much more sweet? Ib.

Ever with the best desert goes diffidence.
A Blot in the 'Scutcheon. Act 1, 2.

Luitolfo was the proper Friend-making, everywhere friend-finding soul,
 Fit for the sunshine, so, it followed him.
 A happy-tempered bringer of the best
 Out of the worst.

A Soul's Tragedy. Act 1.

See how your words come from you in a crowd! Ib.
 Love like mine must have return. Ib.
 Now I'll say something to remember. Ib.

Born slaves, bred slaves,
 Branded in the blood and bone slaves. Ib.
 There is truth in falsehood, falsehood in truth. Act 2.

I judge people by what they might be—not are, nor will be. Ib.

Man seeks his own good at the whole world's cost. Luria. Act 1.

Brute-force shall not rule Florence! Intellect
 May rule her, bad or good as chance supplies,—
 But intellect it shall be! Ib.

Our wearisome pedantic art of war,
 By which we prove retreat may be success,
 Delay best speed, half loss, at times, whole gain. Ib.

But a bird's weight can break the infant tree
 Which after holds an aery in its arms. Act 4.

Oppression makes the wise man mad. Ib.
 That such a cloud should break, such trouble
 be,

Ere a man settle, soul and body, down
 Into his true place and take rest for ever. Act 5.

No animal revenge
 No brute-like punishment of bad by worse. Ib.

A people is but the attempt of many
 To rise to the completer life of one;
 And those who live as models for the mass
 Are singly of more value than they all. Ib.

A certain squalid knot of alleys
 Where the town's bad blood once slept corruptly. Christmas Eve. Canto 1.

The many-tattered,
 Little, old-faced, peaking, sister-turned-mother. Canto. 2.

You are the men, and wisdom shall die with
 you,
 And none of the old Seven Churches vie with you. Ib.

The pig-of-lead-like pressure
 Of the preaching man's immense stupidity. Canto 3.

Not improved by the private dog's-ears and creases. Ib.

In the natural fog of the good man's mind.
Canto 4.

A tune was born in my head last week
 Out of the thump-thump and shriek-shriek
 Of the train, as I came by it, up from Manchester;

And when next week, I take it back again
 My head will sing to the engine's clack again. Ib.

'Tis the taught already that profits by teaching. Ib.

He was there.
 He himself with his human hair. Canto 8.

Our best is bad, nor bears Thy test
 Still, it should be our very best. Ib.

And because my heart I proffered,
 With true love trembling at the brim,
 He suffers me to follow him. Canto 9.

Earth breaks up, time drops away,
 In flows heaven with its new day. Canto 10.

Though Rome's gross yoke
 Drops off, no more to be endured,
 Her teaching is not so obscured
 By errors and perversities
 That no truth shines athwart the lies. Canto 11.

Till, from its summit,
 Judgment drops her damning plummet,
 Pronouncing such a fatal space
 Departed from the founder's base. Ib.

Love shut our eyes, and all seemed right.
 True, the world's eyes are open now:

—Less need for me to disallow
 Some few that keep Love's zone unbuckled,
 Peevish as ever to be suckled,
 Lulled by the same old baby-prattle,
 With intermixture of the rattle. Ib.

The hawk-nosed, high-cheek-boned Professor. Canto 14.

The sallow, virgin-minded, studious
 Martyr to mild enthusiasms. Ib.

Some thrilling view of the surplice question. Ib.

A Man!—a right true man, however,
 Whose work was worthy a man's endeavour. Canto 15.

The exhausted air-bell of the Critic.
Canto 16.

As I declare our Poet, him
 Whose insight makes all others dim:
 A thousand poets pried at life,
 And only one amid the strife
 Rose to be Shakespeare. Ib.

That gift of his, from God, descended.
 Ah! friend, what gift of man's does not? Ib.

This man, continue to adore him,
 Rather than all who went before him,
 And all who ever followed after. Canto 18.

So sat I talking with my mind. Ib.
 A mild indifferentism. Canto 19.

Where I may see saint, savage, sage,
Fuse their respective creeds in one,
Before the general Father's throne.
Christmas Eve. Canto 19

The raree-show of Peter's successor.
Canto 22.

First, the preacher speaks through his nose :
Second, his gesture is too emphatic :
Thirdly, to waive what's pedagogic,
The subject matter itself lacks logic :
Fourthly, the English is ungrammatical. Ib.

And now that I know the very worst of him,
What was it I thought to obtain at first of him ? Ib.

For the preacher's merit or demerit,
It were to be wished that the flaws were fewer
In the earthen vessel, holding treasure,
But the main thing is, does it hold good measure ?

Heaven soon sets right all other matters ! Ib.
I praise the heart, and pity the head of him,
And refer myself to Thee, instead of him. Ib.

'Tis well averred,
A scientific faith's absurd.
Easter Day. Canto 6.

We shall start up, at last awake
From Life, that insane dream we take
For waking now, because it seems.
Canto 14.

Let me not know that all is lost,
Though lost it be—leave me not tied
To this despair, this corpse-like bride.
Canto 31.

It was roses, roses all the way.
The Patriot.

When is a man strong, until he feels alone ?

When a man's busy, why, leisure
Strikes him as wonderful pleasure ;
'Faith, and at leisure once is he ?
Straightway he wants to be busy.

The Glove.
With, worse than fever throbs and shoots,
The creaking of his clumsy boots.

Time's Revenges.
Nor brighter was his eye, nor moister
Than a too-long opened oyster.

The Pied Piper. Canto 4.
A plate of turtle green and glutinous. Ib.

Anything like the sound of a rat
Makes my heart go pit-a-pat ! Ib.

In did come the strangest figure. Canto 5.
Such sweet

Soft notes as yet musician's cunning
Never gave the enraptured air. Canto 12.

If we've promised them aught, let us keep our promise. Canto 15.

More fault of those who had the hammering
Of prosody into me, and syntax,
And did it, not with hobnails but tacks !
The Flight of the Duchess. Canto 15.

You're my friend—
What a thing friendship is, world without end ! Canto 17.

Stark-naked thought is in request enough.
"Transcendentalism."

His very serviceable suit of black
Was courtly once, and conscientious still.
How it strikes a Contemporary.

He took such cognisance of men and things. Ib.

We had among us, not so much a spy,
As a recording chief-inquisitor,
The town's true master, if the town but knew !

We merely kept a governor for form. Ib.
Ten, struck the church clock, straight to bed went he. Ib.

Folded his two hands and let them talk,
Watching the flies that buzzed. And yet no fool. An Epistle.

For admonition from the hunger-pinch.

Fra Lippo Lippi.

If you get simple beauty, and nought else,
You get about the best thing God invents.

Ib.

You should not take a fellow eight years old
And make him swear to never kiss the girls.

Ib.

This world's no blot for us,
Nor blank; it means intensely, and means good:

To find its meaning is my meat and drink.

Ib.

Why the man's mad, friend, take his light away.

Ib.

The aim, if reached or not, makes great the life;

Try to be Shakespeare, leave the rest to fate!

Ib.

Geology, ethnology, what not?—
(Greek endings, each the little passing bell
That signifies some faith's about to die.)
And set you square with Genesis again.

Ib.

Worldly in this world,
I take and like its way of life.

Ib.

Men are not angels, neither are they brutes:
Something we may see, all we cannot see.

Ib.

He said true things, but called them by wrong names.

Ib.

Dante, who loved well because he hated,
Hated wickedness that hinders loving.

One Word More.

Does he paint? he fain would write a poem,—

Does he write? he fain would paint a picture.

Ib.

Other heights in other lives, God willing:
All the gifts from all the heights, your own, love!

Ib.

Curving on a sky imbrued with colour,
Drifted over Fiesole by twilight;
Came she, our new crescent of a hair's-breadth.

Full she flared it, lamping Samminiato.
Rouder 'twixt the cypresses and rounder,
Perfect till the nightingales applauded.

Mr. Sludge, "The Medium."

One does see somewhat when one shuts one's eyes.

Ib.

If such as came for wool, sir, went home shorn,

Where is the wrong I did them?

Ib.

It's just the proper way to baulk
These troublesome fellows—liars, one and all,

Are not these sceptics? Well, to baffle them,

No use in being squeamish: lie yourself.

Ib.

There's a real love of a lie,

Liars find ready made for lies they make.

Ib.

To suppose one cheat
Can gull all these, were more miraculous far
Than aught we should confess a miracle.

wrong would triumph,
Held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better, sleep to wake.

Asolando. Epilogue.

MICHAEL BRUCE (1746-1767).

Sweet bird! thy bower is ever green,
 Thy sky is ever clear;
 Thou hast no sorrow in thy song,
 No winter in thy year.

W. CULLEN BRYANT (1794-1878).

Truth, crushed to earth, shall rise again:
 The eternal years of God are hers;
 But Error, wounded, writhes with pain,
 And dies among his worshippers.

The Battlefield. St. 9.

Another hand thy sword shall wield,
 Another hand the standard wave,
 Till from the trumpet's mouth is pealed
 The blast of triumph o'er thy grave.

 Forest Hymn.

The melancholy days are come,
 The saddest of the year,
 Of wailing winds, and naked woods,
 And meadows brown and sere.

The Death of the Flowers.

The south wind searches for the flowers
 Whose fragrance late he bore,
 And sighs to find them in the wood
 And by the stream no more. lb.

Loveliest of lovely things are they,
 On earth that soonest pass away.
 The rose that lives its little hour
 Is prized beyond the sculptured flower.

Observations on a Publication, "The Present State of the Nation."

There is, however, a limit at which forbearance ceases to be a virtue. Ib.

Well stored with pious frauds, and, like most discourses of the sort, much better calculated for the private advantage of the preacher than the edification of the hearers. Ib.

A commonplace against war; the easiest of all topics. Ib.

The same sun which gilds all nature, and exhilarates the whole creation, does not shine upon disappointed ambition. Ib.

It is a general popular error to suppose the loudest complainers for the public to be the most anxious for its welfare. Ib.

To complain of the age we live in, to murmur at the present possessors of power, to lament the past, to conceive extravagant hopes of the future, are the common dispositions of the greatest part of mankind.

Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents.

When bad men combine, the good must associate. Ib.

Of this stamp is the cant of "Not men but measures"; a sort of charm by which many people get loose from every honourable engagement. Ib.

I remember an old scholastic aphorism, which says, "that the man who lives wholly detached from others must be either an angel or a devil." When I see in any of these detached gentlemen of our times the angelic purity, power, and beneficence, I shall admit them to be angels. Ib.

Passion for fame; a passion which is the instinct of all great souls. Ib.

An illness (not, as was then given out, a political), but to my knowledge a very real illness. Ib.

To tax and to please, no more than to love and to be wise, is not given to men. Ib.

I have in general no very exalted opinion of the virtue of paper government.

Speech on Conciliation with America.

(March 22, 1775.)

Refined policy ever has been the parent of confusion; and ever will be so, as long as the world endures. Ib.

The concessions of the weak are the concessions of fear. Ib.

Through a wise and salutary neglect [of the colonies], a generous nature has been suffered to take her own way to perfection; when I reflect upon these effects, when I see how profitable they have been to us, I feel all the pride of power sink, and all presumption in the wisdom of human contrivances melt and die away within me. My rigour relents. I pardon something to the spirit of liberty. Ib.

Abstract liberty, like other mere abstractions, is not to be found. Ib.

All Protestantism, even the most cold and passive, is a sort of dissent. But the religion most prevalent in our northern colonies is a refinement on the principle of resistance; it is the dissidence of dissent, and the Protestantism of the Protestant religion. Ib.

Obedience is what makes government, and not the names by which it is called. Ib.

The mysterious virtue of wax and parchment. Ib.

The march of the human mind is slow. Ib.

All government, indeed every human benefit and enjoyment, every virtue, and every prudent act, is founded on compromise and barter. Ib.

Slavery they can have anywhere. It is a weed that grows in every soil. Ib.

Magnanimity in politics is not seldom the truest wisdom; and a great empire and little minds go ill together. Ib.

I know many have been taught to think, that moderation, in a case like this, is a sort of treason.

Letter to the Sheriffs of Bristol.

Between craft and credulity, the voice of reason is stifled. Ib.

If any ask me what a free government is, I answer, that, for any practical purpose, it is what the people think so. Ib.

Liberty, too, must be limited in order to be possessed. Ib.

Nothing in progression can rest on its original plan. We might as well think of rocking a grown man in the cradle of an infant. Ib.

Among a people generally corrupt, liberty cannot long exist. Ib.

England and Ireland may flourish together. The world is large enough for us both. Let it be our care not to make ourselves too little for it.

Letter to Samuel Span, Esq., of Bristol.

It is the interest of the commercial world that wealth should be found everywhere. Ib.

Corrupt influence, which is in itself the perennial spring of all prodigality, and of all disorder; which loads us, more than millions of debt; which takes away vigour from our arms, wisdom from our councils, and every shadow of authority and credit from the most venerable parts of our constitution.

Speech on the Economical Reform.

(House of Commons, Feb. 11, 1780.)

They defend their errors as if they were defending their inheritance. Ib.

Gaming is a principle inherent in human nature. It belongs to us all. Ib.

Individuals pass like shadows; but the commonwealth is fixed and stable. Ib.

As wealth is power, so all power will infallibly draw wealth to itself by some means or other. Ib.

Kings are naturally lovers of low company.
Speech on the Economical Reform.
(House of Commons, Feb. 11, 1780.)

Those things which are not practicable are not desirable. Ib.

The people are the masters. Ib.

Not a weathercock on the top of the edifice, exalted for my levity and versatility, and of no use but to indicate the shiftings of every fashionable gale.

Speech at Bristol (1780).

Whilst freedom is true to itself, everything becomes subject to it. Ib.

Bad laws are the worst sort of tyranny. Ib.

In doing good, we are generally cold, and languid, and sluggish; and of all things afraid of being too much in the right. But the works of malice and injustice are quite in another style. They are finished with a bold, masterly hand. Ib.

This Siren song of ambition. Ib.

(House of Commons, Dec. 1, 1783.)

Flattery corrupts both the receiver and giver; and adulation is not of more service to the people than to kings.

Reflections on the Revolution in France.

Politics and the pulpit are terms that have little agreement. No sound ought to be heard in the church but the healing voice of Christian charity. Ib.

Surely the church is a place where one day's truce ought to be allowed to the dissensions and animosities of mankind. Ib.

It is not pleasant as compliment; it is not wholesome as instruction. Ib.

People will not look forward to posterity, who never look backward to their ancestors. Ib.

Government is a contrivance of human wisdom to provide for human wants. Men have a right that these wants should be provided for by this wisdom. Ib.

But the age of chivalry is gone. That of sophisters, economists, and calculators, has succeeded; and the glory of Europe is extinguished for ever. Ib.

It is gone, that sensibility of principle, that chastity of honour, which felt a stain like a wound. Ib.

Vice itself lost half its evil, by losing all its grossness. Ib.

Kings will be tyrants from policy, when subjects are rebels from principle. Ib.

Learning will be cast into the mire, and trodden down under the hoofs of a swinish multitude. Ib.

Because half a dozen grasshoppers under a fern make the field ring with their importunate chink, whilst thousands of great cattle, reposed beneath the shadow of the British oak, chew the cud and are silent, pray do not imagine that those who make the noise are the only inhabitants of the field; that, of course, they are many in number; or that, after all, they are other than the little, shrivelled, meagre, hopping, though loud and troublesome insects of the hour. Ib.

That nought is perfect here below;
But bliss still bordering upon woe.

Verses to my Bed.

Where sits our sulky, sullen dame,
Gathering her brows like gathering storm,
Nursing her wrath to keep it warm.

Tam o' Shanter.

Ah, gentle dames! it gars me greet
To think how many counsels sweet,
How many lengthened, sage advices
The husband frae the wife despises! Ib.

His ancient, trusty, drouthy crony!
Tam lo'ed him like a vera brither—
They had been fou for weeks thegither!

The landlady and Tam grew gracious,
Wi' favours secret, sweet, and precious;
The Souter told his queerest stories,
The landlord's laugh was ready chorus! Ib.

Kings may be blest, but Tam was glorious,
O'er a' the ills o' life victorious! Ib.

But pleasures are like poppies spread!
You seize the flower, its bloom is shed!
Or like the snowfall in the river,
A moment white—then melts for ever Ib.
That hour, o' night's black arch the key-

Is that ayont the grave, man.

The Tree of Liberty.

And ne'er misfortune's eastern blast
Did nip a fairer flower. To Chloris.

It's hardly in a body's power
To keep at times frae being sour,
To see how things are shared;
How best o' chiefs are whiles in want,
While coofs on countless thousands rant,
And ken na how to wair't.†

Epistle to Davie.

Yet nature's charms—the hills and woods—
The sweeping vales and foaming floods—
Are free alike to all Ib.

Then let us cheerfu' acquiesce,
Nor make our scanty pleasures less,
By pining at our state. Ib.

I am nae poet, in a sense,
But just a rhymmer, like by chance,
And hae to learning no pretence,
But what's the matter?

Epistle to John Lapraik.

Gie me ae spark o' Nature's fire!
That's a' the learning I desire;
Then, though I trudge through dub‡ an'

At plough or cart,
My Muse, though hamely in attire,
May touch the heart. Ib.

For thus the royal mandate ran,
When first the human race began,
"The social, friendly, honest man,
Whate'er he be,
"Tis he fulfils great Nature's plan,
And none but he!"

Second Epistle to Lapraik.

O Nature! a' thy shows and forms
To feeling, pensive hearts hae charms!
Whether the summer kindly warms
Wi' life and light,
Or winter howls, in gusty storms,
The lang dark night!

Auld Nature swears the lovely dears
Her noblest work she classes, O;
Her prentice hand she tried on man,
And then she made the lasses, O.† Ib.

* The "Selkirk Grace," though generally attributed to Burns, is a version of an older anonymous rhyme. In the MSS. of Dr. Plume, of Maldon, Essex, in a handwriting of about 1650, it appears thus:

Some have meat but cannot eat;
Some could eat but have no meat;
We have meat and can all eat;
Blest, therefore, be God for our meat.

SAMUEL BUTLER (1612–1680).

When civil dudgeon first grew high,
 And men fell out they knew not why.
Hudibras. Part 1, canto 1.

And pulpit, drum ecclesiastic,
 Was beat with fist instead of a stick. Ib.

Great on the bench, great in the saddle. Ib.

Which made some take him for a tool
 That knaves do work with, called a Fool. Ib.

We grant although he had much wit
 He was very shy of using it. Ib.

Besides, 'tis known he could speak Greek
 As naturally as pigs squeak. Ib.

* A note states that this is from "Pybrac in his Quadriant 37."

† Tr. of "Pervigilium Veneris," an ancient poem of unknown authorship.

‡ Tr. of lines "Inveni portum," &c., ascribed by Burton to Prudentius. He adds that they are on the tomb of a Christian soldier, Fr. Puccius the Florentine, in Rome.

§ Tr. of Euripides

He could distinguish, and divide
 A hair 'twixt south and south-west side ;
 On either which he would dispute,
 Confute, change hands, and still confute.
Hudibras. Part 1, canto 1.

He'd run in debt by disputation,
 And pay by ratiocination. lb.

For rhetoric he could not ope
 His mouth but out there flew a trope. lb.

A Babylonish dialect
 Which learned pedants much affect. lb.

For he by geometric scale
 Could take the size of pots of ale,
 And wisely tell what hour o' th' day
 The clock does strike by algebra. lb.

For every why he had a wherefore. lb.

He knew what's what, and that's as high
 As metaphysic wit can fly. lb.

Honour is like a widow, won
 With brisk attempt and putting on. lb.

Such as take lodgings in a head
 That's to be let unfurnished. lb.

Such as do build their faith upon
 The holy text of pike and gun. lb.

And still be doing, never done ;
 As if Religion were intended lb.

For nothing else but to be mended. lb.

Compound for sins they are inclined to
 By damning those they have no mind to. lb.

As if hypocrisy and nonsense
 Had got th' advowson of his conscience. lb.

The trenchant blade, Toledo trusty,
 For want of fighting was grown rusty,
 And ate into itself for lack lb.

Of somebody to hew and hack. lb.

For rhyme the rudder is of verses,

A deep occult philosopher. lb.

A controversy that affords
 Actions for arguments, not words. lb.

Success, the mark no mortal wit,
 Or surest hand, can always hit. lb.

So justice, while she winks at crimes,
 Stumbles on innocence sometimes. Canto 2.

A skilful leech is better far
 Than half a hundred men of war. lb.

Ay me ! what perils do environ
 The man that meddles with cold iron. Canto 3.

Nor do I know what is become
 Of him, more than the Pope of Rome. lb.

She had a thousand jadis tricks,
 Worse than a mule that flings and kicks. lb.

'Twas a strange riddle of a lady. lb.

Valour's a mouse-trap, wit a gin,
 Which women oft are taken in. lb.

Fear is an ague, that forsakes
 And haunts, by fits, those whom it takes. lb.

In all the trade of war no feat
 Is nobler than a brave retreat :
 For those that run away and fly
 Take place at least o' the enemy. lb.

And, though thou'rt of a different church,
 I will not leave thee in the lurch. lb.

He that is down can fall no lower.* lb.

Quoth she, I told thee what would come
 Of all thy vapouring, base scum. lb.

He that is valiant and dares fight
 Though drubbed, can lose no honour by't. lb.

For truth is precious and divine,
 Too rich a pearl for carnal swine. lb.

Quoth Ralph, How great I do not know
 We may by being beaten grow ;
 But none that see how here we sit
 Will judge us overgrown with wit. lb.

Synods are mystical Bear-gardens. lb.

Cleric before and Lay behind ;
 A lawless linsey-woolsey brother,
 Half of one order, half another. lb.

A sheep without, a wolf within. lb.

Learning, that cobweb of the brain,
 Profane, erroneous, and vain. lb.

But those that write in verse still make
 The one verse for the other's sake. lb.

Part 2, canto 1.

Such great achievements cannot fail
 To cast salt on a woman's tail. lb.

Fools for arguments use wagers. lb.

The fairest mark is easiest hit. lb.

I cannot love where I'm beloved.
 Love is a boy, by poets styled ;
 Then spare the rod, and spoil the child. lb.

For what is worth in anything
 But so much money as 'twill bring ? lb.

And, like a lobster boiled, the morn
 From black to red began to turn. Canto 2.

Which (were there nothing to forbid it)
 Is impious, because they did it. lb.

Oaths are but words, and words but wind. lb.

For breaking of an oath and lying,
 Is but a kind of self-denying,
 A saint-like virtue ; and from hence
 Some have broke oaths by Providence. lb.

Quoth Ralpho, Honour's but a word
 To swear by only in a Lord. lb.

Quoth he, That man is sure to lose
 That fouls his hands with dirty foes ;
 For where no honour's to be gained
 'Tis thrown away in being maintained. lb.

* See Bunyan : " He that is down needs fear no fall."

Doubtless the pleasure is as great
Of being cheated, as to cheat;
As lookers-on feel most delight
That least perceive a juggler's sleight,
And still the less they understand,
The more they admire his sleight of hand.

Hudibras. Part 2, Canto 3.

Quoth he, In all my past adventures
I ne'er was set so on the tenters. Ib.
'Twas a most notorious flam. Ib.

There's but the twinkling of a star
Between a man of peace and war. Ib.

Madam, I do, as is my duty,
Honour the shadow of your shoe-tie.

Part 3, canto 1.

For still the longer we contend
We are but further off the end. Ib.
Still amorous, and fond, and billing,
Like Philip and Mary on a shilling. Ib.

For 'tis in vain to think or guess
At women by appearances. Ib.

Women, you know, do seldom fail
To make the stoutest men turn tail. Ib.

What makes all doctrines plain and clear?—
About two hundred pounds a year. Ib.

Nick Machiavel had ne'er a trick
Though he gave his name to our old Nick). Ib.

Discords make the sweetest airs.* Ib.
Night is the sabbath of mankind,
To rest the body and the mind. Ib.

So those who play a game of state,
And only cavil in debate,
Although there's nothing lost nor won,
The public business is undone. Canto 2.

True as the dial to the sun,
Although it be not shined upon. Ib.

The quacks of government (who sate
At th' unregarded helm of State). Ib.

And obstinacy's ne'er so stiff
As when 'tis in a wrong belief. Ib.

That neither have the hearts to stay,
Nor wit enough to run away. Ib.

Our last and best defence, despair;
Despair, by which the gallantest feats
Have been achieved in greatest straits. Ib.

For Zeal's a dreadful termagant,
That teaches Saints to tear and rant. Ib.

For if it be but half-denied,
'Tis half as good as justified. Ib.

The world is naturally averse
To all the truth it sees or hears,
But swallows nonsense, and a lie
With greediness and gluttony. Ib.

All countries are a wise man's home,
And so are governments to some. Ib.

For True and Faithful's sure to lose
Which way soever the game goes. Ib.

For those that fly may fight again,
Which he can never do that's slain. Canto 3.

He that complies against his will,
Is of his own opinion still. Ib.

For Justice, though she's painted blind,
Is to the weaker side inclined. Ib.

And Sleep, Death's brother, yet a friend to life,

Gave wearied Nature a restorative.
Repartees between Cat and Puss.

For he that writ this play is dead long since,

And not within their power; for bears are said

To spare those that lie still and seem but dead. Prologue to the Queen of Aragon.

Yet as no barbarousness beside
Is half so barbarous as pride.

Satire on the Weakness of Man.
Our pains are real things, but all
Our pleasures but fantastical. Ib.

For things said false, and never meant,
Do oft prove true by accident. Ib.

So men, who one extravagance would shun,
Into the contrary extreme have run.

Satire on Age of Charles II.
Affects all books of past and modern ages,
But reads no further than their title-pages.

Satire—Human Learning.
Man has a natural desire to know,
But th' one half is for interest, th' other show. Ib., 151.

There's nothing so absurd, or vain,
Or barbarous, or inhumane,
But if it lay the least pretence
To piety and godliness,
Or tender-hearted conscience,
And zeal for gospel-truths profess,
Does sacred instantly commence.

On a Hypocritical Nonconformist.
For trouts are tickled best in muddy water. Ib.

For while he holds that nothing is so damned

And shameful as to be ashamed. Ib.
For daring nonsense seldom fails to hit,
Like scattered shot, and pass with some for
wit. On Modern Critics.

Made every day he had to live
To his last minute a preparative.

To the Memory of Duval.
'The Devil was the first o' th' name
From whom the race of rebels came.

Miscellaneous Thoughts.
The soberest saints are more stiff-necked
Than th' hottest-headed of the wicked. Ib.

* Dischord ofte in music makes the sweeter lay.—SPENSER, "Faerie Queene," 3, 2, 15.

The souls of women are so small,
That some believe they've none at all.
Miscellaneous Thoughts.

Opinion governs all mankind,
Like the blind's leading of the blind. Ib.

The law can take an open purse in court,
While it condemns a less delinquent for 't.
Ib.

All his perfections were so rare,
The wit of man could not declare
Which single virtue, or which grace
Above the rest had any place. Ib.

A convert's but a fly that turns about,
After his head's cut off, to find it out. Ib.

JOHN BYROM (1692-1763).

God bless the king, I mean the faith's defender;
God bless—no harm in blessing—the pre-tender;
Who that pretender is, and who is king,—
God bless us all,—that's quite another thing. As published in his "Miscellaneous Poems" (1773).

There was a sound of revelry by night,
And Belgium's capital had gathered then
Her Beauty and her Chivalry, and bright
The lamps shone o'er fair women and brave men;

A thousand hearts beat happily; and when
Music arose with its voluptuous swell,
Soft eyes looked love to eyes which spake
again,

And all went merry as a marriage bell;
But hush! hark! a deep sound strikes like a rising knell! St. 21.

Did ye not hear it?—No, 'twas but the wind,
Or the car rattling o'er the stony street;
On with the dance; let joy be unconfined;
No sleep till morn, when Youth and “Where” ‡ St. 27.

O'er the glad waters of the dark blue sea,

Our thoughts as boundless, and our souls as free,

Far as the breeze can bear, the billows foam,

Survey our empire, and behold our home!

The Corsair. Canto 1, st. 1.

Oh, who can tell, save he whose heart hath tried,

And danced in triumph o'er the waters wide,

The exulting sense—the pulse's maddening

play,

That thrills the wanderer of that trackless way? Ib.

She walks the waters like a thing of life,

And seems to dare the elements to strife.

St. 3.

Oh! are they safe? we ask not of success.

St. 5.

Still sways their souls with that commanding

art

That dazzles, leads, yet chills the vulgar heart. St. 8.

The power of thought—the magic of the Mind. Ib.

Such hath it been—shall be—beneath the sun—

The many still must labour for the one. Ib.

* Homer.

† “Solitudinem faciunt; pacem appellant.”— TACITUS, “Agricola,” c. 30. (They make a solitude; they call it peace.)

‡ “I came to the place of my birth and cried:
‘The friends of my youth, where are they?’—and an echo answered, ‘Where are they?’—From an Arabic M.S.—Note to Rogers’ “Pleasures of Memory,” Part 1 (1792).

Robust, but not Herculean—to the sight.
No giant frame sets forth his common height
Yet, in the whole, who paused to look again Saw more than marks the crowd of vulgar
men. St. 9

He had the skill, when Cunning's gaze would seek

To probe his heart and watch his changing cheek,

At once the observer's purpose to espy,
And on himself roll back the scrutiny. Ib.

There was a laughing devil in his sneer. Ib.

And when his frown of hatred darkly fell,

Hope withering fled—and Mercy sighed farewell. Ib.

The only pang my bosom dare not brave

Must be to find forgetfulness in thine. St. 14.

Thus ever fade my fairy dreams of bliss. Ib.

Farewell!

For in that word—that fatal word—how'er

We promise—hope—believe—there breathes despair. St. 15.

His was the lofty port, the distant mien,

That seems to shun the sight—and awes if seen. St. 16.

The weak alone repent. Canto 2, st. 10.

Oh! too convincing—dangerously dear—

In woman's eye the unanswerable tear!

St. 15.

What lost a world, and bade a hero fly?

The timid tear in Cleopatra's eye. Ib.

She for him had given

Her all on earth, and more than all in Heaven Canto 3, st. 17

His heart was formed for softness—warped to wrong;

Betrayed too early, and beguiled too long.

St. 23

He left a Corsair's name to other times,

Linked with one virtue and a thousand crimes. St. 24

Left by his sire, too young such loss to know.

Lord of himself;—that heritage of woe.

Lara. Canto 1, st. 2

Whate'er he be, 'twas not what he has been. St. 5

And that sarcastic levity of tongue,

The stinging of a heart the world hath stung. Ib.

And oft, in sudden mood, for many a day.

From all communion he would start away.

St. 9

And flowers the fairest that may feast the

bee. St. 10

In him, inexplicably mixed, appeared

Much to be loved, much hated, sought, and feared. St. 17.

He stood a stranger in this breathing world.

St. 18.

His madness was not of the head, but heart.
Lara. Canto 1, st. 18.

None knew, nor how, nor why, but he entwined
 Himself perforce around the hearer's mind.
St. 19.

This is no time nor fitting place to mar
 The mirthful meeting with a wordy war.
St. 23.

The courteous host, and all-approving guest.
St. 29.

Now rose the unleavened hatred of his heart.
Canto 2, st. 4.

And dye conjecture with a darker hue.
St. 6.

E'en if he failed, he still delayed his fall.
St. 9.

The hand that kindles cannot quench the flame.
St. 11.

That panting thirst which scorches in the breath

Of those that die the soldier's fiery death.
St. 16.

The cannon's breath
 Wings the far hissing globe of death.
 The Siege of Corinth. St. 2.

He ruled them—man may rule the worst,
 By ever daring to be first.
St. 12.

In vain from side to side he throws
 His form, in courtship of repose.
St. 13.

But his heart was swollen, and turned aside,
 By deep, interminable pride.
St. 21.

Fiercely stand, or fighting fall.
St. 25.

It is the hour when lovers' vows
 Seem sweet in every whispered word.
Parisina. St. 1.

He could not slay a thing so fair.
St. 7.

My life must linger on alone.
St. 12.

Thou gav'st, and may'st resume my breath,
 A gift for which I thank thee not.
St. 13.

Yet in my lineaments they trace
 Some features of my father's face.
Id.

It was a thing to see, not hear.
St. 14.

He is near his mortal goal.
St. 15.

He died as erring man should die,
 Without display, without parade;
 Meekly had he bowed and prayed,
 As not disdaining priestly aid,

Nor desperate of all hope on high.
St. 17.

And o'er that fair, broad brow were wrought

The intersected lines of thought.
St. 20.

My hair is grey, but not with years,
 Nor grew it white
 In a single night,
 As men's have grown from sudden fears.
 The Prisoner of Chillon. St. 1.

Oh, God! it is a fearful thing
 To see the human soul take wing
 In any shape, in any mood—
 I've seen it rushing forth in blood,
 I've seen it on the breaking ocean
 Strive with a swollen, convulsive motion.
St. 8.

He faded, and so calm and meek,
 So softly worn, so sweetly weak,
 So tearless, yet so tender—kind,
 And grieved for those he left behind;

With all the while a cheek whose bloom
 Was as a mockery of the tomb,
 Whose tints as gently sunk away
 As a departing rainbow's ray—

An eye of most transparent light,
 That almost made the dungeon bright,
 And not a word of murmur—not
 A groan o'er his untimely lot.

Id.
 Regained my freedom with a sigh. St. 14.

She was not old, nor young, nor at the years
 Which certain people call a "certain age,"
 Which yet the most uncertain age appears.

Beppo. St. 22.

Laura was blooming still, had made the best
 Of time, and time returned the compliment.

St. 23.
 A pretty woman is a welcome guest. Id.

For most men (till by losing rendered sager)
 Will back their own opinions with a wager.
St. 27.

Soprano, basso, even the contra-alto
 Wished him five fathom under the Rialto.
St. 32.

In short, he was a perfect cavaliero,
 And to his very valet seemed a hero. St. 33.

His heart was one of those which most enamour us,
 Wax to receive, and marble to retain.
St. 34.

Besides, they always smell of bread and butter. St. 39.

I love the language, that soft bastard Latin,
 Which melts like kisses from a female mouth,

And sounds as if it should be writ on satin,
 With syllables which breathe of the sweet
 South. St. 44.

Heart on her lips and soul within her eyes,
 Soft as her clime and sunny as her eyes.
St. 45.

I like a parliamentary debate,
 Particularly when it's not too late. St. 47.

I like the weather, when it's not too rainy,
 That is, I like two months of every year
St. 48.

Teasing with blame, excruciating with praise. St. 74.

One hates an author that's all author, fellows
 In foolscap uniform turned up with ink.
St. 75.

Oh, Mirth and Innocence! Oh, Milk and Water!

Ye happy mixtures of more happy days.

Beppo. St. 80.

For danger levels man and brute,
And all are fellows in their need.

Mazappa. St. 3.

Who listens once will listen twice. St. 6.

For time at last sets all things even—

And if we do but watch the hour,

There never yet was human power

Which could evade, if unforgiven,

The patient search and vigil long

Of him who treasures up a wrong. St. 10.

Whatever creed be taught or land be trod,

Man's conscience is the oracle of God.

The Island. Canto 1, st. 6.

The prayers of Abel linked to deeds of Cain.

Canto 2, st. 4.

To form a nation's glory or its grief. St. 9.

More happy, if less wise. St. 11.

Sublime tobacco! which from east to west

Cheers the tar's labour or the Turk man's rest. St. 19.

Divine in hookas, glorious in a pipe,

When tipped with amber, mellow, rich, and ripe;

Like other charmers, wooing the caress,

More dazzlingly when daring in full dress.

Yet thy true lovers more admire by far

Thy naked beauties—give me a cigar! lb.

But yet what minutes! Moments like to these

Render men's lives into immortalities.

Canto 3, st. 4.

My slumbers, if I slumber, are not sleep,

But a continuance of enduring thought.

Manfred. Act 1, 1.

The tree of knowledge is not that of life. lb.

But grief should be the instructor of the wise;

Sorrow is knowledge. lb.

Mont Blanc is the monarch of mountains;

They crowned him long ago

On a throne of rocks, in a robe of clouds,

With a diadem of snow. lb.

But we, who name ourselves its sovereigns,

we,

Half dust, half deity, alike unfit

To sink or soar. Act 1, 2.

But I can act even what I most abhor,

And champion human fears. Act 2, 2.

The city lies sleeping. Act 2, 3.

As far as is compatible with clay,

Which clogs the ethereal essence. Act 2, 4.

There is no future pang

Can deal that justice on the self-condemn'd

He deals on his own soul. Act 3, 1.

For he Must serve who fain would sway—and soothe—and sue—

And watch all time—and pry into all place—

And be a living lie—who would become

A mighty thing amongst the mean. lb.

Old man! 'tis not so difficult to die.

Act 3, 4.

You have deeply ventured;

But all must do so who would greatly win.

Marino Faliero. Act 1, 2.

But try the Cæsar, or the Catiline,

By the true touchstone of desert—success.

lb.

The vile are only vain; the great are proud.

Act 2, 1.

They never fail who die

In a great cause. Act 2, 2.

Nought, save sleep,

Which will not be commanded. Act 4, 1.

The many twinkling feet so small and sylphlike,

Suggesting the more perfect symmetry

Of the fair forms which terminate so well.

Act 4, 1.

Have made the lion mad ere now; a shaft

't the heel o'erthrew the bravest of the brave. lb.

Great is their love who love in sin and fear.

Heaven and Earth. Part 1, 1.

Walk darkling to their doom. Part 1, 3.

For blindness is the firstborn of excess. lb.

If not unmoved, yet undismayed. lb.

What are the rank tongues

Of this vile herd, grown insolent with feeding,

That I should prize their noisy praise, or dread

Their noisome clamour?

Sardanapalus. Act 1, 2.

Yet what is

Death, so it be glorious? 'Tis a sunset.

Act 2, 1.

Self-defence is a virtue,

Sole bulwark of all right. lb.

And femininely meaneth furiously,

Because all passions in excess are female.

Act 3, 1.

I am the very slave of circumstance

And impulse—borne away with every breath! Act 4, 1.

So much for monuments that have forgotten

Their very record! Act 5, 1.

Because all earth, except his native land,
To him is one wide prison, and each breath
Of foreign air he draws seems a slow poison,
Consuming but not killing.

The Two Foscari. Act 1, 1.

So we are slaves,
The greatest as the meanest—nothing rests
Upon our will. Act 2, 1.

And when we think we lead we most are led.
Ib.

He who loves not his country, can love nothing. Act 3, 1.

He who bows not to him has bowed to me!
Cain. Act 1, 1.

My counsel is a kind one; for 'tis even Given chiefly at my own expense: 'tis true,
'Twill not be followed, so there's little lost.

Act 2, 2.

But for your petty, picking, downright thievery,

We scorn it as we do board-wages.

Werner. Act 2, 1.

Then wherefore should we sigh and whine,
With groundless jealousy repine,
With silly whims and fancies frantic
Merely to make our love romantic?

'Twas thine own genius gave the final blow,
And helped to plant the wound that laid thee low:

So the struck eagle, stretched upon the plain,
No more through rolling clouds to soar again,
Viewed his own feather on the fatal dart,
And winged the shaft that quivered in his heart;

Keen were his pangs, but keener far to feel,
He nursed the pinion which impelled the steel;

While the same plumage which had warmed
his nest

Drank the last life-drop of his bleeding breast.† l. 824.

I think I hear a little bird, that sings
The people by-and-by will be the stronger.
St. 50.

Without, or with, offence to friends or foes,
I sketch your world exactly as it goes.
St. 89.

War's a brain-spatting, windpipe-slitting
art,
Unless her cause by right be sanctified.
Canto 9, st. 4.

You've supped full of flattery;
They say you like it too—'tis no great wonder. St. 5.

Never had mortal man such opportunity,
Except Napoleon, or abused it more. St. 9.

The consequence is, being of no party,
I shall offend all parties. St. 26.

* This had reference to the expression of one of Queen Caroline's advocates in the House of Lords, who spoke of circumstances in her asso-

A fair edition, and of matchless worth,

Free from erratas, new in heaven set forth.

Lines upon Mr. John Foster.†

THOMAS CAREW (1598 ?-1639 ?).

He that loves a rosy cheek,

Or a coral lip admires,

Or from star-like eyes doth seek

Fuel to maintain his fires,

As Old Time makes these decay,

So his flames must waste away.

Disdain returned.

* Usually quoted: "Is asking too little and taking too much." The above, however, is the original form.

† This idea is borrowed from Rev. B. Woodbridge, chaplain to Charles II. (q.v.). (See also Benj. Franklin's "Epitaph on Himself.")

I have learned thy arts, and now
Can disdain as much as thou.

Disdain returned.

Then fly betimes, for only they Conquer Love, that run away.

Song. "Conquest by Flight."

The purest soul that e'er was sent Into a clayey tenement.

Epitaphs. On the Lady Mary Villiers.

And here the precious dust is laid,
Whose purely tempered clay was made
So fine that it the guest betrayed.
Else the soul grew so fast within,
It broke the outward shell of sin,
And so was hatched a cherubin.

On Maria Wentworth.

Good to the poor, to kindred dear,
To servants kind, to friendship clear,
To nothing but herself severe.

The flower and the distant star.

The Time to be.

HENRY CAREY (c. 1693-1743).

Of all the girls that are so smart
There's none like pretty Sally ;
She is the darling of my heart,
And she lives in our alley,
There is no lady in the land
Is half so sweet as Sally.

Sally.

Of all the days that's in the week,

Another's taste and fancy. He'll not dance
To every tune of every minister.

It goes against his nature—he can't do it.

Act 1, 4.

My son! the road the human being travels,
That, on which BLESSING comes and goes,
doth follow

The river's course, the valley's playful
windings,

Curves round the cornfield and the hill of vines,

Honouring the holy bounds of property!

And thus secure, though late, leads to its end.

1b.

Where he plunges in,

He makes a whirlpool, and all stream down

Act 2, 1.

For fable is Love's world, his home, his birthplace;

Delighted dwells he 'mong fays and talismans,

And spirits; and delightedly believes
Divinities, being himself divine.

The intelligible forms of ancient poets,

The fair humanities of old religion,

The power, the beauty, and the majesty,

That had their haunts in dale, or piny mountain,

Or forest, by slow stream, or pebbly spring,
Or chasms, and wat'ry depths; all these have vanished.

They live no longer in the faith of reason;
But still the heart doth need a language, still

Doth the old instinct bring back the old names.

Act 2, 4.

My way must be straight on. True with the tongue,

False with the heart—I may not, cannot be.

Act 3, 3.

Power on an ancient consecrated throne,

Or serves the champion in forensic war
To flourish and parade with at the bar. l. 664.

I know the warning song is sung in vain,
That few will hear and fewer heed the strain. l. 724.

The poor, inured to drudgery and distress,
Act without aim, think little, and feel less,
And nowhere, but in feigned Arcadian scenes,

Taste happiness, or know what pleasure means. Hope. l. 7.

The rich grow poor, the poor become purse-proud. l. 18.

Pleasure is labour too, and tires as much. l. 20.

And just when evening turns the blue vault grey,
To spend two hours in dressing for the day. l. 81.

Serves merely as a soil for discontent
To thrive in. l. 99.

While conversation, an exhausted stock,
Grows drowsy as the clicking of a clock. l. 105.

Men deal with life as children with their

Fasting and prayer sit well upon a priest.
l. 405.

A hand as liberal as the light of day. l. 410.
And differing judgments serve but to declare,
That Truth lies somewhere, if we knew but where. l. 425.

The sacred book no longer suffers wrong,
Bound in the fetters of an unknown tongue,
But speaks with plainness art could never mend,

What simplest minds can soonest comprehend. l. 450.

And he that stole has learned to steal no
more. l. 525.

A knave when tried on honesty's plain rule,
And when by that of reason a mere fool.
l. 568.

Assailed by scandal and the tongue of strife,
His only answer was a blameless life. l. 578.

Blush, Calumny! and write upon his tomb,
If honest eulogy can spare thee room. l. 590.

No blinder bigot, I maintain it still,
Than he who must have pleasure, come

A stream of liberal and heroic deeds. l. 244.

But let insolvent innocence go free. l. 289.

Verse, like the laurel, its immortal meed,
Should be the guerdon of a noble deed.
l. 293.

All truth is precious, if not all divine. l. 331.

Flavia, most tender of her own good name,
Is rather careless of her sister's fame. l. 453.

A teacher should be sparing of his smile.
l. 490.

No skill in swordmanship, however just,
Can be secure against a madman's thrust.
l. 509.

When scandal has new minted an old lie,
Or taxed invention for a fresh supply,
'Tis called a satire. l. 513.

Pelting each other for the public good.
l. 623.

Spare the poet for his subject's sake. l. 630.

Conversation in its better part,
May be esteemed a gift, and not an art.
Conversation. l. 3.

Words learned by rote, a parrot may rehearse,
But talking is not always to converse. l. 7.

Oaths terminate, as Paul observes, all strife;
Some men have surely then a peaceful life!
l. 55.

Asseveration blustering in your face
Makes contradiction such a hopeless case.
l. 59.

Though syllogisms hang not on my tongue,
I am not surely always in the wrong;
'Tis hard if all is false that I advance,
A fool must now and then be right by

A noisy man is always in the right. l. 114.

Dubius is such a scrupulous good man.
l. 119.

He would not with a peremptory tone
Assert the nose upon his face his own.
l. 121.

His sole opinion, whatsoe'er befall,
Centering at last in having none at all.
l. 133.

Where men of judgment creep and feel their way,
The positive pronounce without dismay.
l. 145.

The proud are always most provoked by pride. l. 160.

A moral, sensible, and well-bred man
Will not affront me, and no other can.
l. 193.

"Can this be true?" an arch observer cries;
"Yes" (rather moved), "I saw it with these eyes."

"Sir! I believe it on that ground alone;
I could not, had I seen it with my own."
l. 231.

A tale should be judicious, clear, succinct,
The language plain, and incidents well linked;
Tell not as new what everybody knows,
And, new or old, still hasten to a close.
l. 235.

Pernicious weed! whose scent the fair
annoys,
Unfriendly to society's chief joys,
Thy worst effect is banishing for hours
The sex whose presence civilises ours.

Conversation. l. 251.

I cannot talk with civet in the room,
A fine puss gentleman that's all perfume;
The sight's enough—no need to smell a beau.

l. 283.

The solemn fop, significant and budge;
A fool with judges, amongst fools a judge.

l. 299.

His wit invites you by his looks to come,
But when you knock it never is at home.

l. 303.

Some men employ their health, an ugly trick,
In making known how oft they have been sick.

l. 311.

Thus always teasing others, always teased,
His only pleasure is—to be displeased.

l. 345.

Our wasted oil unprofitably burns,
Like hidden lamps in old sepulchral urns.

l. 357.

And finds a changing clime a happy source
Of wise reflection and well-timed discourse.

l. 387.

The visit paid, with ecstasy we come,
As from a seven years' transportation, home.

l. 399.

And though the fox he follows may be tamed,

A mere fox-follower never is reclaimed.

l. 409.

Whose only fit companion is his horse.

l. 412.

Oh, to the club, the scene of savage joys,
The school of coarse good-fellowship and noise.

l. 421.

Fashion, leader of a chattering train, Whom man, for his own hurt, permits to reign.

l. 457.

No—marble and recording brass decay,
And, like the graver's memory, pass away.

l. 551.

It moves me more perhaps than folly ought.

l. 625.

And useless as a candle in a skull.

l. 785.

A poet does not work by square or line.

l. 794.

Though such continual zigzags in a book,*
Such drunken reelings, have an awkward look.

l. 866.

To find the medium asks some share of wit,
And therefore 'tis a mark fools never hit.

l. 884.

Hackneyed in business, wearied at that oar,
Which thousands, once fast chained to, quit
no more.

Retirement. l. 1.

And having lived a trifer, die a man.

l. 14.

In the last scene of such a senseless play.

l. 32.

Custom's idiot sway.

l. 49.

A mind released
From anxious thoughts how wealth may be increased.

l. 129.

The lover too shuns business.

l. 219.

The disencumbered Atlas of the state.

l. 394.

The good we never miss we rarely prize.

l. 406.

Some pleasures live a month and some a year,

But short the date of all we gather here.

l. 459.

Nature indeed looks prettily in rhyme.

l. 567.

He likes the country, but in truth must own,
Most likes it when he studies it in town.

l. 573.

Peers are not always generous as well-bred.

l. 597.

Absence of occupation is not rest,
A mind quite vacant is a mind distressed.

l. 623.

A life of ease a difficult pursuit.

l. 634.

An idler is a watch that wants both hands;
As useless if it goes as when it stands.

l. 681.

Built God a church, and laughed his Word to scorn.

l. 683.

Chase
A panting syllable through time and space.

l. 691.

Till authors hear at length one general cry,
Tickle and entertain us, or we die!

l. 707.

Beggars invention and makes fancy tame.

l. 709.

I praise the Frenchman; † his remark was shrewd,—

“How sweet, how passing sweet is solitude!
But grant me still a friend in my retreat,
Whom I may whisper—Solitude is sweet.”

l. 739.

O'erjoyed was he to find,
That though on pleasure she was bent,
She had a frugal mind.

History of John Gilpin. St. 8.

And all agog

To dash through thick and thin.

St. 10.

† La Bruyère; also attributed to Jean Guez de Balzac (1594-1654).

* Digressions.

His horse, who never in that sort
Had handled been before,
What thing upon his back had got Did wonder more and more.

History of John Gilpin. St. 24.

Just like unto a trundling mop,
Or a wild goose at play. St. 35.

A wig that flowed behind,
A hat not much the worse for wear,
Each comely in its kind. St. 46.

Now let us sing long live the King,
And Gilpin, long live he;
And when he next doth ride abroad,
May I be there to see! St. 63.

United yet divided, twain at once;
So sit two kings of Brentford on one throne.
The Task. The Sofa. l. 77.

So slow
The growth of what is excellent, so hard
To attain perfection in this nether world.

From pangs arthritic that infest the toe
Of libertine excess. l. 83.

Nor rural sights alone, but rural sounds,
Exhilarate the spirit, and restore
The tone of languid nature. l. 181.

And infants clamorous, whether pleased or pained. l. 232.

Far-fetched and little worth. l. 243.

Toils much to earn a monumental pile,
That may record the mischiefs he hath done. l. 276.

The guiltless eye
Commits no wrong, nor wastes what it enjoys. l. 333.

Like a coy maiden, Ease, when courted most,
Farthest retires. l. 409.

But imitative strokes can do no more Than please the eye. l. 426.

The innocent are gay. l. 493.

The earth was made so various, that the mind

Of desultory man, studious of change,
And pleased with novelty, might be indulged. l. 506.

In cities vice is hidden with most ease,
Or seen with least reproach. l. 689.

Where has commerce such a mart,
So rich, so thronged, so drained, and so supplied

As London, opulent, enlarged, and still Increasing London? l. 719.

God made the country, and man made the town.* l. 749.

Oh for a lodge in some vast wilderness,
Some boundless contiguity of shade!
The Time Piece. l. 1.

My ear is pained,
My soul is sick with every day's report
Of wrong and outrage with which earth is filled. l. 5.

Mountains interposed,
Make enemies of nations, who had else
Like kindred drops been mingled into one. l. 17.

I would not have a slave to till my ground,
To carry me, to fan me while I sleep,
And tremble when I wake, for all the wealth
That sinews bought and sold have ever earned. l. 29.

Slaves cannot breathe in England; if their lungs
Receive our air, that moment they are free;
They touch our country, and their shackles fall. l. 40.

England, with all thy faults, I love thee still,
My country! † l. 206.

Though thy clime
Be sickle, and thy year, most part deformed
With dripping rains, or withered by a frost,
I would not yet exchange thy sullen skies,
And fields without a flower, for warmer
France, l. 209.

With all her vines. l. 209.

In the name of soldiership and sense. l. 225.

Presume to lay their hand upon the ark
Of her magnificent and awful cause. l. 231.

Praise enough
To fill the ambition of a private man,
That Chatham's language was his mother-

The Task. The Time Piece. l. 444.

'Tis pitiful
 To court a grin, when you should woo a soul. l. 466.

Oh spare your idol! think him human still;
 Charms he may have, but he has frailties too;
 Dote not too much, nor spoil what ye admire.
l. 496.

How oft, when Paul has served us with a text,
 Has Epictetus, Plato, Tully, preached!
l. 539.

Variety's the very spice of life,
 That gives it all its flavour. l. 606.

She that asks
 Her dear five hundred friends. l. 652.

A graduated dunce. l. 743.
 And he was competent whose purse was so.
l. 752.

A man of letters, and of manners too. l. 792.
 Crack the satiric thong.

The Garden. l. 26.
 Domestic happiness, thou only bliss
 Of Paradise that has survived the Fall!
l. 41.

Where pleasure is adored,
 That reeling goddess with the zoneless waist
 And wandering eyes, still leaning on the arm
 Of Novelty, her fickle frail support. l. 51.

Dream after dream ensues,
 And still they dream that they shall still succeed,
 And still are disappointed. l. 127.

* This is from a classical source. Montaigne ("Essais," 1580, Book 2, chap. 12, ad fin.) has the following as from a "pagan writer": "Oh! what a vile and abject thing," says he, "is man unless he can erect himself above humanity." Here is a bon mot and a useful desire, but equally absurd. For to make the handful bigger than the hand, the armful bigger than the arm, and to hope to stride further than the stretch of our legs, is impossible and monstrous. . . . He may lift himself if God lend him His hand of special grace; he may lift himself. . . . by means wholly celestial. It is for our Christian religion, and not for his Stoic virtue, to pretend to this divine and miraculous metamorphosis."

CHARLES DIBDIN (1745-1814).

For they say there's a Providence sits up aloft

To keep watch for the life of poor Jack.

Poor Jack.

There's a sweet little cherub that sits up aloft,
To keep watch for the life of poor Jack.

Ib.

What argufies snivelling and piping your eye?

Ib.

And fancy paints the muffled drum,

And plaintive fife,

And the loud volley o'er the grave,

That sounds sad requiems to the brave.

Farewell and Return.

Then trust me there's nothing like drinking
So pleasant on this side the grave;
It keeps the unhappy from thinking,
And makes e'en the valiant more brave.

Nothing like Grog.

Then farewell, my trim-built wherry!
Oars, and coat, and badge farewell!

Poor Tom.

If, my hearty, you'd not like a lubber appear,

You must very well know how to hand, reef, and steer.

Sounding the Bowl.

'Tis grog, only grog,
Is his rudder, his compass, his cable, his log;
The sailor's sheet anchor is grog.

The Sailor's Sheet Anchor.

And did you not hear of a jolly young waterman,

Who at Blackfriars Bridge used for to ply?
He feathered his oars with such skill and dexterity

Winning each heart and delighting each eye.

The Jolly Young Waterman.

As he rowed along thinking of nothing at all.

Ib.

What argufies pride and ambition?

Soon or late death will take us in tow:

Each bullet has got its commission,

And when our time's come we must go.

Each Bullet has its Commission.

His form was of the manliest beauty,

His heart was kind and soft,

Faithful, below, he did his duty;

But now he's gone aloft. Tom Bowling.

For though his body's under hatches,

His soul has gone aloft.* Ib.

* Inscribed on Charles Dibdin's gravestone, in the cemetery of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, Camden Town. The song was written on the occasion of the death of the poet's brother, for many years master of a merchant vessel.

In every mess I find a friend,

In every port a wife.†

Jack in his Element.

For a soldier I listed, to grow great in fame,
And he shot at for sixpence a day.

Charity.

But 'tis always the way on't; one scarce finds a brother

Fond as pitch, honest, hearty, and true to the core,

But by battle, or storm, or some damned thing or other,

He's popped off the books and we ne'er see him more!

Grieving's a Folly.

For if bold tars are Fortune's sport,

Still are they Fortune's care.

The Blind Sailor.

And the sign of a true-hearted sailor

Is to give and to take a good joke.

Jack at the Windlass.

Misfortune ever claimed the pity of the brave.

The Veterans.

Mayhap you have heard that as dear as their lives

All true-hearted tars love their ships and their wives.

The Nancy.

But since he died in honour's cause

'Twas all one to Jack

All's One to Jack.

But they that han't pity, why I pities they.

True Courage.

I your angels don't like,—I love women.

Nature and Nancy.

But the standing toast that pleased me most was, "The wind that blows, the ship that goes,

And the lass that loves a sailor!"

"There are amusing people who do not interest," said the Monsignore, "and interesting people who do not amuse." Chap. 41.

* This is perhaps derived from "May Fair," a satire published in 1827.

"There beauty half her glory veils,
In cabs, those gondolas on wheels."
Mr. H. Schütz Wilson, however, claims to have originated the saying as applied to a hansom in a novel "The Three Paths" (1859). M. H. de Balzac in "Physiologie du Mariage" (1829), speaks of French cabs (fiacres) as "ces gondoles parisiennes."

"My idea of an agreeable person," said Hugo Bohun, "is a person who agrees with me."

How dull, and how insensible a beast
Is man, who yet would lord it o'er the rest!
Essay upon Satire.† l. 1.

Satire has always shone among the rest,
And is the boldest way, if not the best,
To tell men freely of their foulest faults;
To laugh at their vain deeds and vainer thoughts. l. 11.

The Woman Hater. Prologue.

Endless parting
With all we can call ours, with all our sweetness,
With youth, strength, pleasure, people,
time, nay reason!
For in the silent grave, no conversation,
No joyful tread of friends, no voice of lovers!
No careful father's counsels, nothing's heard,
For nothing is, but all oblivion,
Dust and an endless darkness.

Tragedy of Thierry and Theodoret.

Act 4, 1.

There's nought in this life sweet,
If men were wise to see't,
But only melancholy;
Oh, sweetest melancholy! †

OLIVER GOLDSMITH (1728-1774).

Remote, unfriended, melancholy, slow.
The Traveller.

Where'er I roam, whatever realms to see,
My heart, untravelled, fondly turns to thee. Ib.

And drags at each remove a lengthening chain. Ib.

And learn the luxury of doing good. Ib.

Some fleeting good that mocks me with the view. Ib.

These little things are great to little man.
Ib.

Creation's heir, the world, the world is mine. Ib.

Such is the patriot's boast where'er we roam,
His first, best country, ever is at home.

And yet, perhaps, if countries we compare,
And estimate the blessings which they share,
Though patriots flatter, still shall wisdom
find

An equal portion dealt to all mankind. Ib.

With memorable grandeur mark the scene.
Ib.

Man seems the only growth that dwindles here. Ib.

By sports like these are all their cares
beguiled,

The sports of children satisfy the child. Ib.

But winter lingering chills the lap of May.
Ib.

So the loud torrent, and the whirlwind's roar,

But bind him to his native mountains more. Ib.

Gay sprightly land of mirth and social ease,
Pleased with thyself, whom all the world can please. (France). Ib.

Alike all ages. Dames of ancient days
Have led their children through the mirth-ful maze;

And the gay grandsire, skilled in gestic lore,
Has frisked beneath the burden of three score. Ib.

Embosomed in the deep where Holland lies,
Methinks her patient sons before me stand,
Where the broad ocean leans against the land. Ib.

Pride in their port, defiance in their eye,
I see the lords of human kind pass by.

The Traveller.

That independence Britons prize too high, Keeps man from man, and breaks the social
tie. Ib.

The land of scholars and the nurse of arms.
Ib.

For just experience tells, in every soil,
That those who think must govern those that toil,

And all that freedom's highest aims can reach,
Is but to lay proportioned loads on each. Ib.

. . . Law grind the poor, and rich men rule the law. Ib.

Forced from their homes, a melancholy train. Ib.

Vain, very vain, my weary search to find
That bliss which only centres in the mind. Ib.

Our own felicity we make or find.* Ib.

Sweet Auburn, loveliest village of the plain!
The Deserted Village.

Dear lovely bowers of innocence and ease.
Ib.

The hawthorn bush, with seats beneath the shade,

For talking age and whispering lovers made! Ib.

The bashful virgin's side-long looks of love,
The matron's glance that would those looks reprove. Ib.

One only master grasps the whole domain,
And half a tillage stints thy smiling plain.
Ib.

Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates, and men decay;
Princes and lords may flourish, or may fade;
A breath can make them, as a breath has made;

But a bold peasantry, their country's pride,
When once destroyed, can never be supplied.
A time there was, ere England's griefs began,

When every rood of ground maintained its
man;

For him light labour spread her wholesome
store,

Just gave what life required, but gave no
more;

His best companions, innocence and health;
And his best riches, ignorance of wealth.
Ib.

How blest is he who crowns in shades like these

A youth of labour with an age of ease. Ib.

Sinks to the grave with unperceived decay,
While resignation gently slopes the way;
And all his prospects brightening to the last,
His heaven commences ere the world be past. Ib.

And the loud laugh that spoke the vacant
mind. Ib.

A man he was to all the country dear,
And passing rich with forty pounds a year;
Remote from towns he ran his godly race,
Nor e'er had changed nor wished to change
his place;

Unskilful he to fawn, or seek for power,
By doctrines fashioned to the varying hour;
Far other aims his heart had learned to prize
More bent to raise the wretched than to rise. Ib.

He chid their wanderings, but relieved their pain. Ib.

Wept o'er his wounds, or, tales of sorrow done,
Shouldered his crutch, and showed how fields were won. Ib.

And quite forgot their vices in their woe;
Careless their merits or their faults to scan,
His pity gave ere charity began. Ib.

And even his failings leaned to virtue's side. Ib.

And, as a bird each fond endearment tries,
To tempt its new-fledged offspring to the skies,

He tried each art, reproved each dull delay,
Allured to brighter worlds, and led the way. Ib.

At church, with meek and unaffected grace,
His looks adorned the venerable place;
Truth from his lips prevailed with double
sway,

And fools, who came to scoff, remained to pray. Ib.

And plucked his gown to share the good man's smile. Ib.

As some tall cliff, that lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale, and midway leaves
the storm,
Though round its breast the rolling clouds are spread,

Eternal sunshine settles on its head. Ib.

A man severe he was, and stern to view;
I knew him well, and every truant knew.
Well had the boding tremblers learned to trace

The day's disasters in his morning face;
Full well they laughed with counterfeited glee

At all his jokes, for many a joke had he;
Full well the busy whisper, circling round, Conveyed the dismal tidings when he frowned;

Yet he was kind, or if severe in aught,
The love he bore to learning was in fault. Ib.

* This line is said to have been added by Samuel Johnson (See p. 176).

In arguing, too, the parson owned his skill,
For ev'n though vanquished, he could argue still ;

While words of learned length, and thundering sound,

Amazed the gazing rustics ranged around ;

And still they gazed, and still the wonder grew,

That one small head could carry all he knew. The Deserted Village.

Where village statesmen talked with looks profound,

And news much older than their ale went round. Ib.

The whitewashed wall, the nicely-sanded floor,

The varnished clock that clicked behind the door ;

The chest contrived a double debt to pay,
A bed by night, a chest of drawers by day. Ib.

Yes ! let the rich deride, the proud disdain
These simple blessings of the lowly train ;

To me more dear, congenial to my heart,
One native charm, than all the gloss of art. Ib.

The heart distrusting asks if this be joy. Ib.

How wide the limits stand Between a splendid and a happy land. Ib.

Her modest looks the cottage might adorn, Sweet as the primrose peeps beneath the thorn. Ib.

In all the silent manliness of grief. Ib.

O, luxury ! thou cursed by heaven's decree,
How ill exchanged are things like these for thee ! Ib.

Thou source of all my bliss, and all my woe,
That found'st me poor at first, and keep'st me so. Ib.

The fat was so white and the lean was so ruddy. The Haunch of Venison.

Such dainties to them, their health it might hurt,

It's like sending them ruffles, when wanting a shirt.* Ib.

Who mixed reason with pleasure, and wisdom with mirth. Retaliation.

Here lies our good Edmund, whose genius was such,

We scarcely can praise it, or blame it too
much ;

Who, born for the universe, narrowed his
mind,

And to party gave up what was meant for mankind ;

Though fraught with all learning, yet straining his throat

Man wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little long. Ib.

And what is friendship but a name ? Ib.

To persuade Tommy Townshend to lend him a vote ;

Who, too deep for his hearers, still went on refining,

And thought of convincing, while they thought of dining ;

Though equal to all things, for all things unfit,

Too nice for a statesman, too proud for a wit. Ib.

Too fond of the right to pursue the expedient. Ib.

The pupil of impulse, it forced him along,
His conduct still right, with his argument wrong. Ib.

A flattering painter, who made it his care
To draw men as they ought to be, not as they are. Ib.

Here lies David Garrick, describe him who can,

An abridgment of all that was pleasant in man. Ib.

As a wit, if not first, in the very first line. Ib.

On the stage he was natural, simple,
affecting ;

'Twas only that, when he was off, he was acting. Ib.

He cast off his friends as a huntsman his pack,

For he knew, when he pleased, he could whistle them back.

Of praise a mere glutton, he swallowed what came,

And the puff of a dunce he mistook it for fame. Ib.

Who peppered the highest was surest to please. Ib.

Yet one fault he had, and that was a thumper—

He was, could he help it ? a special attorney. Ib.

He has not left a wiser or better behind. Ib.

When they talked of their Raphaels,
Corregios, and stuff,

He shifted his trumpet, and only took snuff. Ib.

Thou best humoured man with the worst humoured muse.† Postscript.

Taught by the power that pities me,
I learn to pity them. The Hermit.

Man wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little long. Ib.

And what is friendship but a name ? Ib.

Good people all, of every sort,
Give ear unto my song;
And if you find it wondrous short,
It cannot hold you long.

Elegy on the Death of a Mad Dog.

The naked every day he clad,
When he put on his clothes. Ib.

And in that town a dog was found,
As many dogs there be,
Both mongrel, puppy, whelp, and hound,
And curs of low degree. Ib.

The dog, to gain his private ends,
Went mad, and bit the man. Ib.

The man recovered of the bite,
The dog it was that died. Ib.

The king himself has followed her—
When she has walked before.

Elegy on Mrs. Mary Blaize.

The doctor found, when she was dead,
Her last disorder mortal. Ib.

When lovely woman stoops to folly,
And finds, too late, that men betray,
What charm can soothe her melancholy?

What art can wash her guilt away?
The only art her guilt to cover,

To hide her shame from every eye,
To give repentance to her lover,

And wring his bosom, is—to die.
Stanzas on Woman.

Hope, like the glimmering taper's light,
Adorns and cheers the way,

And still, as darker grows the night,
Emits a brighter ray.

Song. The Wretch Condemned, etc.

O memory! thou fond deceiver,
Still importunate and vain.

Song. O Memory!

For life is ended when our honour ends.
Prologue. Translated from Laberius.

This same philosophy is a good horse in

The Good-Natured Man. Act 1.

Don't let us make imaginary evils, when you know we have so many real ones to encounter. Ib.

If they have a bad master, they keep quarrelling with him; if they have a good master, they keep quarrelling with one another. Ib.

I am now no more than a mere lodger in my own house. Ib.

Silence is become his mother-tongue.
Act 2.

Measures, not men, have always been my

All men have their faults; too much modesty is his. Ib.

Lawyers are always more ready to get a man into troubles than out of them. Act 3.

In my time the follies of the town crept slowly among us, but now they travel faster than a stage-coach.

She Stoops to Conquer. Act 1.

I love everything that's old: old friends,
old times, old manners, old books, old wine. Ib.

As for disappointing them, I should not so much mind; but I can't abide to disap-point myself. Ib.

I never could teach the fools of this age that the indigent world could be clothed out

It is the last commends the play. No. 225.
No man at one time can be wise and love.†
No. 230.

Bid me to live, and I will live
Thy Protestant to be:
Or bid me love, and I will give
A loving heart to thee,
A heart as soft, a heart as kind,
A heart as sound and free
As in the whole world thou canst find,
That heart I'll give to thee. No. 268.
To Anthea, who may command him anything.

Bid me to weep, and I will weep
While I have eyes to see! Ib.

Bid me despair, and I'll despair,
Under that cypress tree:
Or bid me die, and I will dare
E'en Death, to die for thee. Ib.

Thou art my love, my life, my heart,
The very eyes of me:
And hast command of every part
To live and die for thee. Ib.

Though good things answer many good intent,
Crosses do still bring forth the best events.

Is this a fast, to keep
The larder lean
And clean?

Noble Numbers, No. 228.
To Keep a True Lent.

No, 'tis a fast to dole
Thy sheaf of wheat
And meat
Unto the hungry soul.
It is to fast from strife,
From old debate
And hate;

To circumcise thy life.
To show a heart grief-rent
To starve thy sin,
Not bin.

And that's to keep thy Lent. Id.

* On a pillar erected in the Dane John Field, Canterbury, were inscribed, according to the Examiner (May 31, 1829), the lines—

"Where is the man who has the power and skill
To stem the torrent of a woman's will?
For if she will, she will, you may depend on't;
And if she won't, she won't; so there's an end
on't."

And life wears on so wearily. To Hope.

Farewell! I did not know thy worth;
But thou art gone, and now 'tis prized;
So angels walked unknown on earth,
But when they flew were recognised.

To an Absentee.

We watched her breathing through the night,
Her breathing soft and low,
As in her breast the wave of life
Kept heaving to and fro. The Death Bed.

So silently we seemed to speak,
So slowly moved about,
As we had lent her half our powers
To eke her living out. Ib.

Our very hopes belied our fears,
Our fears our hopes belied—
We thought her dying when she slept,
And sleeping when she died. Ib.

I remember, I remember, —
The fir trees dark and high;
I used to think their slender tops
Were close against the sky;
It was a childish ignorance,
But now 'tis little joy

Equestrian Courtship.

Of all our pains, since man was curst,
I mean of body, not the mental,
To name the worst among the worst,
The dental sure is transcendental.

A True Story.

The best of friends fall out, and so
His teeth had done some years ago. Ib.

He knocked at his wife's head, until
It opened unto him. Tim Turpin.

A great judge, and a little judge,
The judges of a-size. Ib.

Whitee—as well as blackee—man-cipation.

The Monkey Martyr.

The whole thing seemed
So fine, he deemed
The smallest demagogues as great as Gogs!
Ib.

Let's consider the past with a lingering
gaze,

Like a peacock whose eyes are inclined to his tail. A Parthian Glance.

Beer will grow mothery, and ladies fair
Will grow like beer.

The Stag-Eyed Lady.

Pulling his beard because he had no hair.
Ib.

For here I leave my second leg,
And the Forty-second Foot!

Faithless Nelly Gray.

The love that loves a scarlet coat,
Should be more uniform! Ib.

Much study had made him very lean,
And pale, and leaden eyed.

Eugene Aram.

Woe, woe, unutterable woe—
Who spill life's sacred stream. Ib.

There was a manhood in his look,
That murder could not kill. Ib.

But Guilt was my grim chamberlain
That lighted me to bed;
And drew my midnight curtains round,
With fingers bloody red. Ib.

The bounding pinnace played a game
Of dreary pitch and toss;
A game that, on the good dry land,
Is apt to bring a loss! The Sea Spell.

Heaven never heard his cry, nor did
The ocean heed his caul. Ib.

Alas! my everlasting peace
Is broken into pieces. Ib.

For hark! the last chime of the dial has ceased,

And Old Time, who his leisure to cozen,
Has finished the Months, like the flasks at a feast,

Is preparing to tap a fresh dozen!

For the New Year.

And ye, who have met with Adversity's blast,

And been bowed to the earth by its fury;
To whom the Twelve Months, that have recently passed

Were as harsh as a prejudiced jury—Still, fill to the Future! and join in our chime,

The regrets of remembrance to cozen,
And having obtained a New Trial of Time,
Shout in hopes of a kindlier dozen. Ib.

Love prays devoutly when it prays for love
Hero and Leander. 20

A moment's thinking is an hour in words.
Ib. 41.

What different lots our stars accord!
This babe to be hailed and wooed as a Lord!

And that to be shunned like a leper!
One, to the world's wine, honey, and corn,
Another, like Colchester native, born
To its vinegar only, and pepper.

Miss Kilmansegg. Her Birth.

Plutus, as sponsor, stood at her font,
And Midas rocked the cradle. Ib.

Hundreds of men were turned into beasts,
Like the guests at Circe's horrible feasts,
By the magic of ale and cider. Ib.

A name?—if the party had a choice,
What mortal would be a Bugg by choice?
As a Hogg, a Grubb, or a Chubb rejoice?
Or any such nauseous blazon?

Her Christening.

And then in the fulness of joy and hope,
Seemed washing his hands with invisible soap,

In imperceptible water.

Miss Kilmansegg. Her Christening.

And as sure as London is built of bricks.

Her Education.

She had an idea from the very sound
That people with naught were naughty. Ib.

Flatterers make cream cheese of chalk. Ib.

To gratify stern ambition's whims,
What hundreds and thousands of precious limbs

On a field of battle we scatter.

Her Fame.

There's Bardus, a six-foot column of fop,
A lighthouse without any light atop.

Her First Step.

As many more

Crowd round the door,

To see them going to see it.

Her Fancy Ball.

And rubbed his hands, and smiled aloud
And bowed, and bowed, and bowed, and bowed,

Like a man who is sawing marble. Ib.

Earls that dated from early years. Ib.

For people who stand on legs of gold,
Are sure to stand well with society. Ib.

And golden opinions, of course, it won
From all different sorts of people. Ib.

For one of the pleasures of having a rout
Is the pleasure of having it over.

Her Dream.

What blessed ignorance equals this,
To sleep—and not to know it? Ib.

Oh, bed! oh, bed! delicious bed!
That heaven upon earth to the weary head.
Ib.

There's Morbid, all bile, and verjuice and nerves,

Where other people would make preserves,
He turns his fruit into pickles:

Jealous, envious, and fretful by day,
At night, to his own sharp fancies a prey,
He lies like a hedgehog rolled up the wrong
way,

Tormenting himself with his prickles.

Ib.

Oh! there's nothing in life like making love,
Save making hay in fine weather.

Her Courtship.

But the more the eggs, the worse the hatch;
The more the fish, the worse the catch;
The more the sparks, the worse the match;
Is a fact in Woman's history. Ib.

Alas! for the love that's linked with gold. Ib.

For next to that interesting job,
The hanging of Jack, or Bill, or Bob,
There's nothing so draws a London mob
As the noosing of very rich people. Ib.

Yet Wedlock's a very awful thing!
'Tis something like that feat in the ring,
Which requires good nerve to do it—
When one of a "Grand Equestrian Troop"
Makes a jump at a gilded hoop,
Not certain at all
Of what may befall
After his getting through it!

Her Marriage.

From a tower in an ivy-green jacket. Ib.

For bells are Music's laughter. Ib.

Men, whom their fathers had helped to gild,
And men who had had their fortunes to build,

And—much to their credit—had richly filled

Their purses by pursy-verance. Ib.

But of all the lunar things that change,
The one that shows most fickle and strange,
And takes the most eccentric range,
Is the moon—so called—of honey!

Her Honeymoon.

There's double beauty whenever a Swan
Swims on a lake with her double thereon. Ib.

And garnished with trees that a man might cut down,

Instead of his own expenses. Ib.

Home-made dishes that drive one from home. Her Misery.

Home-made physic that sickens the sick. Ib.

And of all the griefs that mortals share,
The one that seems the hardest to bear
Is the grief without community. Ib.

So sorrow is cheered by being poured
From one vessel into another. Ib.

A lull like the lull of the treacherous sea.

Her Last Will.

There are daily sounds to tell us that Life
Is dying, and Death is living. Ib.

Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold!
Bright and yellow, hard and cold.

Her Moral.

Spurned by the young, but hugged by the old

To the very verge of the churchyard mould,
Price of many a crime untold;
Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold!
Good or bad a thousand-fold!

How widely its agencies vary—
To save—to ruin—to curse—to bless—
As even its minted coins express,
Now stamped with the image of good
Queen Bess,
And now of a Bloody Mary. Ib.

There is not a fiercer hell than the failure in a great object. Endymion. Preface.

The imagination of a boy is healthy, and the mature imagination of a man is healthy;
but there is a space of life between, in which the soul is in a ferment, the character undecided, the way of life uncertain, the ambition thick-sighted: thence proceeds mawkishness. Id.

Oh! timely happy, timely wise,
Hearts that with rising morn arise! Morning.

If on our daily course our mind
Be set to hallow all we find,
New treasures still, of countless price,
God will provide for sacrifice. Ib.

We need not bid, for cloistered cell,
Our neighbour and our work farewell. Ib.

The trivial round, the common task,
Would furnish all we ought to ask;
Room to deny ourselves; a road
To bring us daily nearer God. Ib.

And help us this, and every day,
To live more nearly as we pray. Ib.

Sun of my soul! thou Saviour dear,
It is not night if thou be near. Evening.

Tracing out wisdom, power, and love,
In earth or sky, in stream or grove. Ib.

The Christian Year.
2nd Sunday after Trinity.

No distance breaks the tie of blood ;
Brothers are brothers evermore ;
Nor wrong, nor wrath of deadliest mood,
That magic may o'erpower. Ib.

Oh ! might we all our lineage prove,
Give and forgive, do good and love. Ib.

Then draw we nearer day by day,
Each to his brethren, all to God ;
Let the world take us as she may,
We must not change our road. Ib.

Men love us, or they need our love.
7th Sunday after Trinity.

The grey-haired saint may fail at last,
The surest guide a wanderer prove ;
Death only binds us fast
To the bright shore of love.

8th Sunday after Trinity.

Why should we faint and fear to live alone,*
Since all alone, so Heaven has willed, we die,

Nor e'en the tenderest heart, and next our own,
Knows half the reasons why we smile and sigh ? 24th Sunday after Trinity.

Blest are the pure in heart,
For they shall see our God.†

The Purification.

Still to the lowly soul
He doth himself impart,
And for His cradle and His throne
Chooseth the pure in heart. Ib.

Then be ye sure that Love can bless
Even in this crowded loneliness,
Where ever-moving myriads seem to say,
Go—thou art naught to us, nor we to thee—away ! St. Matthew's Day.

There are in this loud stunning tide
Of human care and crime,
With whom the melodies abide
Of the everlasting chime ;
Who carry music in their heart

as above in The Annual Register, 1788, Appendix, p. 201, among "Miscellaneous Poems," and are headed "An Expostulation"; also in the "Asylum for Fugitive Pieces," 1785, vol. 1, p. 15.
In both cases the lines are published anonymously. It is presumed that John Philip Kemble was the author, but this is not certain. The lines were not in Bickerstaff's comedy, as produced in 1770.

The inglorious arts of peace.
Horatian Ode upon Cromwell's Return from Ireland. l. 10.
He nothing common did, or mean,
Upon that memorable scene,
But with his keener eye
The axe's edge did try; l. 57.
And now the Irish are ashamed
To see themselves in one year tamed:
So much one man can do,
That does both act and know. l. 75.

Choosing each stone, and poisoning every

GERALD MASSEY (1828-1907).

And Life is all the sweeter that he lived,
And all he loved more sacred for his sake:
And Death is all the brighter that he died,
And Heaven is all the happier that he's
there.

Lines in Memory of Earl Brownlow.
In this dim world of clouding cares,
We rarely know, till 'wildered eyes
See white wings lessening up the skies,
The angels with us unawares.

The Ballad of Babe Christabel.

* Quoted in "As You Like It," Act 3, 5.

This world is full of beauty, as other worlds above;
And, if we did our duty, it might be as full of love.

Cries of Forty-Eight. This world is full of beauty.

Now, victory to our England!
And where'er she lifts her hand
In Freedom's fight, to rescue Right,
God bless the dear old Land!
England goes to Battle.

One sharp, stern struggle, and the slaves of centuries are free. The Patriot. l. 53.

To those who walk beside them, great men seem Mere common earth; but distance makes them stars. Hood. l. 11.

PHILIP MASSINGER (1583-1640).

For any man to match above his rank
Is but to sell his liberty.

Virgin Martyr. Act 1, 1.

The picklock
That never fails. [Money.]
The Unnatural Combat. Act 1, 1.

'Tis true, gold can do much,
But beauty more. Ib.

The world's wicked.
We are men, not saints, sweet lady; you must practise
The manners of the time, if you intend
To have favour from it. Ib.

Serves and fears
The fury of the many-headed monster,
The giddy multitude. Act 3, 2.

There are so many ways to let out life.
Duke of Milan. Act 1, 3.

But still remember, that a prince's secrets
Are balm concealed; but poison if discovered. Ib.

Honours never fail to purchase silence.
Act 2, 1.

I am in,
And must go on; and since I have put off
From the shore of innocence, guilt be thou my pilot. Ib.

Pray you use your freedom,
And, so far, if you please, allow me mine,
To hear you only; not to be compelled
To take your moral potions. Act 4, 3

Her goodness doth disdain comparison,
And, but herself, admits no parallel. Ib.

Now speak,
Or be for ever silent. Ib.

For injuries are writ in brass, kind Graccho,
And not to be forgotten. Act 5, 1.

Honours and great employments are great burthens. The Bondman. Act 1, 3.

He that would govern others, first should be
The master of himself. Ib.

A wise man never Attempts impossibilities.
The Renegado. Act 1, 1.

View yourselves
In the deceiving mirror of self-love.
Parliament of Love. Act 1, 5.

Better the devil's than a woman's slave.
Act 2, 2.

To have the greatest blessing, a true friend.
Act 3, 2.

What pity 'tis, one that can speak so well,
Should, in his actions, be so ill. Act 3, 3.

All words,
And no performance. Act 4, 2.

There are a thousand doors to let out life.
Ib.

Our aim is glory and to leave our names
To aftertime. The Roman Actor. Act 1, 1.

To descend
To the censure of a better word; or jest, Dropped from a poet's pen. Ib.

This syllable, his will,
Stands for a thousand reasons. Act 1, 2.

I in my own house am an emperor,
And will defend what's mine. Ib.

If there be,
Among the auditors, one whose conscience tells him
He is of the same mould, — We cannot help it.
Act 1, 3.

This many-headed monster. Act 3, 2.
Grim Death. Act 4, 2.

For princes never more make known their wisdom,
Than when they cherish goodness where they find it.

Great Duke of Florence. Act 1, 1.

Greatness, which private men
Esteemed a blessing, is to me a curse;
And we who, for our high births, they conclude
The only freemen, are the only slaves.
Happy the golden mean! Ib.

A glorious lazy drone, grown fat with feeding
On others' toil. Act 1, 2.

He's blind with too much light. Act 2, 1.

Delights, which to achieve, danger is nothing,
And loyalty but a word. Act 2, 3.

Great men,
Till they have gained their ends, are giants in Their promises, but, those obtained, weak pigmies
In their performance. And it is a maxim Allowed among them, so they may deceive,
They may swear anything; for the queen of
love,
As they hold constantly, does never punish,
But smile, at lovers' perjuries.

Great Duke of Florence. Act 2, 3.

I am driven
Into a desperate strait; and cannot steer
A middle course. Act 3, 1.

I never told a lie yet; and I hold it
In some degree blasphemous to dispraise
What's worthy admiration: yet, for once,
I will dispraise a little. ib.

At the best, my lord, she is a handsome picture,
And, that said, all is spoken. ib.

Truth, a constant mistress, that Ever protects her servants. ib.

Let my hand have the honour
To convey a kiss from my lips to the cover of Your foot, dear signior. Act 4, 1.

He that knows no guilt
Can know no fear. Act 4, 2.

The lilies
Contending with the roses in her cheeks,
Who most shall set them off. Act 5, 3.
Like a rough orator, that brings more truth
Than rhetoric, to make good his accusation. ib.

Sure the duke is
In the giving vein. ib.

Let other monarchs
Contend to be made glorious by proud war,
And with the blood of their poor subjects, purchase
Increase of empire, and increase their cares
In keeping that which was by wrong extorted.

Gilding unjust invasions with the trim
Of glorious conquests; we, that would be known

The father of our people, in our study
And vigilance for their safety, must not change
Their ploughshares into swords, and force them from

The secure shade of their own vines, to be Scorched with the flames of war.

The Maid of Honour. Act 1, 1.

Virtue, if not in action, is a vice;
And when we move not forward, we go backward:
Nor in this peace, the nurse of drones and cowards,
Our health, but a disease. ib.

Think not
Our counsel's based upon so weak a base,
As to be overturned, or shaken with Tempestuous winds of words. ib.

I now will court her in the conqueror's style;

"Come, see, and overcome." Act 2, 1.

Beauty, youth, and fortune meeting in you,
I will vouchsafe to marry you. Act 2, 2.

I give him three years and a day to match
my Toledo,

And then we'll fight like dragons. ib.

Desert may make a sergeant to a colonel,
And it may hinder him from rising higher. Act 3, 1.

O summer-friendship,
Whose flattering leaves, that shadowed us in our

Prosperity, with the least gust drop off
In the autumn of adversity. Act 3, 2.

He's a man,
I know, that at a reverent distance loves
me;

And such are ever faithful. What a sea
Of melting ice I walk on! Act 3, 3.

He
That kills himself to avoid misery, fears it,
And, at the best, shows but a bastard valour.
This life's a fort committed to my trust,
Which I must not yield up till it be forced:
Nor will I. He's not valiant that dares die,
But he that boldly bears calamity. ib.

Truth is armed
And can defend itself. It must out, madam. Act 5, 1.

Love, how he melts! I cannot blame my lady's

Unwillingness to part with such marmalade lips. The Picture. Act 1, 1.

And what, in a mean man, I should call folly,

Is in your majesty remarkable wisdom. Act 1, 2.

Be dumb,
Thou spirit of contradiction! ib.

Ill news, madam,
Are swallow-winged, but what's good
Walks on crutches. Act 2, 1.

You have said,
Gallants, so much, and hitherto done so little,

That, till I learn to speak, and you to do,
I must take time to thank you. Act 2, 2.

My dancing days are past. ib.

Every soil,
Where he is well, is to a valiant man.
His natural country. ib.

He cannot 'scape their censures who delight
To misapply whatever he shall write.

The Emperor of the East. Prologue.

The many-headed monster, multitude.

Act 2, 1.

An innocent truth can never stand in need
Of a guilty lie.

The Emperor of the East. Act 5, 3

They are too old to learn, and I too young
To give them counsel.

The Fatal Dowry. Act 1, 1.

Sir, though I would persuade, I'll not constrain :

Each man's opinion freely is his own
Concerning anything, or anybody. Act 2, 2.

Farewell, uncivil man ! let's meet no more ;
Here our long web of friendship I untwist.

Act 3, 1.

That you can speak so well, and do so ill.

Act 4, 3.

The devil turned precisian !

Friendship is but a word. Act 2, 1.

If you like not hanging, drown yourself ;
Take some course for your reputation. Ib.

I know your worship's wise, and needs no
counsel ;

Yet, if in my desire to do you service,
I humbly offer my advice (but still Under correction), I hope I shall not Incur your high displeasure. Act 2, 3.

I write nil ultra to my proudest hopes.

Act 4, 1.

The sum of all that makes a just man happy
Consists in the well choosing of his wife. Ib.

Hard things are compassed off by easy means. Act 5, 1.

Patience, the beggar's virtue. Ib.

Some undone widow sits upon my arm
And takes away the use of 't ; and my sword,

Glued to my scabbard with wronged orphans' tears,

Will not be drawn. Ib.

Pretty pastime, nephew !

'Tis royal sport. [Hawking.]

The Guardian. Act 1, 1.

Black detraction
Will find faults where they are not.

Act 1, 2.

Yet we should not,
Howe'er besieged, deliver up our fort
Of life, till it be forced. Act 2, 4.

My being hath been but a living death,
With a continued torture. Ib.

A fine method !

This is neither begging, borrowing, nor robbery ;

Yet it hath a fine twang of all of them.

Act 5, 4.

Where I love, I profess it ; where I hate,
In every circumstance I dare proclaim it.

A Very Woman. Act 1, 1.

To doubt is safer than to be secure. Ib.

But, like a stoic, with a constancy
Words nor affronts can shake, you still go on,
And smile when men abuse you. Ib.

They'll do little

That shall offend you, for their chief desire
Is to do nothing at all, sir. Act 3, 1.

Revenge, that thirsty dropsy of our souls,
Which makes us covet that which hurts us most,

Is not alone sweet, but partakes of tartness.

Act 4, 2.

Build on your own deserts, and ever be
A stranger to love's enemy, jealousy. Ib.

In all the faith my innocence could give me,
In the best language my true tongue could tell me,

And all the broken sighs my sick heart
lend me,

I sued, and served ; long did I love this lady,
Long was my travail, long my trade to win
her,

With all the duty of my soul I served her.

Act 4, 3.

Women, giddy women !

In her the blemish of your sex you prove,
There is no reason for your hate or love.

Act 5, 2.

Though the desire of fame be the last weakness

Wise men put off. * Act 5, 4.

Death hath a thousand doors to let out life ;
I shall find one. Ib.

Your unexpected courtesies amaze me,
Which I will study with all love and service
To appear worthy of. Act 5, 6.

Ambition, in a private man a vice,
Is, in a prince, the virtue.

The Bashful Lover. Act 1, 2.

And, confident we have the better cause,
Why should we fear the trial ? Ib.

This cause is to be fought, not pleaded. Ib.

Fate cannot rob you of deserved applause,
Whether you win or lose in such a cause. Ib.

When you give,

Give not by halves. Act 2, 3.

No man's a faithful judge in his own cause.

Act 2, 7.

All the eminent and canonised beauties,
By truth recorded, or by poets feigned.

Act 4, 1.

* See Milton : "That last infirmity of noble mind." "A Very Woman" was licensed for the stage in 1634, but appears to have been a revision of a former play. It was printed in 1655

Virtue's but a word;
Fortune rules all.

The Bashful Lover. Act 4, 1.

There is no law for restitution of fees, sir.

The Old Law. Act 1, 1.

A free tongued woman,
And very excellent at telling secrets.

Act 4, 2.

The tale is worth the hearing; and may move

Compassion, and perhaps deserve your love
And approbation.

Believe as you List. Prologue.

And name it gratitude, the word is poor. Ib.

Not till the fire is dying in the grate,
Look we for any kinship with the stars.

Modern Love. St. 4.

It is in truth a most contagious game:
HIDING THE SKELETON, shall be its name.

St. 17.

No state is enviable.

St. 19.

The actors are, it seems, the usual three:
Husband, and wife, and lover. St. 25.

O! have a care of natures that are mute!
St. 35.

How many a thing which we cast to the ground,
When others pick it up becomes a gem!

St. 41.

We drank the pure daylight of honest

She whom I love is hard to catch and conquer,
Hard, but O the glory of the winning were she won!

Love in the Valley. St. 2.

When her mother tends her before the laughing mirror,
Tying up her laces, looping up her hair.

St. 3.

Quaintest, richest carol of all the singing throats. [The blackbird]. St. 17.

As the birds do, so do we,
Bill our mate, and choose our tree.

The Three Singers to Young Blood. 1.

Unfaith clamouring to be coined
To faith by proof.

Earth and Man. St. 41.

But O the truth, the truth! the many eyes
That look on it! the diverse things they see!
A Ballad of Fair Ladies in Revolt. St. 16.

Sir spokesman, sneers are weakness veiling rage. St. 42.

I've studied men from my topsy-turvy
Close, and, I reckon, rather true.

Some are fine fellows: some, right scurvy:
Most, a dash between the two.

Juggling Jerry. St. 7.

They need their pious exercises less
Than schooling in the Pleasures.

A Certain People.

And chiefly for the weaker by the wall,
You bore that lamp of sane benevolence.

To a Friend Lost.

Now Vengeance has a brood of eggs,
But Patience must be hen.

Archduchess Anne. St. 12.

With patient inattention hear him prate.
Bellerophon. St. 4.

Full lasting is the song, though he
The singer, passes : lasting too,
For souls not lent in usury,
The rapture of the forward view.

A Reading of Earth.
The Thrush in February. St. 17.

So near to mute the zephyrs flute
That only leaflets dance.

Outer and Inner. St. 1.

So may we read, and little find them cold :
Not frosty lamps illumining dead space,
Not distant aliens, not senseless Powers.
The fire is in them whereof we are born ;
The music of their motion may be ours.

Meditation under Stars.

Translation of Greek Epigram.*

[Rev.] JAMES MERRICK (1720-1769).

So high at last the contest rose,
From words they almost came to blows.

The Chameleon.

You all are right and all are wrong :
When next you talk of what you view,
Think others see as well as you.

Ib.

Not what we wish, but what we want.

Hymn.

WILLIAM JULIUS MICKLE (1735-1788).

And are ye sure the news is true ?

And are ye sure he's weel ?

Song 3. "There's nae luck about the house."

For there's nae luck about the house ;

There's nae luck at aw ;

There's little pleasure in the house,

When our gude man's awa'.

Ib.

Sae true his heart, sae smooth his speech,

His breath like cauler air,

His very foot has music i't,

As he comes up the stair !

And shall I see his face again ?

And shall I hear him speak ?

How a good meaning
May be corrupted by a misconstruction!

The Old Law. Act 1, 1.

He that hides treasure
Imagines everyone thinks of that place.

Act 4, 2.

When affection only speaks,
Truth is not always there. Ib.

He travels best that knows
When to return. Ib.

Justice indeed
Should ever be close-eared and open mouthed;
That is to hear a little, and speak much.

Act 5, 1.

I fear that in the election of a wife,
As in a project of war, to err but once
Is to be undone for ever.

Anything for a Quiet Life. Act 1, 1.

JOHN STUART MILL (1806-1873).

That comes to all. l. 62.

As far removed from God and light of heaven,
As from the centre thrice to th' utmost pole. l. 73.

But O how fallen! how changed
From him who, in the happy realms of light, Clothed with transcendent brightness didst outshine
Myriads though bright! l. 84.

United thoughts and counsels, equal hope.
And hazard in the glorious enterprise. l. 88.
Though changed in outward lustre, that fixed mind
And high disdain from sense of injured merit. l. 97.

What though the field be lost?
All is not lost; th' unconquerable will,
And study of revenge, immortal hate
And courage never to submit or yield:
And what is else not to be overcome? l. 105.
Vaunting aloud, but racked with deep despair. l. 126.

Fall'n Cherub, to be weak is miserable,
Doing or suffering: but of this be sure,
To do ought good never will be our task,
But ever to do ill our sole delight,
As being the contrary to his high will,
Whom we resist. If then his providence
Out of our evil seek to bring forth good,
Our labour must be to pervert that end,
And out of good still to find means of evil. l. 157.

What re-inforcement we may gain from hope,
If not what resolution from despair. l. 190.

Farewell happy fields,
Where joy for ever dwells: hail horrors, hail! Paradise Lost. Book 1, l. 249.

A mind not to be changed by place or time.
The mind is its own place, and in itself
Can make a heav'n of hell, a hell of heav'n.
What matter where, if I be still the same.
l. 253.

Here we may reign secure, and in my choice
To reign is worth ambition, though in hell:
Better to reign in hell, than serve in heav'n.
l. 261.

In worst extremes, and on the perilous edge
Of battle. l. 276.

Thick as autumnal leaves that strow the brooks
In Vallombrosa. l. 302.

Awake, arise, or be for ever fall'n. l. 330.

The promiscuous crowd. l. 330.

First Moloch, horrid King, besmeared with blood. l. 332.

For spirits, when they please,
Can either sex assume, or both; so soft
And uncompounded is their essence pure.
l. 423.

But, in what shape they choose,
Dilated or condensed, bright or obscure,
Can execute their æery purposes. l. 428.

And when night
Darkens the streets, then wander forth the sons
Of Belial, flown with insolence and wine.
l. 500.

With high words, that bore
Semblance of worth, not substance, gently raised
Their fainted courage, and dispelled their fears. l. 528.

The imperial ensign, which, full high advanced,
Shone like a meteor, streaming to the wind. l. 536.

Sonorous metal blowing martial sounds.
l. 540.

A shout that tore hell's concave, and beyond Frightened the reign of Chaos and old
Night. l. 542.

In perfect phalanx to the Dorian mood
Of flutes and soft recorders. l. 550.

Instead of rage
Deliberate valour breathed, firm and unmoved
With dread of death to flight or foul retreat. l. 553.

Chase
Anguish, and doubt, and fear, and sorrow,
and pain,
From mortal or immortal minds, l. 557.

He above the rest
In shape and gesture proudly eminent,
Stood like a tower; his form had not yet
lost
All her original brightness, nor appeared
Less than archangel ruined, and th' excess
Of glory obscured. l. 589.

In dim eclipse, disastrous twilight sheds
On half the nations, and with fear of change
Perplexes monarchs. l. 597.

Care
Sat on his faded cheek; but under brows
Of dauntless courage, and considerate pride Waiting revenge. l. 600.

Thrice he assayed, and thrice, in spite of
scorn,
Tears, such as angels weep, burst forth. At last Words interwove with sighs found out their
way. l. 619.

That strife
Was not inglorious, though th' event was dire. l. 623.

Who overcomes
By force, hath overcome but half his foe.
l. 648.

Mammon led them on;
Mammon, the least erected Spirit that fell
From heaven; for e'en in heaven his looks and thoughts
Were always downward bent, admiring
more
The riches of heaven's pavement, trodden gold,
Than aught divine or holy else enjoyed
In vision beatific. l. 678.

Let none admire
That riches grow in hell; that soil may best Deserve the precious bane. l. 690.

Anon out of the earth a fabric huge Rose like an exhalation. l. 710.

From morn
To noon he fell, from noon to dewy eve,
A summer's day; and with the setting sun
Dropt from the zenith like a falling star.
l. 742.

The suburb of their straw-built citadel.
l. 773.

While over head the moon
Sits arbitress. l. 784.

High on a throne of royal state, which far
Outshone the wealth of Ormus and of Ind,
Or where the gorgeous East with richest
hand
Showers on her kings barbaric pearl and gold,
Satan exalted sat, by merit raised
To that bad eminence; and, from despair
Thus high uplifted beyond hope.

Book 2, l. 1.

Surer to prosper than prosperity
Could have assured us.

Paradise Lost. Book 2, l. 39.

The strongest and the fiercest Spirit That fought in Heaven, now fiercer by despair.

His trust was with th' Eternal to be deemed Equal in strength; and rather than be less,
Cared not to be at all. l. 44.

My sentence is for open war: of wiles
More unexpert I boast not. l. 51.

Which, if not victory, is yet revenge. l. 105.

But all was false and hollow, though his tongue
Dropped manna, and could make the worse appear

The better reason, to perplex and dash

Th' ethereal mould
Incapable of stain would soon expel
Her mischief, and purge off the baser fire Victorious. Thus repulsed, our final hope
Is flat despair. l. 139.

For who would lose,
Though full of pain, this intellectual being,
Those thoughts that wander through eternity,
To perish rather, swallowed up and lost
In the wide womb of uncreated night,
Devoid of sense and motion? l. 146.

His red right hand.* l. 174.

Unrespited, unpitied, unreprieved,
Ages of hopeless end. l. 185.

Besides what hope the never-ending flight
Of future days may bring. l. 221.

Thus Belial, with words clothed in reason's garb,
Counselled ignoble ease, and peaceful sloth,
Not peace. l. 226.

When everlasting Fate shall yield To fickle Chance, and Chaos judge the strife. l. 232.

Our torments also may in length of time
Become our elements. l. 274.

In his rising seemed
A pillar of state: deep on his front engraven
Deliberation sat and public care;
And princely counsel in his face yet shone,
Majestic though in ruin: sage he stood,
With Atlantean shoulders fit to bear
The weight of mightiest monarchies; his look

Drew audience and attention still as night
Or summer's noon-tide air. l. 301.

To sit in darkness here
Hatching vain empires. l. 377.

* Horace, "Odes," Book 1, 2, "Rubens dextra."

And through the palpable obscure find out
His uncouth way. l. 406.

Long is the way
And hard, that out of hell leads up to light. l. 432.

Refusing to accept as great a share
Of hazard as of honour. l. 452.

Their rising all at once was as the sound
Of thunder heard remote. l. 476.

The lowering element Scowls o'er the darkened landscape snow, or shower. l. 490.

O shame to men! devil with devil damned
Firm concord holds; men only disagree
Of creatures rational. l. 496.

For eloquence the soul, song charms the sense. l. 556.

And reasoned high.
Of providence, foreknowledge, will, and fate,
Fixed fate, free will, foreknowledge absolute,
And found no end, in wandering mazes lost. l. 558.

Vain wisdom all, and false philosophy:
Yet with a pleasing sorcery could charm
Pain for a while, or anguish, and excite
Fallacious hope, or arm th' obdured breast
With stubborn patience as with triple steel. l. 565.

A gulf profound as that Serbonian bog.
l. 592.

And feel by turns the bitter change
Of fierce extremes, extremes by change more fierce,
From beds of raging fire to starve in ice
Their soft ethereal warmth, and there to pine
Immovable, infixed, and frozen round
Periods of time, thence hurried back to fire. l. 598.

Worse
Than fables yet have feigned, or fear conceived,
Gorgons, and Hydras, and Chimæras dire. l. 626.

If shape it might be called that shape had none. l. 667.

Black it stood as night,
Fierce as ten Furies, terrible as hell,
And shook a dreadful dart. l. 670.

Whence and what art thou, execrable shape? l. 681.

Back to thy punishment
False fugitive, and to thy speed add wings. l. 699.

The grisly terror. [Death.] l. 704.

Their fatal hands
No second stroke intend. l. 712.

So frowned the mighty combatants, that hell
Grew darker at their frown.

Paradise Lost. Book 2, l. 719.

Hell trembled at the hideous name, and sighed
From all her caves, and back resounded
Death. l. 788.
Grim death. l. 804.

Death
Grinned horrible a ghastly smile, to hear
His famine should be filled. l. 845.

The fatal key,
Sad instrument of all our woe. l. 871.

She opened; but to shut
Excelled her power. l. 883.
For hot, cold, moist, and dry, four champions fierce,
Strive here for mastery. l. 898.

Chaos umpire sits,
And by decision more embroils the fray
By which he reigns: next him high arbiter
Chance governs all. Into this wild abyss,
The womb of Nature, and perhaps her grave. l. 907.

To compare
Great things with small. l. 921.
With head, hands, wings, or feet, pursues
his way,
And swims, or sinks, or wades, or creeps, or flies. l. 949.

Sable-vested Night, eldest of things. l. 962.

And Discord, with a thousand various mouths. l. 967.

With ruin upon ruin, rout on rout,
Confusion worse confounded. l. 995.

Havoc, and spoil, and ruin are my gain.
l. 1009.

So he with difficulty and labour hard Moved on, with difficulty and labour he.
l. 1021.

This pendent world, in bigness as a star
Of smallest magnitude close by the moon.*
l. 1052.

Hail, holy Light, offspring of Heaven first-born,
Or of th' Eternal co-eternal beam,
May I express thee unblamed?

Book 3, l. 1.

The rising world of waters dark and deep.
l. 11.

Then feed on thoughts, that voluntary
move
Harmonious numbers. l. 37.

Seasons return, but not to me returns
Day, or the sweet approach of even or morn,
Or sight of vernal bloom, or summer's rose,
Or flocks, or herds, or human face divine.
l. 41.

From the cheerful ways of men
Cut off, and for the book of knowledge fair
Presented with an universal blank
Of Nature's works, to me expunged and rased,
And wisdom at one entrance quite shut out.
l. 46.
Sufficient to have stood, though free to fall.
l. 99.

To prayer, repentance, and obedience due.
l. 191.
Loud as from numbers without number,
sweet
As from blest voices, uttering joy. l. 346.
Dark with excessive bright. l. 380.

O unexampled love!
Love nowhere to be found less than Divine!
l. 410.

Embryos and idiots, eremites and friars White, black, and grey, with all their trumpery. l. 474.

Into a Limbo large and broad, since called
The Paradise of Fools, to few unknown.
l. 495.

Unspeakable desire to see, and know
All these His wondrous works, but chiefly man. l. 663.

For neither man nor angel can discern
Hypocrisy, the only evil that walks
Invisible, except to God alone. l. 682.

And oft, though Wisdom wake, Suspicion sleeps
At Wisdom's gate, and to Simplicity
Resigns her charge, while Goodness thinks no ill
Where no ill seems. l. 686.

Thy desire, which tends to know
The works of God, thereby to glorify
The great Work-Master, leads to no excess
That reaches blame, but rather merits praise
The more it seems excess. l. 694.

The hell within him. Book 4, l. 20.

Now Conscience wakes Despair
That slumbered; wakes the bitter memory
Of what he was, what is, and what must be.
l. 23.

At whose sight all the stars
Hide their diminished heads. l. 34.

And understood not that a grateful mind
By owing, owes not, but still pays, at once Indebted and discharged. l. 55.

* Cf. "Measure for Measure," 3, 1.

Me miserable! which way shall I fly
 Infinite wrath, and infinite despair?
 Which way I fly is Hell; myself am Hell;
 And in the lowest deep a lower deep,
 Still threatening to devour me opens wide,
 To which the Hell I suffer seems a Heaven.

Paradise Lost. Book 4, l. 73.

Such joy ambition finds. l. 92.
 So farewell hope, and with hope farewell
 fear,
 Farewell remorse: all good to me is lost;
 Evil, be thou my good. l. 108.

The first

That practised falsehood under saintly show, Deep malice to conceal, couched with revenge. l. 121.

Sabeian odours from the spicy shore
 Of Araby the Blest. l. 162.

So clomb this first grand thief into God's fold;
 So since into his church lewd hirelings climb.
 Thence up he flew, and on the tree of life
 The middle tree and highest there that grew,
 Sat like a cormorant l. 192.

The unpierced shade. l. 245.

Groves whose rich trees wept odorous gums and balm. l. 243.

Flowers of all hue, and without thorn the rose. l. 256.

The mantling vine. l. 253.

For contemplation he and valour formed;
 For softness she and sweet attractive grace;
 He for God only, she for God in him:
 His fair large front and eye sublime declared
 Absolute rule; and hyacinthine locks
 Round from his parted forelock manly hung Clust'ring, but not beneath his shoulders broad. l. 297.

Which implied

Subjection, but required with gentle sway
 And by her yielded, by him best received;
 Yielded with coy submission, modest pride,
 And sweet reluctant amorous delay. l. 307.

Adam, the goodliest man of men since born
 His sons; the fairest of her daughters Eve. l. 323.

So spake the fiend, and with necessity,
 The tyrant's plea, excused his devilish deeds. l. 393.

Imparadised in one another's arms. l. 506.

Now came still evening on, and twilight grey
 Had in her sober livery all things clad. l. 598.

All but the wakeful nightingale;
 She all night long her amorous descant sung;
 Silence was pleased. Now glowed the firmament

With living sapphires. l. 602.

Till the moon

Rising in clouded majesty, at length
 Apparent queen, unveiled her peerless light,
 And o'er the dark her silver mantle threw. l. 606.

The timely dew of sleep. l. 614.

God is thy law, thou mine; to know no
 more

Is woman's happiest knowledge and her praise. l. 637.

With thee conversing I forget all time;
 All seasons and their change, all please alike.

Sweet is the breath of Morn, her rising
 sweet,

With charm of earliest birds; pleasant the Sun,

When first on this delightful land he spreads
 His orient beams, on herb, tree, fruit, and flower,

 Glist'ring with dew; fragrant the fertile earth

After soft showers; and sweet the coming on

Of grateful evening mild; then silent Night,
 With this her solemn bird, and this fair
 Moon,

And these the gems of Heaven, her starry
 train;

But neither breath of Morn, when she ascends

With charm of earliest birds; nor rising Sun
 On this delightful land; nor herb, fruit,

flower,
 Glist'ring with dew; nor fragrance after showers;

Nor grateful evening mild; nor silent Night,
 With this her solemn bird, nor walk by
 Moon,

Or glittering starlight, without thee is sweet. l. 639.

Millions of spiritual creatures walk the earth

Unseen, both when we wake and when we sleep. l. 677.

Eased the putting off

These troublesome disguises which we wear. l. 739.

Hail wedded love, mysterious law, true source

Of human offspring, sole propriety
 In Paradise of all things common else. l. 756.

Blest pair! and O yet happiest, if ye seek No happier state, and know to know no
 more. l. 774.

Squat like a toad, close at the ear of Eve. l. 800.

Vain hopes, vain aims, inordinate desires. l. 808.

Him thus intent Ithuriel with his spear Touched lightly; for no falsehood can endure
 Touch of celestial temper, but returns
 Of force to its own likeness.

Paradise Lost. Book 4, l. 810.

Not to know me argues yourselves unknown.
l. 830.

Abashed the devil stood,
 And felt how awful goodness is. l. 846.

Came not all hell broke loose? l. 918.

Then, when I am thy captive, talk of chains.
l. 970.

Like Teneriff or Atlas, unremov'd. l. 987.

Now dreadful deeds
 Might have ensued; nor only Paradise
 In this commotion, but the starry cope
 Of Heaven perhaps, or all the elements
 At least had gone to wrack, disturbed and torn

With violence of this conflict. l. 990.

Fled Murm'ring, and with him fled the shades of night. l. 1014.

Now morn her rosy steps in th' eastern clime
 Advancing, sowed the earth with orient pearl. Book 5, l. 1.

His sleep
 Was aery-light, from pure digestion bred.
l. 3.

Hung over her enamoured, and beheld
 Beauty, which whether waking or asleep,
 Shot forth peculiar graces. l. 13.

My fairest, my espoused, my latest found,
 Heaven's last best gift, my ever new delight.
l. 18.

Since good, the more
 Communicated, more abundant grows. l. 71.

Best image of myself and dearer half. l. 96.

These are thy glorious works, Parent of Good,

Almighty, thine this universal frame,
 Thus wondrous fair: thyself how wondrous then! l. 153.

Fairest of stars, last in the train of night,
 If better thou belong not to the morn,
 Sure pledge of day. l. 166.

A wilderness of sweets. l. 294.

Seems another morn
 Risen on mid-noon. l. 310.

On hospitable thoughts intent. l. 332.

Nor jealousy
 Was understood, the injured lover's hell.
l. 449.

The bright consummate flower.
l. 481.

Thrones, Dominations, Princedoms, Virtues,
 Powers. l. 601.

All seemed well pleased; all seemed, but were not all. l. 617.

They eat, they drink, and in communion
 sweet,
 Quaff immortality and joy. l. 637.

Soon as midnight brought on the dusky hour
 Friendliest to sleep and silence. l. 667.

An host
 Innumerable as the stars of night.
 Or stars of morning, dew-drops which the
 sun

Impearls on every leaf and every flower.
l. 744.

Begirt th' almighty throne
 Beseeching or besieging. l. 863.

So spake the Seraph Abdiel, faithful found Among the faithless, faithful only he;
 Among innumerable false, unmoved,
 Unshaken, unseduced, unterrified,
 His loyalty he kept, his love, his zeal. l. 896.

Till morn,
 Waked by the circling hours, with rosy hand
 Unbarred the gates of light. Book 6, l. 2.

Servant of God, well done! well hast thou fought
 The better fight, who singly hast maintained
 Against revolted multitudes the cause
 Of truth. l. 29.

Universal reproach (far worse to bear Than violence). l. 34.

On they move
 Indissolubly firm. l. 68.

Arms on armour clashing brayed
 Horrible discord, and the madding wheels
 Of brazen chariots raged; dire was the noise
 Of conflict. l. 209.

Cancelled from Heaven, and sacred memory,
 Nameless in dark oblivion let them dwell.
l. 379.

Therefore eternal silence be their doom
l. 385.

But live content, which is the calmest life:
 But pain is perfect misery, the worst
 Of evils, and excessive, overturns
 All patience. l. 461.

He onward came; far off his coming shone.
l. 768.

Though fall'n on evil days,
 On evil days though fall'n, and evil tongues.
Book 7, l. 25.

Fit audience find, though few;
 But drive far off the barb'rous dissonance
 Of Bacchus and his revellers. l. 31.

Heaven opened wide
 Her ever-during gates, harmonious sound!
 On golden hinges moving. l. 205.

Endued
With sanctity of reason.
Paradise Lost. Book 7, l. 507.

The angel ended, and in Adam's ear
So charming left his voice, that he awhile
'Thought him still speaking, still stood fixed to hear. Book 8, l. 1.

And grace that won who saw to wish her stay. l. 43.

Gird the sphere
With centric and eccentric scribbled o'er,
Cycle and epicycle, orb in orb. l. 82.

Consider first, that great
Or bright infers not excellence. l. 90.

God, to remove His ways from human sense, Placed heaven from earth so far, that earthly sight
If it presume, might err in things too high,
And no advantage gain. l. 119.

Heaven is for thee too high
To know what passes there. Be lowly wise:
Think only what concerns thee and thy being;
Dream not of other worlds, what creatures
there
Live, in what state, condition, or degree,
Contented that thus far hath been revealed
Not of earth only, but of highest heaven.
l. 172.

Taught to live
The easiest way, nor with perplexing
thoughts
To interrupt the sweet of life. l. 182.

To know
That which before us lies in daily life,
Is the prime wisdom; what is more is fume,
Or emptiness, or fond impertinence. l. 192.

And feel that I am happier than I know.
l. 232.

In solitude
What happiness? Who can enjoy alone,
Or all enjoying, what contentment find?
l. 364.

I waked
To find her, or for ever to deplore
Her loss, and other pleasures all abjure.
l. 478.

Grace was in all her steps! Heaven in her eye!
In every gesture dignity and love! l. 488.
Her virtue, and the conscience of her worth,
That would be wooed, and not unsought be won. l. 502.

All heaven,
And happy constellations on that hour
Shed their selectest influence! l. 511.
To light the bridal lamp. l. 520.

What she wills to do or say
Seems wisest, virtuousest, discreetest, best:
All higher knowledge in her presence falls
Degraded. l. 549.

Accuse not Nature; she hath done her part;
Do thou but thine, and be not diffident
Of wisdom. l. 561.

Oft-times nothing profits more Than self-esteem, grounded on just and right. l. 571.

In loving thou dost well, in passion not,
Wherein true love consists not. Love refines
The thoughts, and heart enlarges l. 588.

Those graceful acts,
Those thousand decencies, that daily flow
From all her words and actions. l. 600.

With a smile that glowed
Celestial rosy red, love's proper hue. l. 618.
My unpremeditated verse. Book 9, l. 24.

Long choosing, and beginning late l. 26.
An age too late. l. 44.
But what will not ambition and revenge
Descend to? l. 163.

Revenge, at first, though sweet,
Bitter ere long, back on itself recoils. l. 171.

For nothing lovelier can be found
In woman, than to study household good,
And good works in her husband to promote
l. 232.

Smiles from reason flow,
To brute denied, and are of love the food.
l. 239.

For solitude sometimes is best society,
And short retirement urges sweet return.
l. 249.

The wife, where danger or dishonour lurks,
Safest and seemliest by her husband stays;
Who guards her, or with her the worst endures. l. 267.

At shut of evening flowers. l. 278.
For he who tempts, though in vain, at least asperses

The tempted with dishonour foul. l. 296.
Wouldst thou approve thy constancy, approve

First thy obedience. l. 367.

As one who, long in populous city pent,
Where houses thick, and sewers annoy the
air. l. 445.

She fair, divinely fair, fit love for Gods.
l. 489

So glozed the Tempter. l. 549.

Hope elevates, and joy
Brightens his crest. l. 633.

God so commanded, and left that command
Sole daughter of his voice.

Paradise Lost. Book 9, l. 652.

Earth felt the wound; and Nature from her seat

Sighing, through all her works gave signs of
woe. l. 782.

Inferior, who is free? l. 825.

In her face excuse

Came prologue, and apology too prompt.
l. 853.

A pillared shade

High overarched, and echoing walks between. l. 1106.

Thus it shall befall

Him, who to worth in women overtrusting, Lets her will rule. Restraint she will not brook;

And left to herself, if evil thence ensue,
She first his weak indulgence will accuse.
l. 1182.

And of their vain contest appeared no end.
l. 1189.

Yet shall I temper so

Justice with mercy, as may illustrate most
Them fully satisfied, and thee appease.

Book 10, l. 77.

This woman, whom thou mad'st to be my help,

And gav'st me as thy perfect gift, so good,
So fit, so acceptable, so divine. l. 137.

Sagacious of his quarry from so far.
l. 281.

Returned

Successful beyond hope. l. 462.

He hears

On all sides, from innumerable tongues,
A dismal universal hiss, the sound
Of public scorn. l. 506.

How gladly would I meet

Mortality, my sentence, and be earth
Insensible! how glad would lay me down,
As in my mother's lap! There I should rest,

And sleep secure. l. 775.

As one disarmed, his anger all he lost.
l. 945.

Prevenient grace descending had removed

And to the faithful, death the gate of life.
l. 571.

Some natural tears they dropped, but wiped them soon;
The world was all before them, where to choose Their place of rest, and Providence their guide.
They, hand in hand, with wandering steps and slow
Through Eden took their solitary way.

The troublesome and modern bondage of

O dark, dark, dark, amid the blaze of noon,
Irrecoverably dark, total eclipse
Without all hope of day!

Samson Agonistes. l. 80.
To live a life half dead, a living death. l. 100.

Wisest men
Have erred, and by bad women been deceived;

And shall again, pretend they ne'er so wise.
l. 210.

Just are the ways of God,
And justifiable to men;
Unless there be who think not God at all.
l. 293.

Select and sacred, glorious for a while,
The miracle of men. l. 363.

What boots it at one gate to make defence,
And at another to let in the foe? l. 560.

But who is this? what thing of sea or land?
Female of sex it seems,
That so bedecked, ornate, and gay,
Comes this way sailing
Like a stately ship
Of Tarsus, bound for th' isles
Of Javan or Gadire,
With all her bravery on, and tackle trim,
Sails filled, and streamers waving,
Court'd by all the winds that hold them
play,
An amber scent of odorous perfume
Her harbinger. l. 710.

If weakness may excuse,
What murderer, what traitor, parricide,
Incestuous, sacrilegious, but may plead it?
All wickedness is weakness. l. 831.

That ground'd maxim,
So ripe and celebrated in the mouths
Of wisest men, that to the public good
Private respects must yield. l. 865.

Against the law of nature, law of nations.
l. 889.

In argument with men, a woman ever Goes by the worse, whatever be her cause.
l. 903.

Yet winds to seas

Love-quarrels oft in pleasing concord end.
l. 1008.

It is not virtue, wisdom, valour, wit,
Strength, comeliness of shape, or amplest
merit,
That woman's love can win or long inherit;
But what it is, hard is to say,
Harder to hit,
Which way soever men refer it. l. 1010.

What pilot so expert but needs must wreck, Imbarked with such a steers-mate at the helm? l. 1044.

He's gone, and who knows how he may

Samson hath quit himself
 Like Samson, and heroically hath finished
 A life heroic. l. 1709.

Nothing is here for tears, nothing to wail
 Or knock the breast; no weakness, no contempt,
 Dispraise, or blame, nothing but well and fair
 And what may quiet us in a death so noble.
 l. 1721.

Hence, loathed Melancholy,
 Of Cerberus and blackest Midnight born,
 In Stygian cave forlorn,
 'Mongst horrid shapes, and shrieks, and sights unholy! L'Allegro. l. 1.

So buxom, blithe, and debonair. l. 24.
 Haste thee, Nymph, and bring with thee
 Jest and youthful Jollity,

With antique pillars massy proof,
 And storied windows richly dight,
 Casting a dim religious light;
 There let the pealing organ blow
 To the full-voiced quire below,
 In service high, and anthems clear
 As may, with sweetness, through mine ear,
 Dissolve me into ecstasies,
 And bring all heaven before mine eyes.

Of Attic taste ? To Mr. Lawrence.

In mirth, that after no repenting draws.
To Cyriac Skinner.

To measure life learn thou betimes, and
 know,
 Toward solid good what leads the nearest
 way;
 For other things mild Heaven a time
 ordains,
 And disapproves that care, though wise in show,
 That with superfluous burden loads the day,
 And when God sends a cheerful hour, refrains. Sonnets. To Cyriac Skinner.

 Since life's best joys consist in peace and ease;
 And though but few can serve yet all may please;
 O! let th' ungentle spirit learn from hence,
 A small unkindness is a great offence.
 To spread large bounties though we wish in vain
 Yet all may shun the guilt of giving pain.

True ease in writing comes from art, not chance,
As those move easiest who have learned to dance.

'Tis not enough no harshness gives offence,
The sound must seem an echo to the sense:
Soft is the strain when zephyr gently blows,
And the smooth stream in smoother numbers flows;

But when loud surges lash the sounding shore,
The hoarse, rough verse should like the torrent roar:

When Ajax strives some rock's vast weight to throw,
The line too labours, and the words move slow;

Not so when swift Camilla scours the plain,
Flies o'er the unbending corn, and skims along the main.

A mighty maze! but not without a plan.

An Essay on Man. Epistle 1, l. 1.

Together let us beat this ample field,
Try what the open, what the covert yield;
The latent tracts, the giddy heights, explore
Of all who blindly creep, or sightless soar;
Eye nature's walks, shoot folly as it flies,
And catch the manners living as they rise;
Laugh where we must, be candid where we can;

But vindicate the ways of God to man.
Say first, of God above, of man below
What can we reason, but from what we know? l. 8.

Observe how system into system runs,
What other planets circle other suns,
What varied being peoples every star. l. 25.

Heaven from all creatures hides the book of fate,
All but the page prescribed, their present state. l. 77.

Pleased to the last, he crops the flowery food,
And licks the hand just raised to shed his blood. l. 83.

Who sees with equal eye, as God of all,
A hero perish, or a sparrow fall,
Atoms or systems into ruin hurled,
And now a bubble burst, and now a world. l. 87.

Hope springs eternal in the human breast:
Man never is, but always to be blest:
The soul, uneasy and confined from home,
Rests and expatiates in a life to come.
Lo, the poor Indian! whose untutored mind

Sees God in clouds, or hears him in the wind;
His soul proud science never taught to stray
Far as the solar walk, or milky way;
Yet simple nature to his hope has given
Behind the cloud-topped hill, an humbler heaven. l. 95.

But thinks, admitted to that equal sky,
His faithful dog shall bear him company.
Go wiser thou! and in thy scale of sense
Weigh thy opinion against Providence. l. 111.

In pride, in reasoning pride our error lies;
All quit their sphere, and rush into the skies.
Pride still is aiming at the blest abodes,
Men would be angels, angels would be gods. l. 123.

The first Almighty Cause
Acts not by partial, but by general laws. l. 145.

But all subsists by elemental strife,
And passions are the elements of life. l. 169.
Die of a rose in aromatic pain. l. 200.

Feels at each thread and lives along the line. l. 217.

What thin partitions sense from thought divide! l. 226.

From nature's chain, whatever link you strike,
Tenth, or ten thousandth, breaks the chain alike. l. 245.

All are but parts of one stupendous whole,
Whose body nature is, and God the soul. l. 263.

As full, as perfect, in vile man that mourns,
As the rapt seraph that adores and burns:
To him no high, no low, no great, no small;
He fills, he bounds, connects, and equals all. l. 276.

All nature is but art, unknown to thee;
All chance, direction, which thou canst not see;
All discord, harmony not understood;
All partial evil, universal good:
And, spite of pride, in erring reason's spite,
One truth is clear, whatever is, is right. l. 289.

Know then thyself, presume not God to scan;
The proper study of mankind is man.*
Placed on this isthmus of a middle state,
A being darkly wise, and rudely great:
With too much knowledge for the sceptic side,
With too much weakness for the stoic's pride. Epistle 2, l. 1.

* "La vraie science et le vrai étude de l'homme c'est l'homme."—PIERRE CHARRON (1541-1603), "Treatise on Wisdom," Book 1, chap. 1. (In the first edition of "Moral Essays," the line appeared: "The only science of mankind is man.")

Chaos of thought and passion, all confused;
Still by himself abused, or disabused;
Created half to rise, and half to fall;
Great lord of all things, yet a prey to all;
Sole judge of truth, in endless error hurled:
The glory, jest, and riddle of the world!

An Essay on Man. Epistle 2, l. 13.

Instruct the planets in what orbs to run,
Correct old time, and regulate the sun. l. 21.

What Reason weaves, by Passion is undone.
l. 42.

Two principles in human nature reign;
Self-love to urge, and reason, to restrain:
Nor this a good, nor that a bad, we call;
Each works its end, to move or govern all.
l. 53.

Fixed like a plant on his peculiar spot,
To draw nutrition, propagate, and rot;
Or meteor-like, flame lawless through the void,
Destroying others, by himself destroyed.
l. 63.

Let subtle schoolmen teach these friends to fight,
More studious to divide than to unite. l. 81.

Pleasure, or wrong or rightly understood,
Our greatest evil, or our greatest good.
l. 91.

On life's vast ocean diversely we sail,
Reason the card, but passion is the gale.
l. 107.

All spread their charms, but charm not all
alike;
On different senses different objects strike.
l. 127.

And hence one master passion in the breast,
Like Aaron's serpent, swallows up the rest.
l. 131.

The young disease, that must subdue at length,
Grows with his growth, and strengthens with his strength.
l. 135.

Envy, to which the ignoble mind's a slave,
Is emulation in the learn'd or brave. l. 191.

Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As, to be hated, needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.
But where's the extreme of vice, was ne'er
agreed:

Ask where's the north? at York, 'tis on the Tweed;
In Scotland, at the Orcades; and there,
At Greenland, Zembla, or the Lord knows
where. l. 217.

Virtuous and vicious every man must be,
Few in the extreme, but all in the degree.
l. 231.

Whate'er the passion, knowledge, fame, or pelf,
Not one will change his neighbour with himself.

The learn'd is happy nature to explore,
The fool is happy that he knows no more.
l. 261.

Behold the child, by Nature's kindly law,
Pleased with a rattle, tickled with a straw:
Some livelier plaything gives his youth
delight,

A little louder, but as empty quite:
Scarfs, garters, gold, amuse his riper
stage,
And beads and prayer-books are the toys of
age:
Pleased with this bauble still, as that before;
Till tired he sleeps, and life's poor play is o'er. l. 276.

In folly's cup still laughs the bubble joy.
l. 283.

The hour concealed, and so remote the
fear,
Death still draws nearer, never seeming near. Epistle 3, l. 76.

Whether with reason, or with instinct
blest,
Know, all enjoy that power which suits
them best;
To bliss alike by that direction tend,
And find the means proportioned to their
end. l. 79.

The state of nature was the reign of God.
l. 148.

Learn of the little nautilus to sail,
Spread the thin oar, and catch the driving gale. l. 177.

In vain thy reason finer webs shall draw,
Entangle justice in her net of law. l. 191.

The enormous faith of many made for one.
l. 242.

Forced into virtue thus, by self-defence,
Ev'n kings learned justice and benevolence:
Self-love forsook the path it first pursued,
And found the private in the public good.
l. 279.

More powerful each as needful to the rest,
And in proportion as it blesses, blest. l. 299.

For forms of government let fools contest,
Whate'er is best administered is best:
For modes of faith let graceless zealots
fight;
His can't be wrong whose life is in the
right. l. 303.

In Faith and Hope the world will disagree,
But all mankind's concern is Charity. l. 307.

Oh happiness! our being's end and aim!
Good, pleasure, ease, content, whate'er thy
name:

That something still which prompts the eternal sigh,
For which we bear to live, or dare to die.

An Essay on Man. Epistle 4, l. 1.

Fixed to no spot is happiness sincere,
'Tis nowhere to be found, or everywhere;
'Tis never to be bought, but always free.

l. 15.

There needs but thinking right, and meaning well.

l. 32.

Order is Heaven's first law, and this confest,
Some are, and must be, greater than the rest.

l. 49.

Reason's whole pleasure, all the joys of sense,
Lie in three words, health, peace, and competence.

But health consists with temperance alone.

l. 79.

But sometimes virtue starves, while vice is fed.

What then? Is the reward of virtue bread?

l. 150.

What nothing earthly gives, or can destroy,
The soul's calm sunshine, and the heart-felt joy.

l. 167.

Honour and shame from no condition rise;
Act well your part; there all the honour lies.

l. 193.

Worth makes the man, and want of it, the
fellow;

The rest is all but leather or prunella.*

l. 203.

But by your father's worth if yours you rate,
Count me those only who were good and great.

Go! if your ancient, but ignoble blood
Has crept through scoundrels ever since the flood,

Go! and pretend your family is young;
Nor own your fathers have been wrong so long.

What can ennoble sots, or slaves, or cowards?
Alas! not all the blood of all the Howards.
Look next on greatness; say where greatness lies?

"Where, but among the heroes and the wise?"

Heroes are much the same, the points
agreed,

From Macedonia's madman to the Swede.

l. 209.

A wit's a feather, and a chief a rod;
An honest man's the noblest work of God.

l. 247.

All fame is foreign, but of true desert;
Plays round the head, but comes not to the heart:

One self-approving hour whole years outweighs

Of stupid starers, and of loud huzzas;
And more true joy Marcellus exiled feels,
Than Caesar with a senate at his heels.

l. 253.

Painful pre-eminence! yourself to view
Above life's weakness, and its comforts too.

l. 267.

If parts allure thee, think how Bacon shined,
The wisest, brightest, meanest of mankind:
Or, ravished with the whistling of a name,
See Cromwell, damned to everlasting fame!

l. 281.

Know then this truth (enough for man to know),
"Virtue alone is happiness below."

l. 309.

Slave to no sect, who takes no private road,
But looks through nature up to nature's God.†

l. 331.

The centre moved, a circle straight succeeds,
Another still, and still another spreads.

l. 365.

Formed by thy converse, happily to steer
From grave to gay, from lively to severe.

l. 379.

Oh! while along the stream of time thy
name

Expanded flies, and gathers all its fame,
Say, shall my little bark attendant sail,
Pursue the triumph, and partake the gale?

l. 333.

Thou wert my guide, philosopher, and friend.

l. 390.

For wit's false mirror held up nature's light;

Showed erring pride, whatever is, is right;
That reason, passion, answer one great aim;
That true self-love and social are the same;
That virtue only makes our bliss below;
And all our knowledge is, ourselves to know.

l. 393.

Father of all! in every age,
In every clime adored,
By saint, by savage, and by sage,
Jehovah, Jove, or Lord!
Thou Great First Cause, least understood:
Who all my sense confined
To know but this, that thou art good,
And that myself am blind.

The Universal Prayer.

* "Corcillum est quod homines facit, cetera quiescilia omnia."—PETRONIUS ARBITER, c. 75.

† Stated by Warton to be verbatim from Bolingbroke's "Letters to Pope."

And binding nature fast in fate
Left free the human will.

The Universal Prayer.

What conscience dictates to be done,
Or warns me not to do,
This, teach me more than hell to shun,
That, more than heaven pursue. lb.

And deal damnation round the land,
On each I judge thy foe. lb.

Save me alike from foolish pride
Or impious discontent. lb.

Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the fault I see;
That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me. lb.

And yet the fate of all extremes is such,
Men may be read, as well as books, too
much.

To observations which ourselves we make,
We grow more partial, for the observer's sake.

Moral Essays. (In Five Epistles to several persons.) Epistle 1. To Lord Cobham.
l. 9.

Like following life through creatures you dissect,
You lose it in the moment you detect. l. 29.

All manners take a tincture from our own,
Or some discoloured through our passions shown.

Or fancy's beam enlarges, multiplies,
Contracts, inverts, and gives ten thousand dyes. l. 33.

When half our knowledge we must snatch, not take. l. 40.

Itch of vulgar praise. l. 60.

Who reasons wisely is not therefore wise,
His pride in reasoning, not in acting lies.
l. 117.

'Tis from high life high characters are drawn;
A saint in crape is twice a saint in lawn.
l. 135.

'Tis education forms the common mind,
Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined.
l. 149.

Manners with fortunes, humours turn with climes,
Tenets with books, and principles with times. l. 172.

Search, then, the ruling passion: there alone

The wild are constant, and the cunning
known;

The fool consistent, and the false sincere;
Priests, princes, women, no dissemblers
here. l. 174.

Wharton, the scorn and wonder of our days,
Whose ruling passion was the lust of praise.
l. 179.

"Odious! in woollen! 'twould a saint provoke!"
Were the last words that poor Narcissa spoke. l. 246.

And you, brave Cobham! to the latest
breath,
Shall feel your ruling passion strong in death:

Such in those moments as in all the past,
"Oh, save my country, heaven!" shall be your last. l. 262.

Nothing so true as what you once let fall,
"Most women have no characters at all,"
Epistle 2. To a Lady. [Martha Blount.] l. 1.

Whether the charmer sinner it or saint it;
If folly grow romantic, I must paint it.
l. 15.

Choose a firm cloud, before it fall, and
in it;
Catch, ere she change, the Cynthia of this minute. l. 19.

Fine by defect and delicately weak. l. 43.

See sin in state, majestically drunk. l. 69.

With too much quickness ever to be taught;

With too much thinking to have common thought. l. 97.

Offend her, and she knows not to forgive;
Oblige her, and she'll hate you while you live:

But die, and she'll adore you—then the bust

And temple rise—then fall again to dust.
l. 137.

To heirs unknown descends the unguarded
store,

Or wanders, heaven-directed, to the poor.
l. 149.

Virtue she finds too painful an endeavour,
Content to dwell in decencies for ever.
l. 163.

Men, some to business, some to pleasure take;

But every woman is at heart a rake:
Men, some to quiet, some to public strife;
But every lady would be queen for life.
l. 215.

Pleasures the sex, as children birds, pursue,
Still out of reach, yet never out of view.
l. 231.

See how the world its veterans rewards!
A youth of frolics, an old age of cards.
l. 243.

Oh! blest with temper, whose unclouded ray

Can make to-morrow cheerful as to-day;
She, who can love a sister's charms, or hear
Sighs for a daughter with unwounded ear;
She who ne'er answers till a husband cools,
Or, if she rules him, never shows she rules.
Charms by accepting, by submitting sways,
Yet has her humour most when she obeys.

Moral Essays. Epistle 2, l. 257.

And mistress of herself, though china fall.
l. 268.

Woman's at best a contradiction still.
l. 270.

Who shall decide, when doctors disagree,
And soundest casuists, like you and me?
Epistle 3. To Lord Bathurst. l. 1.

Like doctors thus, when much dispute has past,
We find our tenets just the same as last.
l. 15.

Blest paper-credit! last and best supply!
That lends corruption lighter wings to fly!
l. 39.

But thousands die, without or this or that,
Die, and endow a college, or a cat. l. 95.

The ruling passion, be it what it will,
The ruling passion conquers reason still.
l. 153.

Extremes in nature equal good produce,
Extremes in man concur to general use.
l. 161.

Who sees pale Mammon pine amidst his
store,
Sees but a backward steward for the poor;
This year a reservoir, to keep and spare;
The next, a fountain, spouting through his heir,
In lavish streams to quench a country's thirst,
And men and dogs shall drink him till they burst. l. 171.

Rise, honest muse! and sing the Man of Ross! l. 250.

Ye little stars! hide your diminished rays.
l. 282.

Who builds a church to God, and not to fame,
Will never mark the marble with his name.
l. 285.

In the worst inn's worst room. l. 299.

And tape-tied curtains, never meant to draw.
l. 302.

Alas! how changed from him,
That life of pleasure, and that soul of whim!
l. 305.

Where London's column, pointing at the skies,
Like a tall bully, lifts the head, and lies.
l. 339.

Constant at church, and change. l. 347.

But Satan now is wiser than of yore,
And tempts by making rich, not making poor. l. 351.

The tempter saw his time; the work he plied;
Stocks and subscriptions poured on every side,

Till all the demon makes his full descent
In one abundant shower of cent. per cent.,
Sinks deep within him, and possesses whole,
Then dubs director, and secures his soul.
l. 369.

Good sense, which only is the gift of Heaven,
And though no science fairly worth the seven.

Epistle 4. To the Earl of Burlington. l. 43.

Lo, some are vellum, and the rest as good
For all his lordship knows, but they are wood. l. 139.

Light quirks of music, broken and uneven,
Make the soul dance upon a jig to heaven.
l. 143.

To rest, the cushion and soft dean invite,
Who never mentions hell to ears polite.
l. 149.

Bid harbours open, public ways extend,
Bid temples, worthier of the God, ascend;
Bid the broad arch the dangerous flood contain,
The mole projected break the roaring main;
Back to his bounds their subject sea command,
And roll obedient rivers through the land;
These honours, Peace to happy Britain brings,
These are imperial works, and worthy kings. l. 197.

See the wild waste of all-devouring years!
How Rome her own sad sepulchre appears!

Epistle 5. To Addison. l. 1.

The sacred rust of twice ten hundred years.
l. 33.

Statesman, yet friend to truth! of soul sincere,
In action faithful, and in honour clear;
Who broke no promise, served no private
end,
Who gained no title, and who lost no friend,
Ennobled by himself, by all approved,
And praised, unenvied, by the muse he loved.* l. 67.

* This line in the epitaph in Westminster Abbey on James Craggs, reads "Praised, wept, and honoured, by the muse he loved."

Shut, shut the door, good John ! fatigued I
said,
Tie up the knocker ; say I'm sick, I'm dead.

Prologue to the Satires.
Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot. l. 1.

Even Sunday shines no Sabbath day to me.
l. 12.

A clerk, foredoomed his father's soul to cross,

Who pens a stanza, when he should engross.
l. 17.

Friend to my life which did you not prolong,
The world had wanted many an idle song.
l. 27.

Obliged by hunger and request of friends.
l. 44.

Fired that the house reject him, " 'S death
I'll print it,
And shame the fools." l. 61.

No creature smarts so little as a fool. l. 84.

Who shames a scribbler ? break one cobweb through,

He spins the slight, self-pleasing thread
anew ;

Destroy his fib or sophistry, in vain,
The creature's at his dirty work again,
Throned in the centre of his thin designs,
Proud of a vast extent of flimsy lines ! l. 89.

As yet a child, nor yet a fool to fame,
I lisped in numbers, for the numbers came.
l. 127.

This long disease, my life. l. 131.

Each word-catcher, that lives on syllables.
l. 166.

Pretty in amber to observe the forms
Of hairs, or straws, or dirt, or grubs, or worms !

The things, we know, are neither rich nor rare,

But wonder how the devil they got there.
l. 169.

Means not, but blunders round about a meaning ;

And he whose fustian's so sublimely bad,
It is not poetry, but prose run mad, l. 187.

Should such a man, too fond to rule alone, Bear, like the Turk, no brother near the throne. l. 197.

Damn with faint praise, assent with civil leer,

And, without sneering, teach the rest to sneer ;

Willing to wound, and yet afraid to strike,
Just hint a fault and hesitate dislike. l. 201.

And so obliging, that he ne'er obliged.
l. 208.

Like Cato, give his little senate laws,
And sit attentive to his own applause. l. 209.

Who but must laugh, if such a man there
be ?

Who would not weep if Atticus were he ?
l. 213.

Above a patron, though I condescend
Sometimes to call a minister my friend,
I was not born for courts or great affairs ;
I pay my debts, believe, and say my prayers.
l. 265.

Cursed be the verse, how well soe'er it flow,
That tends to make one worthy man my
foe. l. 283.

Let Sporus tremble !—A. What that thing of silk,

Sporus, that mere white curd of ass's milk ?
Satire or sense, alas ! can Sporus feel ?
Who breaks a butterfly upon a wheel ?
l. 305.

So well-bred spaniels civilly delight
In mumbling of the game they dare not bite.
Eternal smiles his emptiness betray,
As shallow streams run dimpling all the
way. l. 313.

Wit that can creep, and pride that licks the dust. l. 333.

That not in fancy's maze he wandered long ;
But stooped to truth, and moralised his song. l. 340.

Unlearn'd, he knew no schoolman's subtle
art,

No language, but the language of the heart.
By nature honest, by experience wise,
Healthy by temperance, and by exercise.
l. 398.

To rock the cradle of reposing age,
With lenient arts extend a mother's breath,
Make languor smile, and smooth the bed of
death,

Explore the thought, explain the asking eye,
And keep awhile one parent from the sky !
l. 410.

The lines are weak, another's pleased to say,
Lord Fanny spins a thousand such a day.

Satires and Epistles of Horace, Imitated.
Book 2, Sat. 1, l. 5.

In moderation placing all my glory,
While Tories call me Whig, and Whigs a Tory.

Satire's my weapon, but I'm too discreet
To run amuck, and tilt at all I meet. l. 67.

But touch me, and no minister so sore
Whoe'er offends, at some unlucky time
Slides into verse, and hitches in a rhyme,
Sacred to ridicule his whole life long,
And the sad burthen of some merry song.
l. 76.

The feast of reason and the flow of soul.
l. 128.

It stands on record, that in Richard's times
A man was hanged for very honest rhymes.*
Satires and Epistles, Imitated. l. 145.

For I, who hold sage Homer's rule the best,
Welcome the coming, speed the going guest.†
l. 158.

In life's cool evening, satiate of applause.
First Book of the Epistles of Horace (Ep. I), l. 9.

When the brisk minor pants for twenty-one.
l. 38.

Not to go back, is somewhat to advance,
And men must walk at least before they dance. l. 53.

There, London's voice: "Get money, money still!
And then let virtue follow if she will."
l. 79.

He's armed without that's innocent within.
l. 94.

Get place and wealth, if possible, with grace;
If not, by any means get wealth and place.
l. 103.

Not to admire, is all the art I know,
To make men happy, and to keep them so.‡
Ep. 6, l. 1.

The worst of madmen is a saint run mad.
l. 27.

A man of wealth is dubbed a man of worth.
l. 81.

Above all Greek, above all Roman fame.
*Second Book of the Epistles
of Horace (Ep. I), l. 26.*

Who lasts a century can have no flaw;
I hold that wit a classic, good in law. l. 55.
The mob of gentlemen who wrote with ease.
l. 103.

One simile, that solitary shines
In the dry desert of a thousand lines.
l. 111.

What will a child learn sooner than a song?
l. 205.

Waller was smooth; but Dryden taught to join
The varying verse, the full resounding line,
The long majestic march, and energy divine.
l. 267.

Even copious Dryden wanted, or forgot,
The last and greatest art, the art to blot.
l. 280.

Who pants for glory finds but short repose,
A breath revives him or a breath o'erthrows.
l. 300.

There still remains, to mortify a wit,
The many-headed monster of the pit. l. 304.
What dear delight to Britons farce affords!
Ever the taste of mobs, but now of lords.
l. 310.

To know the poet from the man of rhymes.
l. 341.

We poets are (upon a poet's word)
Of all mankind, the creatures most absurd.
l. 353.

The zeal of fools offends at any time,
But most of all, the zeal of fools in rhyme.
l. 406.

"Praise undeserved is scandal in disguise."§ Years following years, steal something every day,
At last they steal us from ourselves away.
Ep. 2, l. 72.

The vulgar boil, the learned roast an egg.
l. 85.

But let the fit pass o'er, I'm wise enough
To stop my ears to their confounded stuff.
l. 151.

Command old words that long have slept, to wake,
Words that wise Bacon, or brave Raleigh
spoke. l. 167.

But ease in writing flows from art, not chance;
As those move easiest who have learned to
dance.|| l. 178.

Too moral for a wit.
Epilogue to the Satires. Dialogue 1, l. 4.

His sly, polite, insinuating style
Could please at court, and make Augustus smile. l. 19.

A horse-laugh if you please at honesty.
l. 33.

A patriot is a fool in every age. l. 41.

All tears are wiped for ever from all eyes.
l. 102.

Let humble Allen, with an awkward shame,
Do good by stealth, and blush to find it fame. l. 135.

To Berkeley, every virtue under heaven.
Dialogue 2, l. 73.

Keen, hollow winds howl through the dark
recess,
Emblem of music caused by emptiness.
The Dunciad. Book 1, l. 35.

* John Ball, hanged temp. Richard II., reputed author of the lines: "When Adam delve, and Eve span, Who was then the gentleman?"

† See Pope's "Odyssey," Book 15, 83.

‡ These lines are adapted from Creech's translation.

§ From a poem "The Celebrated Beauties" (Anon.), Tonson's "Miscellanies" (1708). In "The Garland," a collection of poems by Mr. Broadhurst (1721), the line appears: "Praise undeserved is satire in disguise."

|| See "Essay on Criticism," p. 244.

Poetic justice, with her lifted scale,
Where, in nice balance, truth with gold she weighs,
And solid pudding against empty praise.

The Dunciad. l. 52.

But lived in Settle's numbers one day more.
Now mayors and shrieves all hushed and satiated lay,
Yet ate, in dreams, the custard of the day;
While pensive poets painful vigils keep,
Sleepless themselves to give their readers
sleep. l. 90.

Swearing and supperless the hero sate,
Blasphemed his gods, the dice, and damned his fate. l. 115.

Sinking from thought to thought, a vast
profound,
Plunged for his sense but found no bottom
there,
Yet wrote and floundered on in mere despair.
l. 118.

Next o'er his books his eyes began to roll,
In pleasing memory of all he stole. l. 127.

Or where the pictures for the page atone,
And Quarles is saved by beauties not his own. l. 139.

There saved by spice, like mummies, many a year,
Dry bodies of divinity appear;
De Lyra there a dreadful front extends,
And here the groaning shelves Philemon bends. l. 151.

Yet holds the eel of science by the tail.
l. 280.

The field of glory is a field for all.
Book 2, l. 32.

And gentle dulness ever loves a joke. l. 34.

A brain of feathers, and a heart of lead.
l. 44.

Dulness is sacred in a sound divine. l. 352.

Till Peter's keys some christened Jove adorn.
Book 3, l. 109.

Peeled, patched, and piebald, linsey-wolsey
brothers,
Grave mummies! sleeveless some, and shirtless others. l. 115.

All crowd, who foremost shall be damned to fame. l. 158.

So sweetly mawkish, and so smoothly dull;
Heady, not strong; o'erflowing, though not full. l. 171.

Another Cynthia her new journey runs,
And other planets circle other suns. l. 243.

A wit with dunces, and a dunce with wits.
Book 4, l. 90.

The Right Divine of kings to govern wrong.
l. 188.

For thee we dim the eyes, and stuff the head
With all such reading as was never read;
For thee explain a thing till all men doubt it,
And write about it, goddess, and about it:
So spins the silk-worm small its slender
store,
And labours till it clouds itself all o'er.

l. 248.

Led by my hand, he sauntered Europe
round,
And gathered every vice on Christian ground. l. 311.

Judicious drank, and greatly daring dined.
l. 313.

Stretched on the rack of a too easy chair,
And heard thy everlasting yawn confess
The pains and penalties of idleness. l. 342.

Even Palinurus nodded at the helm. l. 614.

Religion blushing veils her sacred fires,
And unawares morality expires.
Nor public flame, nor private, dares to shine;
Nor human spark is left, nor glimpse

On the Hon. Simon Harcourt.

Here rests a woman, good without pretence,
Blest with plain reason, and with sober sense;
No conquests she, but o'er herself, desired,
No arts essayed, but not to be admired,
Passion and pride were to her soul unknown,
Convinced that virtue only is our own.
So unaffected, so composed a mind;
So firm, yet soft; so strong, yet so refined;
Heaven, as its purest gold, by tortures tried!
The saint sustained it, but the woman died!

Modern Painters. 1. Preface.

He is the greatest artist who has embodied, in the sum of his works, the greatest number of the greatest ideas.

1, Part 1, Sec. 1, Chap. 2, Sec. 9.

They are good furniture pictures, unworthy of praise, and undeserving of blame. 1, Part 11, Sec. 5, Chap. 1, Sec. 20.

They are the weakest-minded and the hardest-hearted men, that most love variety and change. 2, Part 2, Chap. 6, Sec. 7.

Vulgarity is only in concealment of truth, or affectation. 1b.

The higher a man stands, the more the word "vulgar" becomes unintelligible to him. 3, Part 4, Chap. 7, Sec. 9.

We English have many false ideas about reverence: we should be shocked, for instance, to see a market-woman come into church with a basket of eggs on her arm.

Chap. 10, Sec. 22.

To see clearly is poetry, prophecy, and religion,—all in one. Chap. 16, Sec. 28.

Going by railroad I do not consider as travelling at all; it is merely being "sent" to a place, and very little different from becoming a parcel. Chap. 17, Sec. 24.

Your railroad, when you come to understand it, is only a device for making the world smaller. Sec. 35.

Pride is at the bottom of all great mistakes. 4, Part 5, Sec. 22.

False things may be imagined, and false things composed; but only truth can be invented. 5, Part 8, Chap. 4, Sec. 23.

Gentlemanliness, being another word for intense humanity.

5, Part 9, Chap. 7, Sec. 23.

That mysterious forest below London Bridge. Chap. 9, Sec. 7.

The purest and most thoughtful minds are those which love colour the most.

The Stones of Venice. 2, Chap. 5, Sec. 30.

He who has the truth at his heart need never fear the want of persuasion on his tongue. Sec. 99 (Infidelitas).

Speaking truth is like writing fair, and only comes by practice.

The Seven Lamps of Architecture.

Chap. 2, Sec. 1.

Among the first habits that a young architect should learn, is that of thinking in shadow. Chap. 3, Sec. 13.

It is the very temple of discomfort, and the only charity that the builder can extend to us is to show us, plainly as may be, how soonest to escape from it. [This refers to the architecture of railway stations.]

Chap. 4, Sec. 21.

That treacherous phantom which men call Liberty. Chap. 7, Sec. 1.

The greatest efforts of the race have always been traceable to the love of praise, as its greatest catastrophes to the love of pleasure. Sesame and Lilies. Sec. 1, 3.

Nothing is ever done beautifully which is done in rivalry, nor nobly which is done in pride. Ethics of the Dust.

A little group of wise hearts is better than a wilderness of fools.

There is only one way of seeing things rightly, and that is, seeing the whole of them. The Two Paths. Lecture 2.

FINE ART is that in which the hand, the head, and the heart of man go together. 1b.

No human being, however great, or powerful, was ever so free as a fish. Lecture 5.

You may either win your peace or buy it: win it, by resistance to evil; buy it, by compromise with evil. 1b.

God never imposes a duty without giving time to do it.

Marmion. Canto 1. Introduction.

The vernal sun new life bestows
Even on the meanest flower that blows. lb.

And wit that loved to play, not wound. lb.

If ever from an English heart,
O here let prejudice depart ! lb.

Stood for his country's glory fast,
And nailed her colours to the mast. lb.

Profaned the God-given strength, and marred the lofty line. lb.

Coal-black, and grizzled here and there,
But more through toil than age.

Canto 1, St. 5

His square-turned joints, and strength of limb,

Showed him no carpet knight so trim,
But, in close fight, a champion grim,
In camps, a leader sage. lb.

And frame love ditties passing rare,
And sing them to a lady fair. St. 7

Stout heart, and open hand. St. 10.

For lady's suit, and minstrel's strain,
By knight should ne'er be heard in vain. St. 13.

We hold our greyhound in our hand,
Our falcon on our glove ;

But where should we find leash or band
For dame that loves to rove ?

Let the wild falcon soar her swing,
She'll stoop when she has tired her wing. St. 17.

I love such holy rambles ; still
They know to charm a weary hill

With song, romance, or lay ;
Some jovial tale, or glee, or jest,

Some lying legend at the least,
They bring to cheer the way. St. 25.

Just at the age 'twixt boy and youth
When thought is speech, and speech is truth.

Canto 2. Introduction.

When musing on companions gone,
We doubly feel ourselves alone. lb.

Love, to her ear, was but a name
Combined with vanity and shame. St. 3.

Her hopes, her fears, her joys were all
Bounded within the cloister wall. lb.

Her kinsmen bade her give her hand
To one who loved her for her land. St. 5.

In Saxon strength that abbey frowned,
With massive arches broad and round. St. 10.

Built ere the art was known
By pointed aisles, and shafted stalk,
The arcades of an alleys walk
To emulate in stone. lb.

'Tis an old tale, and often told. St. 27.

And come he slow, or come he fast,
It is but Death who comes at last. St. 30.

Still from the grave their voice is heard.

Canto 3. Introduction.

Theirs was the glee of martial breast,
And laughter theirs at little jest. St. 4.

Yet, trained in camps, he knew the art
To win the soldiers' hardy heart.

They love a captain to obey,
Boisterous as March, yet fresh as May ;

With open hand, and brow as free,
Lover of wine and minstrelsy. lb.

In the lost battle,
Borne down by the flying,

Where mingles war's rattle,
With groans of the dying. St. 11.

Shame and dishonour sit
By his grave ever ;

Blessing shall hallow it,— Never, O never ! lb.

High minds, of native pride and force,
Most deeply feel thy pangs, Remorse ! St. 13.

Wearied from doubt to doubt to flee,
We welcome fond credulity,

Guide confident, though blind. St. 30.

Far may we search before we find
A heart so manly and so kind !

Canto 4. Introduction.

The flash of that satiric rage,
Which, bursting on the early stage,

Branded the vices of the age,
And broke the keys of Rome. St. 7.

Remains of rude magnificence. St. 11.

The saddest heart might pleasure take
To see all nature gay. St. 15.

'Twere good
That kings would think withal,

When peace and wealth their land has blessed

'Tis better to sit still and rest,
Than rise, perchance to fall. St. 29.

Where's the coward that would not dare
To fight for such a land ? St. 30.

But looking liked, and liking loved.

Canto 5. Introduction.

Bold in thy applause,
The Bard shall scorn pedantic laws. lb.

And, oh ! he had that merry glance
That seldom lady's heart resists.
Lightly from fair to fair he flew,
And loved to plead, lament, and sue—
Suit lightly won, and short-lived pain,
For monarchs seldom sigh in vain.

Marmion. Canto 5, St. 9.

So faithful in love, and so dauntless in war,
There never was knight like the young Lochinvar, St. 12.

With a smile on her lips, and a tear in her
eye. Ib.

But woe awaits a country when
She sees the tears of bearded men. St. 16.

Heap on more wood ! The wind is chill ;
But let it whistle as it will,
We'll keep our Christmas merry still.
Each age has deemed the new born year
The fittest time for festal cheer.

Canto 6. Introduction.

Power laid his rod and rule aside,
And Ceremony doffed her pride. Ib.

If unmelodious was the song,
It was a hearty note and strong. Ib.

England was merry England, when Old Christmas brought his sports again.
'Twas Christmas broached the mightiest ale,
'Twas Christmas told the merriest tale ;
A Christmas gambol oft could cheer
The poor man's heart through half the year. Ib.

Small thought was his, in after-time
E'er to be hitched into a rhyme. Ib.

A life both dull and dignified. St. 1.

And darest thou then
To beard the lion in his den,
The Douglas in his hall ? St. 14.

Oh what a tangled web we weave
When first we practise to deceive ! St. 17.

And such a yell was there,
Of sudden and portentous birth,
As if men fought upon the earth,
And fiends in upper air. St. 25.

Good-night to Marmion. St. 28.

O woman ! in our hours of ease,
Uncertain, coy, and hard to please,
And variable as the shade
By the light quivering aspen made,—
When pain and anguish wring the brow,
A ministering angel thou ! St. 30.

Forgot were hatred, wrongs, and fears ;
The plaintive voice alone she hears,
Sees but the dying man. Ib.

A sinful heart makes feeble hand. St. 31.

The monk, with unavailing cares,
Exhausted all the Church's prayers. St. 32.

Charge Chester, charge ! On, Stanley, on !
Were the last words of Marmion. Ib.

O for a blast of that dread horn
On Fontarabian echoes borne ! St. 33.

With thy heart commune, and be still.
If ever, in temptation strong,
Thou left'st the right path for the wrong.
If every devious step, thus trode,
Still led thee farther from the road ;
Dread thou to speak presumptuous doom
On noble Marmion's lowly tomb ;
But say, "He died a gallant knight,
With sword in hand, for England's right." St. 37.

Why then a final note prolong,
Or lengthen out a closing song ? L'Envoi.

To all, to each, a fair good-night
And pleasing dreams, to slumbers light ! Ib.

Court not the critic's smile, nor dread his frown.

Harold the Dauntless. Introduction.
An evil counsellor is despair.

Canto 1, St. 21.
And thus Hope me deceived, as she deceiveth all. Canto 3, St. 1.

'Tis wisdom's use
Still to delay what we dare not refuse.
Canto 4, St. 11.

Comparing what thou art,
With what thou might'st have been.
Waterloo. 18.

The stag at eve had drunk his fill.
Lady of the Lake. Canto 1, St. 1.

'Twere long to tell what steeds gave o'er.
St. 6.

Two dogs of black St. Hubert's breed,
Unmatched for courage, breath, and speed.
St. 7.

Woe worth the chase, woe worth the day,
That costs thy life, my gallant grey ! St. 9.

Back limped, with slow and crippled pace,
The sulky leaders of the chase. St. 10.

The rocky summits, split and rent,
Formed turret, dome, or battlement,
Or seemed fantastically set
With cupola or minaret. St. 11.

In listening mood, she seemed to stand,
The guardian Naiad of the strand. St. 17.

And ne'er did Grecian chisel trace
A Nymph, a Naiad, or a Grace,
Of finer form, or lovelier face !
What though the sun, with ardent frown,
Had slightly tinged her cheek with brown. St. 18.

A foot more light, a step more true,
Ne'er from the heath-flower dashed the dew. Ib.

On his bold visage middle age
Had slightly pressed its signet sage,
Yet not had quenched the open truth
And fiery vehemence of youth.

Lady of the Lake. Canto 1, st. 21.

The will to do, the soul to dare. Ib.

His limbs were cast in manly mould,
For hardy sports or contest bold. Ib.

His ready speech flowed fair and free,
In phrase of gentlest courtesy;
Yet seemed that tone, and gesture bland,
Less used to sue than to command. Ib.

Well showed the elder lady's mien
That courts and cities she had seen. St. 30.

Soldier, rest! thy warfare o'er,
Sleep the sleep that knows not breaking.
Dream of battled fields no more,
Days of danger, nights of waking. St. 31.

Huntsman, rest! thy chase is done. St. 32.

True be thy sword, thy friend sincere,
Thy lady constant, kind, and dear!
Canto 2, st. 2.

Thy mirth refrain,
Thy hand is on a lion's mane. St. 12.

Children know,
Instinctive taught, the friend and foe. St. 14.

Hail to the Chief who in triumph advances. St. 19.

Some feelings are to mortals given,
With less of earth in them than heaven. St. 22.

The chase I follow far,
'Tis mimicry of noble war. St. 26.

And each upon his rival glared,
With foot advanced, and blade half bared. St. 34.

Time rolls his ceaseless course.
Canto 3, st. 1.

Mildly and soft the western breeze
Just kissed the lake, just stirred the trees. St. 2.

Like the dew on the mountain,
Like the foam on the river,
Like the bubble on the fountain,
Thou art gone, and for ever. St. 16.

Grief claimed his right, and tears their course. St. 18.

The rose is fairest when 'tis budding new,
And hope is brightest when it dawns from fears;

The rose is sweetest washed with morning
dew,
And love is loveliest when embalmed in tears. Canto 4, st. 1.

At length the fateful answer came. St. 6.

Which spills the foremost foeman's life,
That party conquers in the strife. Ib.

I love to hear of worthy foes. St. 8.

Each silent, each upon his guard. St. 20.

That diamond dew, so pure and clear,
It rivals all but Beauty's tear. Canto 5, st. 2.

Your own good blades must win the rest.
St. 7.

Secret path marks secret foe. St. 8.

He manned himself with dauntless air,
Returned the Chief his haughty stare,
And back against a rock he bore,
And firmly placed his foot before:—

"Come one, come all! this rock shall fly
From its firm base as soon as I!" St. 10.

Respect was mingled with surprise,
And the stern joy which warriors feel
In foemen worthy of their steel. Ib.

Can nought but blood our feud atone!
St. 18.

Thou add'st but fuel to my hate. St. 14.

I thank thee, Roderick, for the word!
It nerves my heart, it steels my sword. Ib.

Now truce, farewell, and ruth, begone! Ib.

And all too late the advantage came. St. 16.

Who o'er the herd would wish to reign,
Fantastic, fickle, fierce and vain?
Vain as the leaf, upon the stream,
And fickle as a changeful dream;
Fantastic as a woman's mood,
And fierce as Frenzy's fevered blood.
Thou many-headed, monster-thing,
O who would wish to be thy King? St. 30.

Where, where was Roderick then?
One blast upon his bugle horn
Were worth a thousand men.

Canto 6, st. 18.

The plaided warriors of the North. St. 19.

The Monarch drank, that happy hour,
The sweetest, holiest draught of Power. St. 28.

The hills grow dark,
On purple peaks a deeper shade descending.
Conclusion.

The way was long, the wind was cold,
The Minstrel was infirm and old;
His withered cheek, and tresses grey,
Seemed to have known a better day.

Lay of the Last Minstrel. Introduction.

The unpremeditated lay. Ib.

Old times were changed, old manners gone;
A stranger filled the Stuarts' throne;
The bigots of the iron time
Had called his harmless art a crime. Ib.

And tuned, to please a peasant's ear,
The harp a king had loved to hear. Ib.

Whose ponderous grate and massy bar
Had off rolled back the tide of war. Ib.

His trembling hand had lost the ease,
Which marks security to please.

Lay of the Last Minstrel. Introduction.

The present scene, the future lot,
His toils, his wants, were all forgot. Ib.

They carved at the meal
With gloves of steel,
And they drank the red wine through the helmet barred. Canto 1, st. 4.

Such is the custom of Branksome Hall. St. 7.

Vengeance, deep-brooding o'er the slain,
Had locked the source of softer woe;
And burning pride, and high disdain
Forbade the rising tear to flow. St. 9.

To her bidding she could bow
The viewless forms of air. St. 12.

What shall be the maiden's fate?
Who shall be the maiden's mate? St. 16.

Steady of heart, and stout of hand. St. 21.

Sir William of Deloraine, good at need. St. 22.

Ambition is no cure for love. St. 27.

Yet through good heart, and Our Lady's grace
At length he gained the landing place. St. 29.

If thou would'st view fair Melrose aright,
Go visit it by the pale moonlight. Canto 2, st. 1.

O fading honours of the dead!
Of high ambition, lowly laid! St. 10.

I was not always a man of woe. St. 12.

I cannot tell how the truth may be;
I say the tale as 'twas said to me. St. 22.

My heart is dead, my veins are cold:
I may not, must not, sing of love. St. 30.

Love rules the court, the camp, the grove,
And men below, and saints above;
For love is heaven, and heaven is love. Canto 3, st. 2.

The meeting of these champions proud
Seemed like the bursting thunder-cloud. St. 5.

He was always for ill, and never for good. St. 12.

And laughed, and shouted, "Lost! Lost!
Lost!" St. 13.

He never counted him a man,
Would strike below the knee. St. 17.

Along thy wild and willowed shore. Canto 4, st. 1.

Dear to me is my bonny white steed;
Oft has he helped me at pinch of need. St. 10.

For ne'er
Was flattery lost on poet's ear.
A simple race! they waste their toil
For the vain tribute of a smile. St. 35.

Call it not vain:—they do not err,
Who say, that when the Poet dies,
Mute Nature mourns her worshipper,
And celebrates his obsequies. Canto 5, st. 1.

True love's the gift which God has given
To man alone beneath the heaven. St. 13.

It is the secret sympathy,
The silver link, the silken tie,
Which heart to heart, and mind to mind,
In body and in soul can bind. Ib.

Scarce rued the boy his present plight,
So much he longed to see the fight. St. 18.

Not you, but Fate, has vanquished me. St. 26.

As I am true to thee and thine,
Do thou be true to me and mine! Ib.

He would not waken old debate,
For he was void of rancorous hate,
Though rude, and scant of courtesy. St. 28.

Yet, rest thee God! for well I know
I ne'er shall find a nobler foe. St. 29.

Breathes there the man, with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land!
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned,
As home his footsteps he hath turned,
From wandering on a foreign strand!

If such there breathe, go, mark him well;
For him no Minstrel raptures swell;
High though his titles, proud his name,
Boundless his wealth as wish can claim;
Despite those titles, power, and pelt,
The wretch, concentred all in self,
Living, shall forfeit fair renown,
And, doubly dying, shall go down
To the vile dust, from whence he sprang,
Unwept, unhonoured, and unsung. Canto 6, st. 1.

O Caledonia! stern and wild,
Meet nurse for a poetic child!
Land of brown heath and shaggy wood,
Land of the mountain and the flood,
Land of my sires! St. 2.

Unknown the manner of his death. St. 7.

For love will still be lord of all. St. 11.

Soft is the note, and sad the lay,
That mourns the lovely Rosabelle. St. 23.

From many a garnished niche around,
Stern saints and tortured martyrs frowned. St. 29.

That day of wrath, that dreadful day,
When heaven and earth shall pass away. St. 31.

Of had he changed his weary side,
Composed his limbs, and vainly sought
By effort strong to banish thought.
Sleep came at length, but with a train
Of feelings true and fancies vain,
Mingling, in wild disorder cast,
The expected future with the past.

Rokeby. Canto 1, st. 2.

He woke and feared again to close
His eyelids in such dire repose. St. 4.

He saw and scorned the petty wile. St. 6.

Death had he seen by sudden blow,
By wasting plague, by tortures slow,
By mine or breach, by steel or ball,
Knew all his shapes, and scorned them all. St. 8.

Assumed despondence bent his head,
While troubled joy was in his eye.
The well-feigned sorrow to belie. St. 14.

Doubts, horrors, superstitious fears Saddened and dimmed descending years. St. 17.

Thoughts from the tongue that slowly part,
Glance quick as lightning through the heart. St. 19.

Hour after hour he loved to pore
On Shakespeare's rich and varied lore. St. 24.

Friendship, esteem, and fair regard,
And praise, the poet's best reward! St. 27.

For not to rank nor sex confined
Is this vain ague of the mind. (Superstition.)
Canto 2, st. 11.

The sparkle of his swarthy eye.
Canto 3, st. 4.

Speak thy purpose out;
I love not mystery or doubt. St. 11.

He bids the ruddy cup go round,
Till sense and sorrow both are drowned. St. 15.

Much then I learned, and much can show,
Of human guilt and human woe,
Yet ne'er have, in my wanderings, known
A wretch whose sorrows matched my own.
Canto 4, st. 23.

His face was of the doubtful kind
That wins the eye, but not the mind.
Canto 5, st. 16.

His was the subtle look and sly,
That, spying all, seems nought to spy. 1b.

So fits the world's uncertain span!
Nor zeal for God, nor love for man
Gives mortal monuments a date
Beyond the power of Time and Fate.
Canto 6, st. 1.

And sidelong glanced, as to explore,
In meditated flight, the door. St. 6.

Fell as he was in act and mind,
He left no bolder heart behind;
Then give him, for a soldier meet,
A soldier's cloak for winding sheet. St. 33.

So—now, the danger dared at last,
Look back, and smile at perils past.
Bridal of Triermain. Introduction. St. 2.

Like Collins, ill-starred name!
Whose lay's requital was, that tardy Fame,
Who bound no laurel round his living head,
Should hang it o'er his monument when dead. St. 8.

So sweet, so soft, so faint,
It seemed an angel's whispered call
To an expiring saint. Canto 1, st. 4.

Where lives the man that has not tried,
How mirth can into folly glide,
And folly into sin? St. 21.

For priests will allow of a broken vow,
For penance or for gold. Canto 2, st. 17.

Brand him who will with base report,—
He shall be free from mine. St. 18.

Lordlings and witlings not a few,
Incapable of doing aught,
Yet ill at ease with nought to do. St. 28.

But answer came there none.
Canto 3, st. 10.

O, hush thee, my baby, thy sire was a knight,

Thy mother a lady, both lovely and bright;
The woods and the glens, from the towers which we see

They all are belonging, dear baby, to thee.
Lullaby of an Infant Chief.

Come as the winds come, when Forests are rended;
Come as the waves come, when Navies are stranded!

Pibroch of Donald Dhu.

While there's leaves in the forest, and foam
on the river,
MacGregor, despite them, shall flourish for ever. MacGregor's Gathering.

John Bull was in his very worst of moods,
Raving of sterile farms and unsold goods.
The Search after Happiness. 15.

Their hearts were made of English oak,
their swords of Sheffield steel.

The Bold Dragon.

The dew that on the violet lies
Mocks the dark lustre of thine eyes.

The Lord of the Isles. Canto 1, st. 3.

To show the form it seemed to hide.
Canto 1, st. 5.

In man's most dark extremity
Oft succour dawns from Heaven.
Canto 1, st. 20.

And I will say, as still I've said,
Though by ambition far misled,
Thou art a noble knight.

The Lord of the Isles. Canto 3, st. 5.

Thus, then, my noble foe I greet:
Health and high fortune till we meet,
And then—what pleases Heaven. St. 6.

Scenes sung by him who sings no more!
His bright and brief career is o'er,
And mute his tuneful strains.

Canto 4, st. 11.

O! many a shaft, at random sent,
Finds mark the archer little meant!
And many a word, at random spoken,
May soothe or wound a heart that's broken!

Canto 5, st. 18.

Forward, each gentleman and knight!
Let gentle blood show generous might,
And chivalry redeem the fight!

Canto 6, st. 24.

Waverley drove through the sea of books,
like a vessel without a pilot or a rudder.

Waverley. Chap. 3.

Twist ye, twine ye! even so
Mingle shades of joy and woe,
Hope and fear, and peace, and strife,
In the thread of human life.

Guy Mannering. Chap. 4.

"That sounds like nonsense, my dear."

"May be so, my dear; but it may be very good law for all that." Chap. 9.

"Pro-di-gi-ous!" exclaimed Dominie Sampson. Chap. 14.

"Knowest thou not me?" the Deep Voice
cried;

"So long enjoyed, so oft misused—
Alternate, in thy fickle pride,

Desired, neglected, and accused?
Before my breath, like blazing flax,
Man and his marvels pass away;
And changing empires wane and wax,
Are founded, flourish, and decay." (Time.)

The Antiquary. Chap. 11.

But with the morning cool repentance came. Rob Roy. Chap. 12.

To the timid and hesitating everything is impossible because it seems so. Chap. 16.

Among the sea of upturned faces.
Chap. 20.

My foot is on my native heath, and my name is MacGregor. Chap. 24.

Like all rogues, he was a great calum-niator of the fair sex.

Heart of Midlothian. Chap. 18.

To all the sensual world proclaim,
One crowded hour of glorious life
Is worth an age without a name.

Old Mortality. Chap. 34.

In poetry there is always fallacy, and sometimes fiction.

Bride of Lammermoor. Chap. 21.

When Israel, of the Lord below'd,
Out of the land of bondage came,
Her fathers' God before her mov'd,
An awful guide in smoke and flame.

Ivanhoe. Chap. 39.

For a yeoman of Kent, with his yearly rent,
There never was a widow could say him
nay. Ib. Chap. 40.

Old Homer's theme
Was but a dream,
Himself a fiction too.

Monastery. Answer to the Introductory Epistle.

The happy combination of fortuitous circumstances. Ib.

Within that awful volume lies
The mystery of mysteries! Chap. 12.

And better had they ne'er been born,
Who read to doubt, or read to scorn. Ib.

Credit me, friend, it hath been ever thus,
Since the ark rested on Mount Ararat:
False man hath sworn, and woman hath believed—

Repented and reproached, and then believed once more. Fortunes of Nigel. Chap. 20.

For a con-si-de-ra-tion. Chap. 22.

The wise man is his own best assistant. Ib.

He comes and gangs like a flap of a whirlwind, or sic loike. Redgauntlet. Chap. 5.

Widowed wife, and wedded maid,
Betrothed, betrayer, and betrayed.

The Betrothed. Chap. 15.

What can they see in the longest kingly line in Europe, save that it runs back to a successful soldier?

Woodstock. Vol. 2, chap. 37.

But with the morning cool reflection came.*

The Highland Widow.

Introductory. Chap. 4.

We talk of a credulous vulgar without always recollecting that there is a vulgar incredulity, which in historical matters, as well as in those of religion, finds it easier to doubt than to examine.

Fair Maid of Perth. Introductory.

A torturer of phrases into sonnets.

Ill fares it with the flock

If shepherds wrangle when the wolf is nigh.

In the dark backward and abysm of time.
Act 1, 2.

Set all hearts i' the state
To what tune pleased his ear. Ib.

I, thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated

To closeness, and the bettering of my mind.
Ib.

Made such a sinner of his memory,
To credit his own lie. Ib.

Your tale, sir, would cure deafness. Ib.

Our revels now are ended. These our actors,

As I foretold you, were all spirits, and
Are melted into air, into thin air;

And like the baseless fabric of this vision
The cloud-capped towers, the gorgeous palaces,

The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve,

And, like this insubstantial pageant faded, Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff

As dreams are made on, and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep. Act 4, 1.

For aye thy foot-licker. Ib.

I do begin to have bloody thoughts. Ib.

With foreheads villainous low. Ib.

Now does my project gather to a head.
Act 5, 1.

Where the bee sucks, there suck I;
In a cowslip's bell I lie:

There I couch when owls do cry;

A jest unseen, inscrutable, invisible
 As a nose on a man's face, or a weathercock on a steeple! Ib.

I have received my proportion, like the prodigious son. Act 2, 3.

I have done penance for contemning love.
Act 2, 4.

She is mine own;
 And I as rich in having such a jewel,
 As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearl,
 The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold. Ib.

The current that with gentle murmur glides,
 Thou know'st, being stopped, impatiently doth rage. Act 2, 7.

Didst thou but know the inly touch of love,
 Thou wouldst as soon go kindle fire with snow,
 As seek to quench the fire of love with words. Ib.

Flatter and praise, commend, extol their graces;
 Though ne'er so black, say they have angels'
 faces.
 That man that hath a tongue, I say, is no
 man,
 If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.
Act 3, 1.

Except I be by Sylvia in the night,
 There is no music in the nightingale;
 Except I look on Sylvia in the day,
 There is no day for me to look upon. Ib.

Win her with gifts, if she respect not words:
 Dumb jewels often, in their silent kind,
 More quick than words, do move a woman's mind. Ib.

Thou art the Mars of malcontents; I second thee; troop on! Ib.

Here will be an old abusing of God's patience, and the King's English. Act 1, 4.

His worst fault is that he is given to prayer; he is something peevish that way; but nobody but has his fault; but let that pass. Ib.

* This was inserted by Theobald from the quarto.

We burn daylight.

The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act 2, 1.

They do no more adhere and keep pace together than the hundredth psalm to the tune of "Green Sleeves." Ib.

Faith thou hast some crotchets in thy head now. Ib.

If money go before, all ways do lie open. Act 2, 2.

Why, then the world's mine oyster, Which I with sword will open. Ib.

Love like a shadow flies when substance love pursues, Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues. Ib.

Hiding mine honour in my necessity. Ib.

Marry, this is the short and the long of it. Ib.

Unless experience be a jewel; that I have purchased at an infinite rate. Ib.

Like a fair house built on another man's ground. Ib.

By gar, de herring is no dead, so as I will kill him. Act 2, 3.

I cannot tell what the dickens his name is. Act 3, 2.

O, what a world of vile, ill-favoured faults Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a year. Act 3, 4.

If it be my luck, so; if not, happy man be his dole! Ib.

If I be served such another trick, I'll have my brains taken out and buttered, and give them to a dog for a new year's gift. Act 3, 5.

I have a kind of alacrity in sinking. Ib.

The rankest compound of villainous smell that ever offended nostril. Ib.

A man of my kidney. Ib.

Your husband is in his old lunes again. Act 4, 2.

Life is a shuttle. Act 5, 1.

They say there is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death. Ib.

Better a little chiding than a great deal of heart-break. Act 5, 3.

Let the sky rain potatoes! let it thunder to the tune of "Green Sleeves!" Act 5, 5.

What cannot be eschewed, must be embraced. Ib.

Ford: And one that is as slanderous as Satan?

Page: And as poor as Job?

Ford: And as wicked as his wife? Ib.

O powerful love! that in some respects makes a beast a man; in some other, a man a beast. Ib.

Heaven doth with us as we with torches do, Not light them for themselves.

Measure for Measure. Act 1, 1.

I love the people, But do not like to stage me to their eyes, Though it do well, I do not relish well Their loud applause and aves vehement; Nor do I think the man of safe discretion, That does affect it. Ib.

He was ever precise in promise-keeping. Act 1, 2.

And liberty plucks justice by the nose. Act 1, 4.

I hold you as a thing ensky'd and sainted. Act 1, 5.

Our doubts are traitors, And make us lose the good we oft might win, By fearing to attempt. Ib.

And let him learn to know when maidens sue, Men give like gods. Ib.

We must not make a scarecrow of the law, Setting it up to fear the birds of prey,— And let it keep one shape, till custom make it Their perch, and not their terror. Act 2, 1.

'Tis one thing to be tempted, Escalus. Another thing to fall. I do not deny, The jury, passing on the prisoner's life, May, in a sworn twelve, have a thief or two Guiltier than him they try. Ib.

The jewel that we find, we stoop and take it, Because we see it; but what we do not see We tread upon, and never think of it. Ib.

This will last out a night in Russia, When nights are longest there. Ib.

At war 'twixt will and will not. Act 2, 2.

Condemn the fault and not the actor of it? Ib.

No ceremony that to great ones longs, Not the King's crown, nor the deputed sword, The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe, Become them with one half so good a grace As mercy does. Ib.

O! it is excellent To have a giant's strength; but it is tyrannous To use it like a giant. Act 2, 2.

The tempter or the tempted, who sins most? Ib.

But man, proud man!
Drest in a little brief authority,—
Most ignorant of what he's most assured,
His glassy essence,—like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high
heaven,
As make the angels weep.

Measure for Measure. Act 2, 2.
That in the captain's but a choleric word,
Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy. Ib.

Our compelled sins
Stand more for number than for accompt.
Act 2, 4.

O pardon me, my lord; it oft falls out,
To have what we would have, we speak not what we mean. Ib.

The miserable have
No other medicine but only hope. Act 3, 1.
Servile to all the skyey influences. Ib.
Palsied eld. Ib.

Dar'st thou die?
The sense of death is most in apprehension;
And the poor beetle, that we tread upon,
In corporal sufferance finds a pang as great
As when a giant dies. Ib.

If I must die,
I will encounter darkness as a bride,
And hug it in mine arms. Ib.

Ay, but to die, and go we know not where;
To lie in cold obstruction, and to rot;
This sensible warm motion to become
A kneaded clod; and the delighted spirit
To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside
In thrilling region* of thick-ribbed ice;
To be imprisoned in the viewless winds,
And blown with restless violence round about
The pendent world. Ib.

The weariest and most loathed worldly life
That age, ache, penury, and imprisonment
Can lay on nature, is a paradise
To what we fear of death. Ib.

Virtue is bold, and goodness never fearful.
Act 3, 1.

A very superficial, ignorant, unweighing fellow. Act 3, 2.

Back-wounding calumny
The whitest virtue strikes. Ib.

Shame to him, whose cruel striking Kills for faults of his own liking! Ib.

When rich villains have need of poor ones,
Poor ones may make what price they will.
Act 3, 3.

Take, oh, take those lips away,
That so sweetly were forsworn.† Act 4, 1.

Seals of love, but sealed in vain,
Sealed in vain. Ib.

Every true man's apparel fits your thief.
Act 4, 2.

A fortified residence 'gainst the tooth of time,
And razure of oblivion. Act 5, 1.

My business in this state
Made me a looker-on here in Vienna. Ib.

They say best men are moulded out of faults;
And, for the most, become much more than better
For being a little bad. Ib.

For truth is truth
To th' end of the reckoning. Ib.

What's mine is your's, and what is yours is mine. Ib.

The pleasing punishment that women bear.
The Comedy of Errors. Act 1, 1.

A wretched soul bruised with adversity.
Act 2, 1.

They brought one Pinch, a hungry, lean-faced villain

A mere anatomy, a mountebank,
A threadbare juggler, and a fortune-teller,
A needy, hollow-eyed, sharp-looking wretch;
A living dead man. Act 5, 1.

He hath, indeed, better bettered expectation, than you must expect of me to tell you how.

Much Ado about Nothing. Act 1, 1.

He is a very valiant trencher-man. Ib.

They never meet but there is a skirmish of wit between them. Ib.

He wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat. Ib.

I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books. Ib.

What my dear lady Disdain!
Ib.

Shall I never see a bachelor of three-score
again? Ib.

In time the savage bull doth bear the yoke.†
Ib.

Benedick the married man. Ib.

There live we as merry as the day is long.
Act 2, 1.

How many fools serve mad jealousy!
Ib.

Speak low, if you speak love. Ib.

* In some editions "regions."

† This stanza, with an additional one, is found in Beaumont and Fletcher's "Rollo," Act 5, 2. The song is possibly a ballad current in Shakespeare's time, but Malone and other editors prefer to believe that it is by Shakespeare.

† Thos. Watson (1560-1591) has a sonnet with the line: "In time the bull is brought to bear the yoke." Ovid ("Tristia," 4, 6, 3) has: "Tempore rutilicolæ patiens fit taurus aratri."

Friendship is constant in all other things,
 Save in the office and affairs of love;
 Therefore, all hearts in love use their own tongues;
 Let every eye negotiate for itself,
 And trust no agent; for beauty is a witch, Against whose charms faith melteth into blood.

Much Ado about Nothing. Act 2, 1.

Silence is the perfected herald of joy; I were but little happy, if I could say how much. Ib.

Every why hath a wherefore. (Proverb.)

Act 2, 2.

He was wont to speak plain, and to the purpose, like an honest man and a soldier; and now is he turned orthographer; his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes. Act 2, 3.

Note this before my notes.

There is not a note of mine that's worth the noting. Ib.

Sigh no more ladies, sigh no more,
 Men were deceivers ever;
 One foot in sea, and one on shore;
 To one thing constant never. Ib.

Sits the wind in that corner? Ib.

Man loves the meat in his youth that he cannot endure in his old age. Ib.

Shall quips, and sentences, and these paper bullets of the brain, awe a man from the career of his humour? Ib.

When I said I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married. Ib.

Of this matter

Is little Cupid's crafty arrow made,
 That only wounds by hearsay. Act 3, 1.

So turns she every man the wrong way out;
 And never gives to truth and virtue that
 Which simpleness and merit purchaseth. Ib.

Some Cupid kills with arrows, some with traps. Ib.

For others say thou dost deserve, and I Believe it better than reportingly. Ib.

Well, every one can master a grief but he that has it. Act 3, 2.

He brushes his hat o' mornings; what should that bode? Ib.

Are you good men and true? Act 3, 3.

To be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune; but to write and read comes by nature. Ib.

You are thought here to be the most senseless and fit man. Ib.

You shall comprehend all vagrom men. Ib.

For the watch to babble and talk, is most tolerable and not to be endured. Ib.

The fashion wears out more apparel than the man. Ib.

Comparisons are odorous. Act 3, 5.

I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man, and no honestier than I. Ib.

A good old man, sir, he will be talking;
 as they say, "When the age is in, the wit is out." Ib.

An two men ride of a horse, one must ride behind. Ib.

O, what men dare do! what men may do!
 What men daily do, not knowing what they do! Act 4, 1.

I have marked

A thousand blushing apparitions start
 Into her face; a thousand innocent shames
 In angel whiteness bear away those blushes. Ib.

For it so falls out,
 That what we have we prize not to the worth

Whiles we enjoy it; but being lacked and
 lost,

Why, then we rack the value. Ib.

The idea of her life shall sweetly creep
 Into his study of imagination. Ib.

Into the eye and prospect of his soul. Ib.

O that I were a man for his sake! Ib.

But manhood is melted into courtesies,
 valour into compliment. Ib.

Masters, it is proved already that you are little better than false knaves; and it will go near to be thought so presently. Act 4, 2.

Yea, marry, that's the effest way.* Ib.

Flat burglary as ever was committed. Ib.

O villain! thou wilt be condemned into everlasting redemption for this. Ib.

O that he were here to write me down an ass!—but masters, remember that I am an ass; though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an ass. Ib.

A fellow that hath had losses; and one that hath two gowns and everything handsome about him. Ib.

Patch grief with proverbs. Act 5, 1.

'Tis all men's office to speak patience
 To those that wring under the load of sorrow. Ib.

For there was never yet philosopher
 That could endure the toothache patiently. Ib.

* Effest = quickest.

In a false quarrel there is no true valour.
Much Ado about Nothing. Act 5, 1.

Runs not this speech like iron through your blood?
Ib.

He is composed and framed of treachery.
Ib.

No, I was not born under a rhyming planet.
Act 5, 2.

Done to death by slanderous tongues.
Act 5, 3.

Spite of cormorant devouring Time.
Love's Labour's Lost. Act 1, 1.

Fat paunches have lean pates.
Ib.

Or having sworn too hard-a-keeping oath
 Study to break it, and not break my troth.
Ib.

Why all delights are vain; but that most
 vain,
 Which, with pain purchased, doth inherit pain.
Ib.

As painfully to pore upon a book
 To seek the light of truth; while truth the while

Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look:
 Light, seeking light, doth light of light beguile.
Ib.

Study is like the heaven's glorious sun,
 That will not be deep-searched with saucy looks;

Small have continual plodders ever won,
 Save base authority from others' books.
 These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights,
 That give a name to every fixed star,
 Have no more profit of their shining nights
 Than those that walk, and wot not what they are.
Ib.

And men sit down to that nourishment which is called supper.
Ib.

That unlettered, small-knowing soul.
Ib.

A child of our grandmother Eve, a female;
 or, for thy more sweet understanding, a woman.
Ib.

Welcome the sour cup of prosperity!
 Affliction may one day smile again; and until then, sit down, Sorrow!*

In thy condign praise.
Act 1, 2.

I am ill at reckoning, it fitteth the spirit of a tapster.
Ib.

The world was very guilty of such a ballad some three ages since; but, I think, now
 'tis not to be found.
Ib.

Adieu, valour! rust, rapier! be still, drum! for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth. Assist me some extemporal god of rhyme, for I am sure I shall turn sonnet,† Devise, wit! write, pen! for I am for whole volumes in folio!
Ib.

Nothing becomes him ill, that he would well.
Act 2, 1.

A merrier man,
 Within the limit of becoming mirth,
 I never spent an hour's talk withal;
 His eye begets occasion for his wit;
 For every object that the one doth catch
 The other turns to a mirth-moving jest.
Ib.

Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
 That aged ears play truant at his tales,
 And younger hearings are quite ravished;
 So sweet and voluble is his discourse.
Ib.

Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast, 'twill tire.
Ib.

By my penny of observation.
Act 3, 1.

The heaving of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling.
Ib.

A very beadle to a humorous sigh:
 A critic; nay, a night-watch constable.
Ib.

This wimpled, whining, purblind wayward boy,

This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid;
 Regent of love rhymes, lord of folded arms,
 Th' anointed sovereign of sighs and groans,
 Liege of all loiterers and malcontents.
Ib.

Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue,
 and groan;
 Some men must love my lady, and some Joan.
Ib.

The heavenly rhetoric of thine eye.
Act 4, 3.

Now step I forth to whip hypocrisy.
Ib.

From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
 They are the ground, the books, the academes,
 From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire.
Ib.

For where is any author in the world
 Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye?
Ib.

As sweet and musical
 As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair.
Ib.

He draweth out the thread of his verposity finer than the staple of his argument.
Act 5, 1.

Priscian a little scratched; 'twill serve.
Ib.

They have been at a great feast of languages, and stolen the scraps.
Ib.

* This is the reading of the first folio. A common reading is: "Till then, sit thee down, Sorrow."

† "Sonnet" in all the old copies. "Sonneteer" is the later and received reading.

In the posteriors of this day; which the rude multitude call the afternoon.

Love's Labour's Lost. Act 5, 1.

The word is well culled, chose; sweet, and apt,

I do assure you, sir, I do assure. Ib.

O, I am stabbed with laughter. Act 5, 2.

It can never be
They will digest this harsh indignity. Ib.

Taffata phrases, silken terms precise,

Three-piled hyperboles, spruce affectation,
Figures pedantical; these summer flies

Have blown me full of maggot ostentation, Ib.

In russet yeas, and honest kersey noes. Ib.

A heavy heart bears but a humble tongue. Ib.

A jest's prosperity lies in the ear
Of him that hears it, never in the tongue

Of him that makes it. Ib.

When daisies pied, and violets blue,
And lady-smocks all silver white,

And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue
Do paint the meadows with delight. Ib.

And coughing drowns the parson's saw. Ib.

But earthly happier * is the rose distilled,
Than that, which, withering on the virgin

thorn,
Grows, lives, and dies, in single blessedness.

A Midsummer Night's Dream. Act 1, 1.

Ah me! for aught that ever I could read,
Could ever hear, by tale or history,

The course of true love never did run smooth. Ib.

Love looks not with the eyes, but with the mind;

And therefore is winged Cupid painted blind. Ib.

This is Ercole's vein. Act 1, 2.

I will aggravate my voice so, that I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove; I will roar you an 'twere any nightingale. Ib.

A proper man, as one shall see in a summer's day. Ib.

Over hill, over dale,
Thorough bush, thorough brier,

Over park, over pale,
Thorough flood, thorough fire. Act 2, 1.

And the imperial votaress passed on,
In maiden meditation, fancy-free. Ib.

I'll follow thee, and make a heaven of hell,
To die upon the hand I love so well. Ib.

I'll put a girdle round about the earth
In forty minutes.† Ib.

I know a bank, where the wild thyme
blows

Where ox-lips, and the nodding violet grows;

Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine,

With sweet musk-roses, and with eglantine.† Ib.

Who will not change a raven for a dove? Act 2, 2.

The will of man is by his reason swayed. Ib.

God shield us!—a lion among ladies is a most dreadful thing: for there is not a more fearful wild-fowl than your lion, living. Act 3, 1.

Bless thee, Bottom! bless thee! thou art translated. Ib.

To say the truth, reason and love keep little company together now-a-days. Ib.

Lord, what fools these mortals be. Act 3, 2.

So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, seeming parted;

But yet an union in partition,
Two lovely berries moulded on one stem. Ib.

And sleep, that sometimes shuts up sorrow's
eye. Ib.

Cupid is a knavish lad
Thus to make poor females mad. Ib.

Jack shall have Jill,
Nought shall go ill,

The man shall have his mare again, and all shall be well. Ib.

I have a reasonable good ear in music: let us have the tongs and the bones. Act 4, 1.

But as the fierce vexation of a dream. Ib.

The lunatic, the lover, and the poet,
Are of imagination all compact.

One sees more devils than vast hell can hold,—
That is, the madman: the lover, all as frantic,

Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt.
The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,

Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven,

And, as imagination bodies forth
The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen

Turns them to shapes, and gives to airy
nothing

A local habitation and a name. Act 5, 1.

* In all the old copies the reading is "earthlier happy." In the folio the words are "earthlier happye." The "r" is supposed to have been transposed.

† The reading of the first quarto. In the folio the passage appears as one line: "I'll put a girdle about the earth in forty minutes."

‡ Steevens amends this to "whereon the wild thyme blows," and alters "luscious woodbine" to "lush woodbine."

Or in the night, imagining some fear,
How easy is a bush supposed a bear!

A Midsummer Night's Dream. Act 5, 1.

Very tragical mirth. Ib.

For never anything can be amiss
When simpleness and duty tender it. Ib.

And in the modesty of fearful duty
I read as much, as from the rattling tongue
Of saucy and audacious eloquence. Ib.

That is the true beginning of our end. Ib.

Our true intent is—all for your delight. Ib.

The best in this kind are but shadows. Ib.

The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve:

Lovers, to bed; 'tis almost fairy time. Ib.

In sooth I know not why I am so sad;
It wearies me: you say it wearies you;
But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
I am to learn.

The Merchant of Venice. Act 1, 1.

And in a word, but even now worth this,
And now worth nothing. Ib.

Now, by two-headed Janus,
Nature hath framed strange fellows in her
time;

Some that will evermore peep through their eyes

And laugh, like parrots, at a bagpiper;
And other of such vinegar aspect,
That they'll not show their teeth in way of smile

Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable.
Ib.

You have too much respect upon the world:
They lose it that do buy it with much care.
Ib.

I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano;
A stage, where every man must play a part,
And mine a sad one. Ib.

Why should a man, whose blood is warm within,
Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster? Ib.

As who should say, I am Sir Oracle,
And, when I ope my lips, let no dog bark!
O my Antonio, I do know of these,
That therefore only are reputed wise,
For saying nothing. Ib.

Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice.
His reasons are as two grains of wheat, hid in two bushels of chaff: You shall seek all day ere you find them; and when you have found them, they are not worth the search.
Ib.

My purse, my person, my extremest means
Lie all unlocked to your occasions. Ib.

In my school-days, when I had lost one shaft,

I shot his fellow of the self-same flight
The self-same way, with more advised watch,

To find the other forth; and by adventuring both

I oft found both. Ib.

They are as sick that surfeit with too much, as they that starve with nothing.

Act 1, 2.

If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages princes' palaces. Ib.

God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man. Ib.

I dote on his very absence. Ib.

Ships are but boards, sailors but men,
there be land rats and water rats. Act 1, 3.

If I can catch him once upon the hip,
I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear
him. Ib.

Even there where merchants most do congregate. Ib.

The devil can cite scripture for his purpose.
Ib.

A goodly apple rotten at the heart.
O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath!
Ib.

For sufferance is the badge of all our tribe.
Ib.

Shall I bend low, and in a bondman's key,
With bated breath, and whispering humbleness? Ib.

For when did friendship take,
A breed of barren metal of his friend? Ib.

O father Abraham! what these Christians
are,
Whose own hard dealings teach them to suspect
The thoughts of others! Ib.

I like not fair terms and a villain's mind.
Ib.

Mislike me not for my complexion,
The shadowed livery of the burnished sun.
Act 2, 1.

If Hercules and Lichas play at dice,
Which is the better man? The greater throw

May turn by fortune from the weaker hand!
Ib.

O heavens, this is my true-begotten father!
Act 2, 2.

According to fates and destinies, and such odd sayings, the sisters three, and other branches of learning. Ib.

It is a wise father that knows his own child. The Merchant of Venice. Act 2, 2.

Like one well studied in a sad ostent
To please his grandam. Ib.

These foolish drops do something drown
my manly spirit. Act 2, 3.

And the vile squeaking of the wry-necked fife. Act 2, 5.

All things that are,
Are with more spirit chased than enjoyed.
How like a younker, or a prodigal
The scarfed bark puts from her native bay,
Hugged and embraced by the strumpet
wind!

How like the prodigal doth she return.
With over-weathered ribs, and ragged
sails,
Lean, rent, and beggared by the strumpet wind! Act 2, 6.

But love is blind, and lovers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselves commit. Ib.

I never heard a passion so confused,
So strange, outrageous, and so variable. Act 2, 8.

A kinder gentleman treads not the earth. Ib.

Thus hath the candle singed the moth.
O, these deliberate fools! Act 2, 9.

The ancient saying is no heresy :—
Hanging and wiving goes by destiny. Ib.

The Goodwins, I think they call the place ;
a very dangerous flat and fatal, where the carcasses of many a tall ship lie buried, as they say, if my gossip Report be an honest woman of her word. Act 3, 1.

Let him look to his bond. Ib.

If it will feed nothing else, it will feed my revenge. Ib.

Hath not a Jew eyes? Hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? Ib.

The villainy you teach me, I will execute ;
and it shall go hard but I will better the instruction. Ib.

No satisfaction, no revenge; nor no ill-luck stirring but what lights on my shoulders; no sighs, but o' my breathing;
no tears, but o' my shedding. Ib.

Thou stick'st a dagger in me. Ib.

He makes a swan-like end,
Fading in music. Act 3, 2.

Tell me where is fancy bred,
Or in the heart, or in the head? Ib.

So may the outward shows be least themselves:

The world is still deceived with ornament.
In law what plea so tainted and corrupt,
But, being seasoned with a gracious voice,
Obscures the show of evil? Ib.

There is no vice so simple but assumes
Some mark of virtue on his outward parts. Ib.

Thou gaudy gold,
Hard food for Midas! Ib.

Rash-embraced despair,
And shuddering fear and green-eyed jealousy. Ib.

An unlesioned girl, unschooled, unpractised:

Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learn; happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn. Ib.

And swearing till my very roof was dry,
With oaths of love. Ib.

He did entreat me past all saying nay. Ib.

Here are a few of the unpleasant'st words
That ever blotted paper! Ib.

I'll have my bond. Act 3, 3.

I never did repent for doing good,
Nor shall not now. Act 3, 4.

This comes too near the praising of myself. Ib.

How every fool can play upon the word !
Act 3, 5.

What a wit-snapper are you ! Ib.

Wilt thou show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant? I pray thee, understand a plain man in his plain meaning. Ib.

Let it serve for table talk. Ib.

A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch,
Uncapable of pity, void and empty
From any dram of mercy. Act 4, 1.

Some men there are, love not a gaping pig,
Some, that are mad if they behold a cat. Ib.

Do all men kill the thing they do not love? Ib.

A harmless necessary cat. Ib.

What, wouldst thou have a serpent sting thee twice? Ib.

What judgment shall I dread, doing no
wrong? Ib.

The pound of flesh which I demand of him,
Is dearly bought, 'tis mine, and I will have it. Ib.

I am a tainted wether of the flock. Ib.

I never knew so young a body with so old a head. Ib.

On what compulsion must I? tell me that.

The Merchant of Venice. Act 4, 1.

The quality of mercy is not strained,
It droppeth, as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath: it is twice blessed;
It blesseth him that gives, and him that takes:

'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes
The thronèd monarch better than his crown;
His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,

The attribute to awe and majesty,
Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
But mercy is above this sceptred sway,
It is enthronèd in the hearts of kings;
It is an attribute to God himself;
And earthly power doth then show likest
God's

When mercy seasons justice. Ib.

We do pray for mercy;
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy. Ib.

Wrest once the law to your authority;
To do a great right, do a little wrong. Ib.

'Twill be recorded for a precedent;
And many an error, by the same example
Will rush into the state. Ib.

A Daniel come to judgment! Ib.

Is it so nominated in the bond? Ib.

For herein Fortune shows herself more kind
Than is her custom. Ib.

Speak me fair in death. Ib.

Now, infidel, I have you on the hip. Ib.

You take my house, when you do take the prop
That doth sustain my house; you take my life
When you do take the means whereby I live. Ib.

He is well paid that is well satisfied. Ib.

I pray you know me when we meet again. Ib.

You taught me first to beg, and now, methinks,
You teach me how a beggar should be answered. Ib.

Here will we sit, and let the sounds of music
Creep in our ears; soft stillness, and the night,

Become the touches of sweet harmony.
Sit, Jessica. Look, how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines* of bright gold:
There's not the smallest orb which thou
behold'st,

But in his motion like an angel sings,

Still quiring to the young-eyed cherubins;
Such harmony is in immortal souls;
But, whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.
Act 5, 1.

I am never merry when I hear sweet music. Ib.

Since nought so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But music for the time doth change his nature:

The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils;
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus;
Let no such man be trusted! Ib.

How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world. Ib.

So doth the greater glory dim the less. Ib.

How many things by season seasoned are
To their right praise, and true perfection! Ib.

This night, methinks, is but the daylight sick. Ib.

For a light wife doth make a heavy husband. Ib.

These blessed candles of the night. Ib.

The courtesy of nations allows you my better; in that you are the first-born.

As you Like it. Act 1, 1.

Therefore use thy discretion; I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger. Ib.

The dulness of the fool is the whetstone of the wits. Act 1, 2.

Unmuzzle your wisdom. Ib.

Well said: that was laid on with a trowel. Ib.

Only in the world I fill up a place, which may be better supplied when I have made it empty. Ib.

Now Hercules be thy speed, young man! Ib.

My pride fell with my fortunes. Ib.

Thus must I from the smoke into the smother. Ib.

Celia: Not a word? Ros.: Not one to throw at a dog. Act 1, 3.

O, how full of briars is this working-day
world! Ib.

Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold. Ib.

We'll have a swashing and a martial outside. Ib.

* "Patens" in the folio. The paten or patine is the small flat dish used in the service of the altar.

Sweet are the uses of adversity ;
Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head :
And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running
brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in everything.

As you Like it. Act 2, 1.

The big round tears
Coursed one another down his innocent nose,
In piteous chase. Ib.

Thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings do, giving thy sum of more
To that which had too much. Ib.

Sweep on, you fat and greasy citizens ! Ib.

I love to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter. Ib.

He that doth the ravens feed,
Yea, providently caters for the sparrow,
Be comfort to my age ! Act 2, 3.

For in my youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood. Ib.

My age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty, but kindly. Ib.

O good old man, how well in thee appears
The constant service of the antique world,
When service sweat for duty, not for need !
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweat but for promotion,
And having that, do choke their service up.

Ib.
But travellers must be content. Act 2, 4.

We that are true lovers, run into strange capers. Ib.

Thou speakest wiser than thou art ware of. Ib.

Under the greenwood tree. Act 2, 5.

I can suck melancholy out of a song, as a weasel sucks eggs. Ib.

I'll rail against all the first-born in Egypt. Ib.

And railed on Lady Fortune in good terms,
In good set terms. Act 2, 7.

"Call me not fool till heaven hath sent me fortune."

And then he drew a dial from his poke,
And, looking on it with lack-lustre eye,
Says very wisely, "It is ten o'clock."
Thus may we see," quoth he, "how the world wags." Ib.

And so, from hour to hour, we ripe and
ripe,
And then from hour to hour, we rot and rot :
And thereby hangs a tale. Ib.

My lungs began to crow like chanticleer. Ib.

Motley's the only wear. Ib.

If ladies be but young and fair,
They have the gift to know it : and in his brain,—

Which is as dry as the remainder biscuit
After a voyage—he hath strange places crammed

With observation, the which he vents
In mangled forms. Ib.

I must have liberty
Withal, as large a charter as the wind,
To blow on whom I please. Ib.

The 'why' is plain as way to parish church. Ib.

Your gentleness shall force,
More than your force move us to gentleness. Ib.

If ever you have looked on better days,
If ever been where bells have knolled to church. Ib.

All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players :

They have their exits and their entrances,
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first the infant,

Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.
And then the whining schoolboy with his satchel,

And shining morning face, creeping like snail

Unwillingly to school. And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow. Then a soldier,

Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard,

Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,

Seeking the bubble reputation Even in the cannon's mouth. And then the justice,

In fair round belly, with good capon lined,
With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances ;
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts

Into the lean and slippered pantaloons,
With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side ;
His youthful hose, well saved, a world too wide

For his shrunk shank ; and his big manly voice,

Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness, and mere oblivion,— Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything. Ib.

Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind

As man's ingratitude :
Thy tooth is not so keen,
Because thou art not seen,

Although thy breath be rude. Ib.

As you Like it. Act 2, 7.

Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly. Ib.

The fair, the chaste and unexpressive she.
Act 3, 2.

Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd? Ib.

He that wants money, means, and content is without three good friends. Ib.

Thou art in a parlous state. Ib.

Helen's cheek, but not her heart. Ib.

O wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful! and yet again wonderful, and after that, out of all whooping! Ib.

Do you not know I am a woman? when I think, I must speak. Ib.

I do desire we may be better strangers. Ib.

You have a nimble wit; I think 'twas made of Atalanta's heels. Ib.

The lazy foot of time. Ib.

I am he, that unfortunate he. Ib.

Touch. Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

Aud. I do not know what poetical is: is it honest in deed and word? Is it a true thing?

Touch. No, truly; for the truest poetry is the most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry. Act 3, 3.

Well, I am not fair, and therefore I pray
the gods make me honest. Ib.

I am not a slut, though I thank the gods
I am foul. Ib.

Down on your knees,
And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man's love. Act 3, 5.

Who ever loved that loved not at first sight? * Ib.

But, sure, he's proud; and yet his pride becomes him. Ib.

Wraps me in a most humorous sadness.
Act 4, 1.

I had rather have a fool to make me
merry, than experience to make me sad. Ib.

He that will divide a minute into a thousand parts, and break but a part of the thousandth part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him, that Cupid hath clapped him on the shoulder, but I'll warrant him heart-whole. Ib.

Men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them, but not for love. Ib.

Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing? Ib.

Men are April when they woo, December when they wed; maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives. Ib.

You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue. Ib.

Chewing the food† of sweet and bitter fancy. Act 4, 3.

Kindness, nobler ever than revenge. Ib.

I will kill thee a hundred and fifty ways.
Act 5, 1.

No sooner met, but they looked; no sooner looked, but they loved; no sooner loved, but they sighed; no sooner sighed, but they asked one another the reason.

Act 5, 2.

Oh how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes! Ib.

An ill-favoured thing, sir, but mine own.
Act 5, 4.

The Retort courteous . . . the Quip modest . . . the Reproof valiant . . . the Countercheck quarrelsome . . . the Lie with circumstance . . . the Lie direct. Ib.

Your "if" is the only peace-maker; much virtue in "if." Ib.

If it be true that, "good wine needs no bush," 'tis true that a good play needs no epilogue. Epilogue.

Let the world slide.
Taming of the Shrew. Induction. Sc. 1.

And twenty more such names and men as
these,

Which never were, nor no man ever saw.
Sc. 2.

To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy.
Act 1, 1.

No profit grows where is no pleasure ta'en;
In brief, sir, study what you most affect. Ib.

Doubt not her care should be
To comb your noddle with a three-legged stool. Ib.

* Quoted as a "dead shepherd's saw." The "dead shepherd" was Marlowe, who died in 1593, and the line is from his "Hero and Leander," see page 205.

† Amended in some editions to "eud," but without authority.

There's small choice in rotten apples.

The Taming of the Shrew. Act 1, 1.

Love in idleness. Ib.

I come to wive it wealthily. Act 1, 2.

Nothing comes amiss, so money comes withal. Ib.

And do as adversaries do in law,— Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends. Ib.

And where two raging fires do meet together,
They do consume the thing that feeds their
fury. Act 2, 1.

Old fashions please me best. Act 3, 1.

And thereby hangs a tale.* Act 4, 1.

Honest mean habiliments. Act 4, 3.

Pitchers have ears, and I have many servants. Act 4, 4.

He that is giddy thinks the world turns round. Act 5, 2.

O vile,
Intolerable, not to be endured! Ib.

A woman moved is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty.
Ib.

Such duty as the subject owes the prince,
Even such a woman oweth to her husband.
Ib.

Love all, trust a few,
Do wrong to none.

All's Well that Ends Well. Act 1, 1.

A bright particular star. Ib.

The hind that would be mated by the lion,
Must die for love. Ib.

Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven. Ib.

"Let me not live," quoth he,
"After my flame lacks oil, to be the snuff
Of younger spirits." Act 1, 2.

He must needs go that the devil drives.
Act 1, 3.

My friends were poor but honest. Ib.

He that of greatest works is finisher,
Oft does them by the weakest minister.
Act 2, 1.

Oft expectation fails, and most oft there
Where most it promises; and oft it hits
Where hope is coldest, and despair most sits.
Ib.

Highly fed and lowly taught. Act 2, 2.

To the wars, my boy, to the wars!
He wears his honour in a box unseen,
That hugs his kicksy-wicksy here at home.
Act 2, 3.

A young man married is a man that's married. Ib.

To say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing. Act 2, 4.

For the love of laughter, hinder not the honour of his design. Act 3, 6.

The web of our life is of a mingled yarn,
good and ill together. Act 4, 3.

There's place and means for every man alive. Ib.

Praising what is lost
Makes the remembrance dear. Ib.

Th' inaudible and noiseless foot of Time.
Ib.

If music be the food of love, play on.

Twelfth Night. Act 1, 1.

That strain again—it had a dying fall;
O, it came o'er my ear like the sweet south,
That breathes upon a bank of violets,
Stealing, and giving odour. Ib.

Care's an enemy to life. Act 1, 3.

I am a great eater of beef, and I believe that does harm to my wit. Ib.

What says Quinapalus? "Better a witty fool than a foolish wit." Act 1, 5.

'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and white
Nature's own sweet and cunning hand laid
on:

Lady, you are the cruellest she alive. Ib.

And leave the world no copy. Ib.

Not to be abed after midnight is to be up betimes. Act 2, 3.

Journeys end in lovers' meeting. Ib.

He does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural. Ib.

Dost thou think, because thou art vir-tuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?
Ib.

Ginger shall be hot i' the mouth, too. Ib.

These most brisk and giddy-paced times.
Act 2, 4.

Let still the woman take
An elder than herself; so wears she to him,
So sways she level in her husband's heart.
For, boy, however we do praise ourselves,
Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,
More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn,†
Than women's are. Ib.

* Also found in "Othello," Act 3, 1; "Merry Wives of Windsor," Act 1, 4; "As you Like it," Act 2, 7.

† Given in the Folios as "sound," but altered to "south" by Pope.

‡ "Won" in some modern editions, but "worn" in the original.

Duke. And what's her history?
Viola. A blank, my lord. She never told her love,
 But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud, Feed on her damask cheek: she pined in
 thought;
 And, with a green and yellow melancholy,
 She sat like patience on a monument,
 Smiling at grief. Was not this love indeed?
 We men may say more, swear more; but,
 indeed,
 Our shows are more than will; for still we prove
 Much in our vows, but little in our love.

Twelfth Night. Act 2, 4.

I am all the daughters of my father's house,
 And all the brothers too. Ib.

Here comes the trout that must be caught with tickling. Act 2, 5.

Ay, an you had any eye behind you, you might see more detraction at your heels, than fortunes before you. Ib.

But be not afraid of greatness; some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them. Ib.

Let thy tongue tang with arguments of state. Ib.

The trick of singularity. Ib.

This fellow's wise enough to play the fool;
 And to do that well craves a kind of wit.

Act 3, 1.

O, what a deal of scorn looks beautiful
 In the contempt and anger of his lip! Ib.

Love sought is good, but given unsought is better. Ib.

Let there be gall enough in thy ink;
 though thou write with a goose pen, no matter. Act 3, 2.

Why, this is very midsummer madness.
Act 3, 4.

If this were played upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction. Ib.

Still you keep o' the windy side of the law. Ib.

An I thought he had been valiant, and so cunning in fence, I'd have seen him damned ere I'd have challenged him. Ib.

I hate ingratitude more in a man
 Than lying, vainness, babbling, drunken ness. Ib.

In nature there's no blemish but the mind.
 None can be called deformed but the unkind. Ib.

As the old hermit of Prague* . . . said,
 . . . "That that is, is." Act 4, 2.

Out, hyperbolic fiend! Ib.

There is no darkness but ignorance. Ib.

And thus the whirligig of time brings in his revenges. Act 5, 1.

For the rain it raineth every day. Ib.

A great while ago the world begun. Ib.

They that went on crutches ere he was born, desire yet their life to see him a man.

The Winter's Tale. Act 1, 1.

The wat'ry star.† Act 1, 2.

There is no tongue that moves, none, none
 i' the world,

So soon as yours could win me. Ib.

You put me off with limber vows. Ib.

A lady's verily is
 As potent as a lord's. Ib.

Two lads that thought there was no more behind,

But such a day to-morrow as to-day,
 And to be boy eternal. Ib.

Cram us with praise, and make us
 As fat as tame things; one good deed, dying tongueless,

 Slaughters a thousand waiting upon that.

Our praises are our wages. Ib.

He makes a July's day short as December. Ib.

Gone already!
 Inch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears, a forked one! Ib.

If I could find example
 Of thousands that had struck anointed kings,
 And flourished after, I'd not do 't; but since

Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment bears not one,

Let villainy forswear 't. Ib.

You may as well
 Forbid the sea for to obey the moon. Ib.

'Tis safer to Avoid what's grown, than question how 'tis born. Ib.

A sad tale's best for winter; I have one
 Of sprites and goblins. Act 2, 1.

I will tell it softly,
 Yond' crickets shall not hear it. Ib.

The silence often of pure innocence
 Persuades, when speaking fails. Act 2, 2.

Slander,
 Whose sting is sharper than the sword's. Act 2, 3.

I am a feather for each wind that blows. Ib.

* Jerome, called "the hermit of Camaldoli in Tuscany" (Douce).

† The moon.

There is no truth at all i' the oracle.

The Winter's Tale. Act 3, 2.

Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle

For girls of nine! Ib.

What's gone, and what's past help,
Should be past grief. Ib.

'Tis a lucky day, boy, and we'll do good deeds on 't. Act 3, 3.

Time. I that please some, try all.
Act 4, 1. Chorus.

Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year.
Act 4, 3.

For a quart of ale is a dish for a king. Ib.

The lark, that tirra-lirra chants. Ib.

A snapper-up of unconsidered trifles. Ib.

My revenue is the silly cheat. Ib.

For the life to come, I sleep out the thought of it. Ib.

I cannot tell, good sir, for which of his virtues it was, but he was certainly whipped out of the court. Ib.

Jog on, jog on, the foot-path way,
And merrily hent the stile-a:

A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a mile-a. Ib.

Daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty. Act 4, 4.

Violets dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes,
Or Cytherea's breath. Ib.

When you do dance, I wish you
A wave i' the sea, that you might ever do Nothing but that. Ib.

Nothing she does, or seems,
But smacks of something greater than herself,
Too noble for this place. Ib.

I think there is not half a kiss to choose
Who loves another best. Ib.

He sings them over, as they were gods or goddesses: you would think a smock were a she-angel. Ib.

I love a ballad in print, a' life; for then we are sure they are true. Ib.
'To unpathed waters, undreamed shores. Ib.

Ha, ha! what a fool Honesty is! and Trust his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman! Ib.

Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance. Ib.

Let me have no lying: it becomes none
but tradesmen. Ib.

How blessed are we that are not simple
men!

Yet nature might have made me as these
are,

Therefore, I'll not disdain. Ib.

All deaths are too few, the sharpest too easy.
Ib.

Though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is often led by the nose with gold. Show the inside of your purse to the outside of his hand. Ib.

The odds for high and low's alike. Act 5, 1.

If it be ne'er so false, a true gentleman may swear it in the behalf of his friend.
Act 5, 2.

Lord of thy presence, and no land beside.
King John. Act 1, 1.

And if his name be George, I'll call him
Peter:

For new-made honour doth forget men's names. Ib.

For he is but a bastard to the time,
That doth not smack of observation. Ib.

Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth. Ib.

For courage mounteth with occasion.
Act 2, 1.

I would that I were low laid in my grave;
I am not worth this coil that's made for me.
Ib.

He speaks plain cannon fire, and smoke and bounce. Ib.

Zounds! I was never so bethumped with words
Since first I called my brother's father dad.
Ib.

Well, whiles I am a beggar, I will rail,
And say,—There is no sin, but to be rich;
And, being rich, my virtue then shall be,
To say,—There is no vice, but beggary. Ib.

A woman naturally born to fears. Act 3, 1.
For grief is proud and makes his owner stoop. Ib.

Here I and sorrows sit;
Here is my throne, bid kings come bow to it.
Ib.

Thou ever strong upon the stronger side!
Thou Fortune's champion, that dost never fight

But when her humorous ladyship is by,
To teach thee safety! Ib.

Thou wear a lion's hide! doff it for shame,
And hang a calf-skin on those recreant limbs! Ib.

Old Time, the clock-setter, that bald sexton,
Time. Ib.

But now will canker sorrow eat my bud,
And chase the native beauty from his cheek.
Act 3, 4.

Grief fills the room up of my absent child, Lies in his bed, walks up and down with
me,
Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,
Remembers me of all his gracious parts, Stuffs out his vacant garments with his form. King John. Act 3, 4.

Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,
Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man. Ib.

When Fortune means to men most good,
She looks upon them with a threatening eye. Ib.

And he that stands upon a slippery place,
Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up. Ib.

Methinks nobody should be sad but I. Act 4, 1.
Ib.

How now, foolish rheum! Ib.
Alas! I then have chid away my friend:
He hath a stern look, but a gentle heart. Ib.

To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue
Unto the rainbow, or with taper light
To seek the beauteous eye of heaven to garnish,
Is wasteful and ridiculous excess. Act 4, 2.

And, oftentimes, excusing of a fault
Doth make the fault the worse by the excuse. Ib.

We cannot hold mortality's strong hand. Ib.

Why do you bend such solemn brows on me? Ib.

The spirit of the time shall teach me speed. Ib.

Another lean, unwashed artificer. Ib.

How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds,
Make deeds ill done! Hadst thou not been by,
A fellow by the hand of nature marked,
Quoted and signed to do a deed of shame,
This murder had not come into my mind. Ib.

Out of my sight and never see me more! Ib.

Whate'er you think, good words, I think,
were best. Act 4, 3.

Be great in act as you have been in thought. Act 5, 1.

Be stirring as the time; be fire with fire;
Threaten the threatener, and outface the brow
Of bragging horror. Ib.

This England never did, nor never shall,
Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror,
But when it first did help to wound itself. Act 5, 7.

Come the three corners of the world in arms,
And we shall shock them: nought shall make us rue,
If England to itself do rest but true. Ib.

Time-honoured Lancaster. King Richard II. Act 1, 1.

Let's purge this choler without letting blood. Ib.

The purest treasure mortal times afford,
Is spotless reputation; that away,
Men are but gilded loam, or painted clay.
A jewel in a ten times barred up chest
Is a bold spirit in a loyal breast.
Mine honour is my life; both grow in one;
Take honour from me, and my life is done. Ib.

We were not born to sue, but to command. Ib.

That which in mean men we entitle patience,
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts. Act 1, 2.

The hopeless word of—never to return. Act 1, 3.

Grief makes one hour ten. Ib.

All places that the eye of heaven visits,
Are to a wise man ports and happy havens. Ib.

There is no virtue like necessity. Ib.

For gnarling sorrow hath less power to bite
The man that mocks at it, and sets it light. Ib.

O, who can hold a fire in his hand
By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?
Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite,
By bare imagination of a feast?
Or wallow naked in December snow
By thinking on fantastic summer's heat.
O, no! the apprehension of the good
Gives but the greater feeling to the worse. Ib.

Oh, but they say the tongues of dying men
Enforce attention, like deep harmony. Act 2, 1.

He tires betimes that spurs too fast betimes. Ib.

This royal throne of kings, this sceptred isle,
This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi-Paradise;
This fortress, built by nature for herself,
Against infection, and the hand of war;
This happy breed of men, this little world;
This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall,
Or as a moat defensive to a house,
Against the envy of less happier lands;
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England. Ib.

England, bound in with the triumphant sea.

King Richard II. Act 2, 1.

A lunatic, lean-witted fool. Ib.

The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he. Ib.

In war was never lion raged more fierce,
In peace was never gentle lamb more mild,

Than was that young and princely gentleman. Ib.

Cozening hope; he is a flatterer,
A parasite, a keeper-back of death. Act 2, 2.

Comfort's in heaven; and we are on the earth,
Where nothing lives but crosses, cares, and grief. Ib.

Alas, poor duke! the task he undertakes
Is numbering sands, and drinking oceans dry:
Where one on his side fights, thousands will fly. Ib.

I count myself in nothing else so happy
As in a soul remembering my good friends. Act 2, 3.

Bloody with spurring, fiery-red with haste. Ib.

Evermore thanks, the exchequer of the poor. Ib.

I see thy glory, like a shooting star,
Fall to the base earth from the firmament!
Why sun sits weeping in the lowly west. Act 2, 4.

Eating the bitter bread of banishment. Act 3, 1.

Not all the water in the rough, rude sea
Can wash the balm off from an anointed king. Act 3, 2.

If angels fight,
Weak men must fall; for heaven still guards the right. Ib.

O, call back yesterday, bid time return! Ib.

The worst is death, and death will have his day. Ib.

Sweet love, I see, changing his property,
Turns to the sourest and most deadly hate. Ib.

Of comfort no man speak:
Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs;
Make dust our paper, and with rainy eyes
Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth.
Let's choose executors, and talk of wills. Ib.

And nothing can we call our own but death. Ib.

Yet looks he like a king. Act 3, 3.

He is come to open
The purple testament of bleeding war. Ib.

And my large kingdom for a little grave,
A little little grave, an obscure grave. Ib.

They well deserve to have
That know the strong'st and surest way to get. Ib.

Gave
His body to that pleasant country's earth,
And his pure soul unto his captain, Christ,
Under whose colours he had fought so long. Act 4, 1.

Sweet peace conduct his sweet soul to the bosom
Of good old Abraham! Ib.

As in a theatre, the eyes of men,
After a well-graced actor leaves the stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious. Act 5, 2.

How sour sweet music is,
When time is broke, and no proportion kept!
So is it in the music of men's lives. Act 5, 5.

Pride must have a fall. Ib.

In those holy fields,
Over whose acres walked those blessed feet,
Which, fourteen hundred years ago, were nailed,
For our advantage, on the bitter cross.

King Henry IV. Part 1. Act 1, 1.
It is a conquest for a prince to boast of. Ib.

Let us be Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon. Act 1, 2.

The rusty curb of old father antic, the law. Ib.

Thou hast the most unsavoury similes. Ib.

I would thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought! Ib.

O, thou hast damnable iteration; and art, indeed, able to corrupt a saint. Ib.

And now am I, if a man should speak truly, little better than one of the wicked. Ib.

Why, Hal, 'tis my vocation, Hal; 'tis no sin for a man to labour in his vocation. Ib.

He was never yet a breaker of proverbs: he will give the devil his due. Ib.

There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee. Ib.

I know them to be as true-bred cowards as ever turned back. Ib.

If all the year were playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work. Ib.

A certain lord, neat, and trimly dressed,
Fresh as a bridegroom; and his chin newreaped,
Showed like a stubble-land at harvest home;
He was perfumed like a milliner;
And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held
A pouncet-box, which ever and anon
He gave his nose, and took't away again.

King Henry IV. Part 1. Act 1, 3.

And as the soldiers bore dead bodies by,
He called them untaught knaves, un-
mannerly,
To bring a slovenly, unhandsome corse
Betwixt the wind and his nobility. Ib.
So pestered with a popinjay. Ib.

He made me mad

To see him shine so brisk, and smell so
sweet,
And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman,
Of guns, and drums, and wounds. Ib.

And telling me the sovereign'st thing on earth

Was parmaceti for an inward bruise;
And that it was great pity, so it was,
This villainous saltpetre should be digged
Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
Which many a good tall fellow had destroyed
So cowardly; and but for these vile guns,
He would himself have been a soldier. Ib.

This bald, unjointed chat of his. Ib.

Never did base and rotten policy
Colour her working with such deadly wounds. Ib.

The blood more stirs

To rouse a lion, than to start a hare. Ib.

By heaven, methinks, it were an easy leap,
To pluck bright honour from the pale-faced
moon;

Or dive into the bottom of the deep Where fathom-line could never touch the
ground,
And pluck up drowned honour by the locks. Ib.

But out upon this half-faced fellowship! Ib.

Why what a candy deal of courtesy
This fawning greyhound then did proffer me!

Act 1, 3.

I know a trick worth two of that. Act 2, 1.

If the rascal have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'll be hanged; it could not be else. Act 2, 2.

Argument for a week, laughter for a month, and a good jest for ever. Ib.

Falstaff sweats to death,
And lards the lean earth as he walks along. Ib.

Out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this flower, safety. Act 2, 3.

Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not
know;

And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate! Ib.

A Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy. Act 2, 4.

As merry as crickets. Ib.

Call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing! give me them that will face me. Ib.

A plague on all cowards, still say I. Ib.

I am a Jew else; an Ebrew Jew. Ib.

Two rogues in buckram suits Ib.

Three misbegotten knaves in Kendal green. Ib.

If reasons were as plenty as blackberries,
I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I. Ib.

Mark now, how a plain tale shall put you down. Ib.

Instinct is a great matter; I was now a coward on instinct. Ib.

Watch to-night, pray to-morrow. Ib.

Ah! No more of that, Hal, an thou lovest me. Ib.

What doth gravity out of his bed at midnight? Ib.

I will do it in King Cambyses' vein. Ib.

If sack and sugar be a fault, heaven help
the wicked! Ib.

Banish plump Jack, and banish all the world. Ib.

Play out the play. Ib.

O monstrous! but one half-pennyworth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack! Ib.

At my nativity,

The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes
Of burning cressets. Act 3, 1.

And all the courses of my life do show,
I am not in the roll of common men. Ib.

Glend. I can call spirits from the vasty deep.

Hotspur. Why, so can I, or so can any
man:

But will they come when you do call for them? Ib.

O, while you live, tell truth, and shame
the devil. Ib.

I had rather be a kitten and cry mew,
Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers. Ib.

Mincing poetry,—

'Tis like the forced gait of a shuffling nag.

King Henry IV. Part 1. Act 3, 1.

But in the way of bargain, mark you me,
I'll cavil on the ninth part of a hair. Ib.

And such a deal of skumble-skamble stuff
As puts me from my faith. Ib.

O, he's as tedious

As a tired horse, a railing wife;
Worse than a smoky house:—I had rather
live

With cheese and garlic in a windmill. Ib.

A good mouth-filling oath. Ib.

A fellow of no mark, nor likelihood. Act 3, 2.

By being seldom seen, I could not stir,
But, like a comet, I was wondered at. Ib.

To loathe the taste of sweetness. Ib.

An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a peppercorn, a brewer's horse. Act 3, 3.

Company, villainous company, hath been the spoil of me. Ib.

You are so fretful, you cannot live long. Ib.

Shall I not take mine ease in mine inn? Ib.

If speaking truth

In this fine age were not thought flattery.
Act 4, 1.

Zounds! how has he the leisure to be sick,
In such a justling time? Ib.

This sickness doth infect

The very life-blood of our enterprise. Ib.

I saw young Harry, with his beaver on,
His cuisses on his thighs, gallantly armed,
Rise from the ground like feathered Mercury
And vaulted with such ease into his seat,
As if an angel dropped down from the clouds,

To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus,
And witch the world with noble horsemanship. Ib.

If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a soused gurnet. Act 4, 2.

The cankers of a calm world and a long peace. Ib.

There's but a shirt and a half in all my company. Ib.

Food for powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit as well as better. Ib.

To the latter end of a fray, and the beginning of a feast,
Fits a dull fighter, and a keen guest. Ib.

I do not think a braver gentleman,
More active-valiant, nor more valiant-young,

More daring, or more bold, is now alive,
To grace this latter age with noble deeds.

Act 5, 1.

I would it were bed-time, Hal, and all well. Ib.

Honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour prick me off, when I come on? how then? Can honour set to a leg? No. Or an arm? No. Or take away the grief of a wound? No. Honour hath no skill in surgery, then? No. What is honour? A word . . . Who hath it? He that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it? No. Doth he hear it? No. Is it insensible, then?
Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it—therefore, I'll none of it:
honour is a mere scutcheon:—and so ends
my catechism. Ib.

Look how we can, or sad, or merrily,
Interpretation will misquote our looks.

Act 5, 2.

Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere. Act 5, 4.

Fare thee well, great heart!

Ill-weaved ambition, how much art thou shrunk!

When that this body did contain a spirit,
A kingdom for it was too small a bound:
But now two paces of the vilest earth
Is room enough:—This earth, that bears
these dead,

Bears not alive so stout a gentleman. Ib.

Poor Jack; farewell!

I could have better spared a better man. Ib.

The better part of valour is discretion. Ib.

Full bravely hast thou fleshed

Thy maiden sword. Ib.

Lord, lord, how the world is given to lying! Ib.

I'll purge, and leave sack, and live cleanly, as a nobleman should do. Ib.

Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless,
So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone,
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night,
And would have told him, half his Troy was burned.

King Henry IV. Part 2. Act 1, 1.

See what a ready tongue suspicion hath. Ib.

Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news
Hath but a losing office; and his tongue
Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,
Remembered knolling a departed friend. Ib.

I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men. Act 1, 2.

Your lordship, though not clean past your youth, hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltness of time.

King Henry IV. Part 2. Act 1, 2.

I am poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient. Ib.

We that are in the vaward of our youth. Ib.

For my voice, I have lost it with hollaring, and singing of anthems. Ib.

Wake not a sleeping wolf. Ib.

It was always yet the trick of our English nation, if they have a good thing to make it too common. * Ib.

O, thoughts of men accurst!

Past, and to come, seem best; things present, worst. Act 1, 3.

We are time's subjects. Ib.

He hath eaten me out of house and home. Act 2, 1.

Thus we play the fool with the time; and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us. Act 2, 2.

So that, in speech, in gait,

In diet, in affections of delight,
In military rules, humours of blood,
He was the mark and glass, copy and book,
That fashioned others. And him—O wondrous him!

O miracle of men! Act 2, 3.

A good heart's worth gold. Act 2, 4.

Then death rock me asleep, abridge my doleful days!

Why then let grievous, ghastly, gaping wounds

Untwine the sisters three! Ib.

Patch up thine old body for heaven. Ib.

O sleep! O gentle sleep!

Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh mine eyelids down,

And steep my senses in forgetfulness? Act 3, 1.

With all appliances and means to boot. Ib.

Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown. Ib.

Death, as the Psalmist saith, is certain to all; all shall die. How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair? Act 3, 2.

I will maintain the word with my sword to be a soldier-like word, and a word of exceeding good command, by heaven. Accommodated: That is, when a man is, as they say, accommodated: or, when a man is,—being,—whereby,—he may be thought to be accommodated; which is an excellent thing. Ib.

Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove, or most magnanimous mouse. Ib.

Most forcible Feeble. Ib.

We have heard the chimes at midnight. Ib.

I care not; a man can die but once;—we owe God a death. Ib.

He that dies this year is quit for the next. Ib.

How subject we old men are to this vice of lying! Ib.

He was, for all the world, like a forked radish, with a head fantastically carved upon it with a knife. Ib.

A rotten case abides no handling. Act 4, 1.

Against ill chances men are ever merry; But heaviness foreruns the good event. Act 4, 2.

A peace is of the nature of a conquest; For then both parties nobly are subdued, And neither party loser. Ib.

I may justly say with the hook-nosed fellow of Rome—"I came, saw, and overcame." Act 4, 3.

A man cannot make him laugh;—but that's no marvel; he drinks no wine. Ib.

If I had a thousand sons, the first human principle I would teach them should be—to forswear thin potatoes. Ib.

He hath a tear for pity, and a hand Open as day for melting charity: Yet, notwithstanding, being incensed, he's flint. Act 4, 4.

O polished perturbation! golden care! Act 4, 5.

Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought. Ib.

Commit

The oldest sins the newest kind of ways. Ib.

A joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kick-shaws. Act 5, 1.

It is certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take diseases, one of another: therefore let men take heed of their company. Ib.

A foutra for the world, and worldlings base!

I speak of Africa and golden joys. Act 5, 3.

Under which king, Bezonian? speak, or die! Ib.

Where is the life that late I led? Ib.

How ill white hairs become a fool and jester! Act 5, 5.

Presume not that I am the thing I was. Ib.

If you look for a good speech now, you undo me. Epilogue.

* This passage is not in the Folio edition.

Consideration, like an angel, came,
And whipped the offending Adam out of him. King Henry V. Act 1, 1.

Turn him to any cause of policy,
The Gordian knot of it he will unloose, Familiar as his garter: that, when he speaks,
The air, a chartered libertine, is still. Ib.

The strawberry grows underneath the nettle,
And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best,
Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality. Ib.

And make her chronicle as rich with praise
As is the ooze and bottom of the sea
With sunken wrack and sumless treasures,
Act 1, 2.

For now sits Expectation in the air.
Act 2. Chorus.

Though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod. Act 2, 1.

Base is the slave that pays. Ib.

He's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom. 'A made a finer end, and went away, an it had been any christom child. Act 2, 3.

I knew there was but one way; for his nose was as sharp as a pen, and 'a babbled of green fields. Ib.

Now I, to comfort him, bid him 'a should not think of God; I hoped there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet. Ib.

'A said once, the devil would have him about women. Ib.

Trust none;
For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes,
And hold-fast is the only dog. Ib.

Covering discretion with a coat of folly.
Act 2, 4.

Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting. Ib.

Once more unto the breach, dear friends,
once more,
Or close the wall up with our English dead!
Act 3, 1.

I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
Straining upon the start. Ib.

What rein can hold licentious wickedness,
When down the hill he holds his fierce career? Act 3, 3.

Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull?
Act 3, 5.

And giddy Fortune's furious fickle wheel.
Act 3, 6.

Advantage is a better soldier than rashness.
Ib.

I thought upon one pair of English legs
Did march three Frenchmen. Ib.

There is some soul of goodness in things evil,
Would men observingly distil it out. Act 4, 1.

Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
And make a moral of the devil himself. Ib.

Art thou officer?
Or art thou base, common and popular? Ib.

From my heart-string
I love the lovely bully. Ib.

Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own. Ib.

Gets him to rest, crammed with distressful bread. Ib.

Winding up days with toil, and nights with sleep. Ib.

The fewer men, the greater share of honour.
Act 4, 3.

But if it be a sin to covet honour,
I am the most offending soul alive. Ib.

Our names,
Familiar in his mouth* as household words. Ib.

Be in their flowing cups freshly remembered. Ib.

This story shall the good man teach his son.
Ib.

We few, we happy few, we band of brothers. Ib.

As I suck blood, I will some mercy show.
Act 4, 4.

The saying is true—"The empty vessel makes the greatest sound." Ib.

And so espoused to death, with blood he sealed

A testament of noble-ending love. Act 4, 6.

And all my mother came into mine eyes,
And gave me up to tears. Ib.

There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things. Act 5, 1.

I pray you, fall to; if you can mock a leek, you can eat a leek. Ib.

An angel is like you, Kate, and you are like an angel. Act 5, 2.

For these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favours, they do always reason themselves out
again! Ib.

If he be not fellow with the best king,
thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Ib.

Nice customs court'sey to great kings. Ib.

* "Their mouths" in the quarto.

Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night!

King Henry VI. Part 1. Act 1, 1.

Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days. Act 1, 2.

Glory is like a circle in the water Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself, Till, by broad spreading, it disperse to nought. Ib.

Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens, That one day bloomed, and fruitful were the next. Act 1, 6.

Unbidden guests Are often welcomest when they are gone. Act 2, 2.

But in these nice sharp quillets of the law, Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw. Act 2, 4.

Undaunted spirit in a dying breast! Act 3, 2.

One drop of blood drawn from thy country's bosom, Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore. Act 3, 3.

He then that is not furnished in this sort, Doth but usurp the sacred name of knight. Act 4, 1.

I owe him little duty and less love. Act 4, 4.

She's beautiful, and therefore to be woo'd; She is a woman, therefore to be won. Act 5, 3.

I am a soldier, and unapt to weep, Or to exclaim on fortune's fickleness. Ib.

For what is wedlock forc'd but a hell? Act 5, 5.

Rancour will out. King Henry VI. Part 2. Act 1, 1.

Could I come near your beauty with my nails, I'd set my ten commandments in your face. Act 1, 3.

Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep. Act 3, 1.

The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb. Ib.

A heart unspotted is not easily daunted. Ib.

What know I how the world may deem of me. Act 3, 2.

Who finds the heifer dead, and bleeding fresh,

And sees fast by a butcher with an axe, But will suspect 'twas he that made the slaughter?

Who finds the partridge in the puttock's nest,

But may imagine how the bird was dead, Although the kite soar with unbloodied beak?

Even so suspicious is this tragedy. Ib.

What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted?

Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just. Ib.

Disturb him not, let him pass peaceably! Act 3, 3.

He dies, and makes no sign: O God, forgive him! Ib.

Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all.— Close up his eyes, and draw the curtain close; And let us all to meditation. Ib.

The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful day Is crept into the bosom of the sea. Act 4, 1.

Small things make base men proud. Ib.

There's no better sign of a brave mind than a hard hand. Act 4, 2.

Beggary is valiant. Ib.

The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers. Ib.

Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? That parchment, being scribbled o'er should undo a man? Ib.

Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar school. Act 4, 7.

Kent, in the commentaries of Cæsar writ, Is termed the civillest place of all this isle. Ib.

Ignorance is the curse of God, Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven. Ib.

Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro, As this multitude? Act 4, 8.

Was never subject longed to be a king, As I do long and wish to be a subject. Act 4, 9.

Lord, who would live turmoiled in the court, And may enjoy such quiet walks as these! Act 4, 10.

The unconquered soul of Cade is fled. Ib.

A subtle traitor needs no sophister. Act 5, 1.

Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase,

For I myself must hunt this deer to death. Act 5, 2.

To make a shambles of the parliament house. King Henry VI. Part 3. Act 1, 1.

Frowns, words, and threats,

Shall be the war that Henry means to use. Ib.

In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides. Ib.

Hadst thou but loved him half so well as I
Or felt that pain which I did for him once,
Or nourished him, as I did with my blood.

King Henry VI. Part 3. Act 1, 1.

Such safety finds
The trembling lamb, environed with wolves.
Ib.

An oath is of no moment, being not took
Before a true and lawful magistrate.
Act 1, 2.

How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown,
Within whose circuit is Elysium,
And all that poets feign of bliss and joy.
Ib.

A crown, or else a glorious tomb!
A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre! Act 1, 4.

Unless the adage must be verified
That beggars mounted, run their horse to death. Ib.

Thou art as opposite to every good,
As the Antipodes are unto us,
Or as the south to the septentrion. Ib.

But Hercules himself must yield to odds;
And many strokes, though with a little axe,
Hew down, and fell the hardest timbered oak. Act 2, 1.

The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on. Act 2, 2.

Didst thou never hear
That things ill got had ever bad success?
And happy always was it for that son, Whose father, for his hoarding, went to hell? Ib.

And I, like one lost in a thorny wood,
That rents the thorns, and is rent with the thorns
Seeking a way, and straying from the way;
Not knowing how to find the open air,
But toiling desperately to find it out.
Act 3, 2.

For though usurpers sway the rule a while,
Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs. Act 3, 3.

Warwick, peace!
Proud setter-up and puller-down of kings!
Ib.
Hasty marriage seldom proveth well.
Act 4, 1.

Trust not him that hath once broken faith.
Act 4, 4.

A little fire is quickly trodden out,
Which, being suffered, rivers cannot quench.
Act 4, 8.

Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind;
The thief doth fear each bush an officer.
Act 5, 6.

Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee thither. Ib.

I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear.

Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York.
King Richard III. Act 1, 1.

Our stern alarums changed to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures,
Grim-visaged war hath smoothed his wrinkled front,
And now,—instead of mounting barbed steeds, . . .
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber,
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute. Ib.

Deformed, unfinished, sent before my time
Into this breathing world, scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and unfashionable
That dogs bark at me, as I halt by them. Ib.
This weak piping time of peace. Ib.

Simple, plain Clarence, I do love thee so,
That I will shortly send thy soul to heaven. Ib.

No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity. Act 1, 2.
Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman. Ib.

Vouchsafe, diffused infection of a man. Ib.
To leave this keen encounter of our wits. Ib.

I never sued to friend, nor enemy;
My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing words;
But, now thy beauty is proposed my fee,
My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speak. Ib.

Teach not thy lip such scorn; for it was made
For kissing, lady, not for such contempt. Ib.

Was ever woman in this humour wooed?
Was ever woman in this humour won? Ib.
Framed in the prodigality of nature. Ib.

Because I cannot flatter and speak* fair, Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog,
Duck with French nods and apish courtesy,
I must be held a rancorous enemy.
Cannot a plain man live, and think no harm,
But thus his simple truth must be abused
By silken, sly, insinuating Jacks? Act 1, 3.

The world is grown so bad,
That wrens make prey where eagles dare
not perch;
Since every Jack became a gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jack. Ib.

* "Speak" in the quartos; "look" in the folio.

Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported. King Richard III. Act 1, 3.

And thus I clothe my naked villainy
With odd old ends stol'n forth of holy writ;
And seem a saint, when most I play the devil. Ib.

We will not stand to prate;
Talkers are no good doers. Ib.

Your eyes drop mill-stones, when fools' eyes drop tears. Ib.

Oh I have passed a miserable night,
So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams,
That, as I am a Christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night,
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy
days;
So full of dismal terror was the time!

Act 1, 4.

Lord, Lord! methought what pain it was to drown!

What dreadful noise of waters in mine ears!
What ugly sights of death within mine eyes!
Methought I saw a thousand fearful wrecks;
Ten thousand men that fishes gnawed upon:
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of
pearl,

Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels,
All scattered in the bottom of the sea;
Some lay in dead men's skulls: and in those holes,

Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept

(As 'twere in scorn of eyes) reflecting gems,
Which wooed the slimy bottom of the deep,
And mocked the dead bones that lay scattered by. Ib.

An outward honour for an inward toil. Ib.
They often feel a world of restless cares. Ib.

Brackenbury. Are you so brief?

Second Murderer. O sir, it is better to be brief than tedious. Ib.

Some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me. Ib.

First Murderer. Relent! 'tis cowardly, and womanish.

Clarence. Not to relent, is beastly, savage, devilish. Ib.

'Tis death to me to be at enmity;
I hate it, and desire all good men's love.

Act 2, 1.

I do not know that Englishman alive,
With whom my soul is any jot at odds,
More than the infant that is born to-night:
I thank my God for my humility. Ib.

Q. Eliz. Was never widow had so dear a loss.

Chil. Were never orphans had so dear a loss.

Duch. Was never mother had so dear a loss. Act 2, 2.

When clouds appear, wise men put on their cloaks. Act 2, 3.

By a divine instinct men's minds mistrust Ensuing dangers. Ib.

Small herbs have grace, great weeds do grow apace. Act 2, 4.

If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told
me. Ib.

You are too senseless-obstinate, my lord,
Too ceremonious and traditional. Act 3, 1.

So wise, so young, they say, do ne'er live long. Ib.

I moralise two meanings in one word. Ib.

So cunning, and so young, is wonderful. Ib.

He's all the mother's, from the top to toe. Ib.

I think there's never man in Christendom
That can less hide his love or hate than he.

Act 3, 4.

Lives, like a drunken sailor, on the mast;
Ready, with every nod, to tumble down. Ib.

Fear not, my lord, I'll play the orator,
As if the golden fee, for which I plead,
Were for myself. Act 3, 5.

High-reaching Buckingham grows circum-spect. Act 4, 2.

Gold were as good as twenty orators. Ib.

I am not in the giving vein to-day. Ib.

Hover about me with your airy wings.

Act 4, 4.

Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women

Rail on the Lord's anointed! Ib.

Tetchy and wayward. Ib.

An honest tale speeds best, being plainly told. Ib.

Relenting fool, and shallow, changing woman! Ib.

Thus far into the bowels of the land
Have we marched on without impediment.

Act 5, 2.

True hope is swift, and flies with swallow's wings;

Kings it makes gods, and meaner creatures kings. Ib.

Besides, the king's name is a tower of strength. Act 5, 3.

I have not that alacrity of spirit,
Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.

Ib.

Give me another horse,—bind up my wounds,—

Have mercy, Jesu!—soft! I did but dream.
O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict
me! Ib.

My conscience hath a thousand several
tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain.

King Richard III. Act 5, 3.

There is no creature loves me;
And if I die, no soul will pity me. Ib.

The early village cock
Hath twice done salutation to the morn. Ib.

By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night
Have struck more terror to the soul of

Richard,
Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers. Ib.

For the self-same heaven
That frowns on me, looks sadly upon him. Ib.

A thing devised by the enemy. Ib.

Conscience is but a word that cowards use,
Devised at first to keep the strong in awe. Ib.

A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse! *
Act 5, 4.

Slave! I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die.

I think there be six Richmonds in the field. Ib.

Order gave each thing view.
King Henry VIII. Act 1, 1.

The force of his own merit makes his way. Ib.

A beggar's book
Outworths a noble's blood. Ib.

Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot
That it do singe yourself. Ib.

As merry,
As, first, good company, good wine, good welcome,
Can make good people. Act 1, 4.

Two women placed together makes cold weather. Ib.

Of her, that loves him with that excellence
That angels love good men with. Act 2, 2.

This bold bad man.† Ib.

He was a fool,
For he would needs be virtuous. Ib.

Verily,
I swear 'tis better to be lowly born,
And range with humble livers in content,
Than to be perked up, in a glist'ring grief,
And wear a golden sorrow. Act 2, 3.

† "A bold, bad man."—SPENSER, "Faerie
Queen," Bk. I., c. 1, st. 37.

I swear again, I would not be a queen
For all the world. Ib.

I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable. Act 2, 4.

You're meek and humble-mouthed. Ib.

But your heart
Is crammed with arrogancy, spleen, and pride. Ib.

In sweet music is such art,
Killing care, and grief of heart

Fall asleep, or hearing die. Act 3, 1.
A spleeny Lutheran. Act 3, 2.

'Tis well said again;
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well:
And yet words are no deeds. Ib.

And then to breakfast, with What appetite you have. Ib.

O negligence,
Fit for a fool to fall by! Ib.

I have touched the highest point of all my greatness;

And from that full meridian of my glory,
I haste now to my setting: I shall fall,
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more. Ib.

Press not a falling man too far. Ib.

Farewell, a long farewell, to all my greatness!

This is the state of man: to-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hope; to-morrow blossoms,

And bears his blushing honours thick upon him:

The third day comes a frost, a killing frost;
And,—when he thinks, good easy man, full surely

His greatness is a ripening,—nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventured,

Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,

This many summers in a sea of glory;
But far beyond my depth: my high-blown pride

At length broke under me; and now has left me

Weary, and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream that must for ever hide me.

Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye;
I feel my heart new opened. O how wretched

Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours!

There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,

That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have:

And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again. Ib.

A peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience.

King Henry VIII. Act 3, 2.

And sleep in dull cold marble. Ib.

The depths and shoals of honour. Ib.

Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away
ambition :

By that sin fell the angels. Ib.

Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee:

Corruption wins not more than honesty.

Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not.

Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,

Thy God's, and truth's. Ib.

Had I but served my God with half the zeal

I served my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies. Ib.

An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye.
Give him a little earth for charity!

Act 4, 2.

He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to Heaven, and slept in peace. Ib.

So may he rest; his faults lie gently on him! Ib.

His own opinion was his law. Ib.

Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues

We write in water. Ib.

He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one;
Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuading:

Lofty and sour to them that loved him not;
But, to those men that sought him, sweet as summer. Ib.

And, to add greater honours to his age
Than man could give him, he died fearing God. Ib.

After my death I wish no other herald,
No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.

Ib.

Now I am past all comforts here, but prayers. Ib.

The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings on her! Ib.

To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures. Act 5, 2.

'Tis a cruelty

To load a falling man. Act 5, 3.

Some come to take their ease,
And sleep an act or two. Epilogue.

I have had my labour for my travail.
Troilus and Cressida. Act 1, 1.

Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man? Act 1, 2.

Women are angels, wooing. Ib.

Men prize the thing ungained more than it is. Ib.

The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large. Act 1, 3.

Let us like merchants show our foulest
wares,

And think, perchance, they'll sell; if not
The lustre of the better yet to show
Shall show the better. Ib.

Two curs shall tame each other; pride alone
Must tarre the mastiffs on. Ib.

Modest doubt is called
The beacon of the wise. Act 2, 2.

What's aught, but as 'tis valued? Ib.

'Tis mad idolatry
To make the service greater than the god. Ib.

The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie. Act 2, 3.

He that is proud eats up himself. Ib.

Words pay no debts. Act 3, 2.

To be wise, and love
Exceeds man's might. Ib.

As false
As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,

As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,
Pard to the hind, or step-dame to her son;

Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,

As false as Cressid. Ib.

Welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. Act 3, 3.

One touch of nature makes the whole world kin. Ib.

And like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
Be shook to air. Ib.

A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin. Ib.

Not soon provoked, nor, being provoked,
soon calmed. Act 4, 5.

What's past, and what's to come, is strewn with husks

And formless ruin of oblivion. Ib.

The end crowns all. Ib.

Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:
Life every man holds dear; but the brave
man

Holds honour far more precious-dear than life. Troilus and Cressida. Act 5, 3.

Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you,
Which better fits a lion than a man. Ib.

But flies an eagle flight, bold, and forth on,
Leaving no tract behind.

Timon of Athens. Act 1, 1.

'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after. Ib.

He that loves to be flattered is worthy of the flatterer. Ib.

Men shut their doors against a setting sun.
Act 1, 2.

Varro's servant. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man:
as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest. Act 2, 2.

They froze me into silence. Ib.

'Tis lack of kindly warmth. Ib.

Every man has his fault, and honesty is his. Act 3, 1.

Policy sits above conscience. Act 3, 2.

The devil knew not what he did when he made man politic; he crossed himself by 't.

Act 3, 3.

Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.
Act 3, 5.

He's truly valiant, that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breathe. Ib.

Timon will to the woods, where he shall find

The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind. Act 4, 1.

We have seen better days. Act 4, 2.

O, the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us! Ib.

The learned pate

Ducks to the golden fool: all is oblique;
There's nothing level in our curs'd natures
But direct villainy. Act 4, 3.

I do proclaim

One honest man—mistake me not—but one;
No more, I pray—and he's a steward. Ib.

He that trusts to you,

Where he should find you lions, finds you hares;

Where foxes, geese. Coriolanus. Act 1, 1.

Sighed forth proverbs,

That hunger broke stone walls, that dogs
must eat,

That meat was made for mouths, that the gods sent not

Corn for the rich man only. Ib.

Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.
Act 2, 1.

'Faith, there have been many great men that have flattered the people, who ne'er loved them. Act 2, 2.

I thank you for your voices, thank you—
Your most sweet voices. Act 2, 3.

Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark
you

His absolute "shall"? Act 3, 1.

His nature is too noble for the world:
He would not flatter Neptune for his trident

Or Jove for 's power to thunder. His heart's his mouth:

What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent. Ib.

You common cry of curs! whose breath I hate

As reek o' the rotten fens, whose loves I prize

As the dead carcasses of unburied men
That do corrupt my air,—I banish you!

Act 3, 3.

3. Servant. Where dwell'st thou?

Cor. Under the canopy . . . I' the city of kites and crows. Act 4, 5.

A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears,
And harsh in sound to thine. Ib.

Those doves' eyes

Which can make gods forsworn. Act 5, 3.

O, a kiss

Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge! Ib.

Chaste as the icicle,

That's curdled by the frost from purest snow,
And hangs on Dian's temple. Ib.

The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes.
Act 5, 4.

At a few drops of women's rheum, which are
As cheap as lies. Act 5, 6.

Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart
Too great for what contains it. Ib.

If you have writ your annals true, 'tis
there,

That, like an eagle in a dove-cote, I Fluttered your Volscians in Corioli:

Alone I did it. Ib.

As proper men as ever trod upon neat'sleather. Julius Caesar. Act 1, 1.

You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!

O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,
Knew you not Pompey? Ib.

Beware the Ides of March. Act 1, 2.

Well, honour is the subject of my story.
I cannot tell what you and other men
Think of this life; but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be, as live to be
In awe of such a thing as I myself.

Julius Cæsar. Act 1, 2.

"Dar'st thou Cassius, now,
Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point?" Upon the word,
Accoutred as I was, I plunged in,
And bade him follow. Ib.

Ye gods, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a feeble temper should
So get the start of the majestic world,
And bear the palm alone. Ib.

Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world

Like a Colossus; and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
Men at some time are masters of their fates:
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings. Ib.

Brutus will start a spirit as soon as Cæsar.
Now in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed,
That he is grown so great? Ib.

There was a Brutus once, that would have brooked

The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome,
As easily as a king. Ib.

Let me have men about me that are fat;
Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o'
nights;

Yond' Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous. Ib.

Seldom he smiles; and smiles in such a sort,
As if he mocked himself, and scorned his spirit,

That could be moved to smile at anything.
Such men as he be never at heart's ease
Whiles they behold a greater than themselves. Ib.

For mine own part, it was Greek to me. Ib.

This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomach to digest his words

With better appetite. Ib.

Therefore it is meet
That noble minds keep ever with their likes;
For who so firm that cannot be seduced? Ib.

Lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend. Act 2, 1.

Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream. Ib.

For he will never follow anything
That other men begin. Ib.

But when I tell him he hates flatterers,
He says he does, being then most flattered. Ib.

You are my true and honourable wife;
As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart. Ib.

Think you I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so fathered and so husbanded? Ib.

When beggars die, there are no comets seen;
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes. Act 2, 2.

Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The valiant never taste of death but once. Ib.

How hard it is for women to keep counsel! Act 2, 4.

But I am constant as the northern star. Act 3, 1.

O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lie so low?
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs,
spoils,

Shrunk to this little measure? Ib.

The choice and master spirits of this age. Ib.

Though last, not least in love. Ib.

Thou art the ruins of the noblest man
That ever liv'd in the tide of times. Ib.

And Cæsar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Atë by his side, come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines, with a monarch's
voice,

Cry "Havoc!" and let slip the dogs of war. Ib.

Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause, and be silent that ye may hear. Act 3, 2.

Not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved Rome more. Ib.

As he was valiant I honour him: but, as he was ambitious I slew him. Ib.

Who is here so base that would be a bondman? If any, speak: for him have I offended. Who is here so rude that would not be a Roman? If any, speak: for him have I offended. Who is here so vile, that will not love his country? If any, speak: for him have I offended. I pause for a reply. Ib.

Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;

I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him.
The evil that men do lives after them;
The good is oft interred with their bones;
So let it be with Cæsar. Ib.

For Brutus is an honourable man;
So are they all, all honourable men.

Julius Cæsar. Act 3, 2.

He was my friend, faithful and just to me.

Ib.

When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept;
Ambition should be made of sterner stuff.

Ib.

But here I am to speak what I do know.

Ib.

You all did love him once, not without cause.

Ib.

O judgment, thou art fled to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason!

Ib.

But yesterday, the word of Cæsar might Have stood against the world; now, lies he
there,
And none so poor to do him reverence.

Ib.

You are not wood, you are not stones, but
men.

I have o'ershot myself to tell you of it.

Ib.

If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.

Ib.

For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's angel.

Ib.

This was the most unkindest cut of all.

Ib.

Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,
Quite vanquished him: then burst his mighty
heart;

And, in his mantle muffling up his face,
Great Cæsar fell.

O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!

Ib.

O, now you weep; and, I perceive, you feel
The dint of pity; these are gracious drops.

Ib.

What private griefs they have, alas! I know not.

Ib.

I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts:

I am no orator, as Brutus is;

But, as you know me all, a plain, blunt man.
That love my friend.

Ib.

For I have neither wit, nor words, nor
worth,

Action, nor utterance, nor power of speech,
To stir men's blood: I only speak right on:

I tell you that which you yourselves do know.

Ib.

But were I Brutus,
And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony
Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue

In every wound of Cæsar, that should move
The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

Ib.

Now let it work; mischief, thou art afoot,
Take thou what course thou wilt!

Ib.

Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.

Act 3, 3

When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith.

Act 4, 2.

In such a time as this, it is not meet
That every nice offence should bear his comment.

Act 4, 3.

You yourself
Are much condemned to have an itching palm.

Ib.

The foremost man of all this world.

Ib.

I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Ib.

I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,

When you are waspish.

Ib.

I said an elder soldier, not a better;
Did I say better?

Ib.

There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats;
For I am armed so strong in honesty,
That they pass by me as the idle wind.

Ib.

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Ib.

A friendly eye could never see such faults

Ib.

All his faults observed,
Set in a note-book, learned and conned by rote,

To cast into my teeth.

Ib.

Carries anger as the flint bears fire;
Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again.

Ib.

There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to
fortune;

Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries.

On such a full sea are we now afloat,
And we must take the current when it serves,

Or lose our ventures.

Ib.

But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless.

Act 5, 1.

The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.

Ib.

For ever and for ever farewell, Cassius!
If we do meet again, why, we shall smile;

If not, why, then this parting was well made.

Ib.

O, that a man might know
The end of this day's business, ere it come!

Ib.

O hateful error, melancholy's child!
Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of
men,

The things that are not?

Julius Cæsar. Act 5, 3.

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!
Ib.

Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends, than enemies.

Act 5, 4.

This was the noblest Roman of them all.

Act 5, 5.

He, only, in a general honest thought,
And common good to all, made one of them.
His life was gentle; and the elements
So mixed in him that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world, "This was a man!"

Ib.

There's beggary in the love that can be reckoned.

Antony and Cleopatra. Act 1, 1.

The nature of bad news infects the teller.

Act 1, 2.

There's a great spirit gone! Thus did I desire it:

What our contempts do often hurl from us,
We wish it ours again.

Ib.

Indeed, the tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow.

Ib.

In time we hate that which we often fear.

Act 1, 3.

The demi-Atlas of this earth.

Act 1, 5.

My salad days,

When I was green in judgment.

Ib.

Every time

Serves for the matter that is then born in it.

Act 2, 2.

I do not much dislike the matter, but

The manner of his speech.

Ib.

We did sleep day out of countenance.

Ib.

For her own person,

It beggared all description.

Ib.

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale

Her infinite variety.

Ib.

Read not my blemishes in the world's report.

Act 2, 3.

Music, moody food

Of us that trade in love.

Act 2, 5.

I will praise any man that will praise me.

Act 2, 6.

Ah, this thou should'st have done,
And not have spoke on't! In me, 'tis villainy;

In thee, 't had been good service.

Act 2, 7.

Ambition,

The soldier's virtue.

Act 3, 1.

If I lose mine honour,
I lose myself.

Act 3, 4.

Celerity is never more admired,
Than by the negligent.

Act 3, 7.

He wears the rose

Of youth upon him.

Act 3, 11.

To business that we love, we rise betime,
And go to 't with delight.

Act 4, 4.

This morning, like the spirit of a youth
That means to be of note, begins betimes.

Ib.

Eros, unarm'd; the long day's task is done,
And we must sleep.

Act 4, 12.

Wishers were ever fools.

Act 4, 13.

O, withered is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fallen.

Ib.

Let's do it after the high Roman fashion.

Ib.

A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity: but you, gods, will give us

Some faults to make us men.

Act 5, 1.

His legs bestrid the ocean: his reared arm
Crested the world: his voice was propertyed
To all the tuned spheres.

Act 5, 2.

For his bounty,

There was no winter in 't; an autumn 'twas.

Ib.

Mechanic slaves,

With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers.

Ib.

His biting is immortal; those that do die of it, do seldom or never recover.

Ib.

A very honest woman, but something given to lie.

Ib.

If thou and nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,
Which hurts and is desired.

Ib.

So young, and so untender?

King Lear. Act 1, 1.

Come not between the dragon and his wrath.

Ib.

Hence, and avoid my sight!

Ib.

Time shall unfold what plaited cunning hides.

Ib.

My cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam.

Act 1, 2.

A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor
as the king.

Act 1, 4.

That which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in; and the best of me is diligence.

Ib.

An thou canst not smile as the wind sits,
thou'lt catch cold shortly.

Ib.

Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest.

King Lear. Act 1, 4.

Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend,
More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a child,
Than the sea-monster! Ib.

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is To have a thankless child! Ib.

Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.
Ib.

Zed! thou unnecessary letter! Act 2, 2.

He cannot flatter, he,—
An honest mind and plain,—he must speak truth!
An they will take it, so; if not, he's plain.
These kind of knaves I know. Ib.

A good man's fortune may grow out at heels. Ib.

Down, thou climbing sorrow,
Thy element's below! Act 2, 4.

That, sir, which serves and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form,
Will pack when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm. Ib.

O, sir, you are old!
Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine. Ib.

I confess that I am old;
Age is unnecessary. Ib.
Let not women's weapons, water-drops,
Stain my man's cheeks! Ib.

To wilful men,
The injuries that they themselves procure Must be their schoolmasters. Ib.

Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks! rage!
blow! Act 3, 2.

A poor, infirm, weak, and despised old man.
Ib.

There was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass. Ib.

I am a man
More sinned against than sinning. Ib.

O, that way madness lies; let me shun that!
Act 3, 4.

Tom's a-cold. Ib.

Take heed o' the foul fiend! Ib.

Out-paramoured the Turk. Ib.

'Tis a naughty night to swim in. Ib.

Drinks the green mantle of the standing pool. Ib.

But mice, and rats, and such small deer,
Have been Tom's food for seven long year.*
Ib.

The prince of darkness is a gentleman. Ib.

Child Roland to the dark tower came,
His word was still—Fie, foh, and fum,
I smell the blood of a British man. Ib.

The little dogs and all,
Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me. Act 3, 6.

Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim,
Hound or spaniel, brach or lym,
Or bobtail tyke, or trundle-tail. Ib.

The worst is not,
So long as we can say, "This is the worst."
Act 4, 1.

You are not worth the dust which the rude
wind
Blows in your face. Act 4, 2.

Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile.
Ib.

Patience and sorrow strove
Who should express her goodliest. Act 4, 3.

There she shook
The holy water from her heavenly eyes. Ib.
Our foster-nurse of Nature is repose.
Act 4, 4.

How fearful
And dizzy 'tis, to cast one's eyes so low!
Act 4, 6.

Half-way down
Hangs one that gathers samphire, dreadful trade!
Methinks he seems no bigger than his head:
The fishermen, that walk upon the beach,
Appear like mice. Ib.

The murmuring surge,
That on the unnumbered idle pebbles chafes,
Cannot be heard so high. Ib.

Ay, every inch a king. Ib.

Down from the waist they are Centaurs,
Though women all above. Ib.

Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary,
to sweeten my imagination. Ib.

A man may see how this world goes, with no eyes. Look with thine ears. Ib.

Lear: Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?—Glo.: Ay, sir.—Lear: And the creature run from the cur? There thou might'st behold the great image of authority:
a dog's obeyed in office. Ib.

* "Ratons and myse and soche smale dere
That was his mete that vil. yere."
—Sir Bevis of Hamtoun,

Through tattered clothes small vices do appear ;

Robes and furred gowns hide all. Plate sin with gold,
And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks. King Lear. Act 4, 6.

When we are born, we cry that we are come
To this great stage of fools. Ib.

 Mine enemy's dog,
Though he had bit me, should have stood that night
Against my fire. Act 4, 7.

I am a very foolish, fond old man,
Fourscore and upward, not an hour more or less ;
And, to deal plainly,
I fear I am not in my perfect mind. Ib.

 Men must endure
Their going hence, even as their coming hither :
Ripeness is all. Act 5, 2.

Out-frown false fortune's frown. Act 5, 3.
The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices
Make instruments to plague* us. Ib.

The wheel is come full circle. Ib.
Cordelia, Cordelia ! stay a little. Ib.

 Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle, and low ; an excellent thing in
woman. Ib.

Vex not his ghost : Oh ; let him pass ! he hates him,
That would upon the rack of this tough†
world

Stretch him out longer. Ib.

 He is gone indeed.
The wonder is he hath endured so long :
He but usurped his life. Ib.

 A thing
Too bad for bad report.

Cymbeline. Act 1, 1.
There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp than this is. Ib.

Boldness be my friend ! Act 1, 6.

O sleep, thou ape of death ! Act 2, 2.

Hark, hark ! the lark at heaven's gate sings,‡
And Phoebus 'gins arise,

His steeds to water at those springs
On chaliced flowers that lies ;

And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes ;

With everything that pretty is,
My lady sweet, arise ! Act 2, 3.

As chaste as unsunned snow. Act 2, 5.

 There be many Cæsars,
Ere such another Julius. Britain is A world by itself ; and we will nothing pay
For wearing our own noses. Act 3, 1.

 You shall find us in our salt-water girdle. Ib.

 Some griefs are med'cinable. Ib.

 O, for a horse with wings ! Act 3, 2.

 Why, one that rode to his execution, man,
Could never go so slow. Ib.

 Prouder than rustling in unpaid-for silk. Act 3, 3.

 How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature ! Ib.

 The game is up. Ib.

 No ; 'tis slander,
Whose edge is sharper than the sword ;
whose tongue
Outvenoms all the worms of Nile. Act 3, 4.

 Men's vows are women's traitors. Ib.

 Against self-slaughter
There is a prohibition so divine,
That cravens my weak hand. Ib.

 Hath Britain all the sun that shines ? Ib.

 Prythee, think
There's livers out of Britain. Ib.

 As quarrelous as the weasel. Ib.

 Plenty and peace breeds cowards ; hardness ever
Of hardness is mother. Act 3, 6.

 Weariness
Can snore upon the flint, when resty sloth Finds the down pillow hard. Ib.

 Society is no comfort
To one not sociable. Act 4, 2.

 Though mean and mighty, rotting
Together, have one dust ; yet reverence (That angel of the world) doth make distinction
Of place 'tween high and low. Ib.

 Thersites' body is as good as Ajax',
When neither are alive. Ib.

 Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages ;
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone and ta'en thy wages :
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust. Ib.

 Thou hast finished joy and moan. Ib.

 Quiet consummation have ;
And renowned be thy grave ! Ib.

 Every good servant does not all commands. Act 5, 1.

* In the quartos "scourge" is substituted for "plague."

† Altered by Pope to "tough."

‡ "None but the lark so shrill and clear !

Now at Heaven's gate she claps her wings,
The morn not waking till she sings."

—JOHN LYLE, "Alexander and Campaspe," Act 5, 1.

He had rather
Groan so in perpetuity, than be cured
By the sure physician, death.

Cymbeline. Act 5, 4.

A thing of pity. Ib.

Many dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are steeped in favours. Ib.

He that sleeps feels not the toothache. Ib.

I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good; O, there were desolation of gaolers and gallowses! I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in 't. Ib.

By medicine life may be prolonged, yet death
Will seize the doctor too. Act 5, 5.

Who is 't can read a woman? Ib.

Pardon's the word to all. Ib.

1st Witch:

When shall we three meet again,
In thunder, lightning, or in rain?

2nd Witch:

When the hurlyburly's done,
When the battle's lost and won.

Macbeth. Act 1, 1.

Fair is foul, and foul is fair. Ib.

Banners flout the sky. Act 1, 2.

Though his bark cannot be lost,
Yet it shall be tempest-tossed. Act 1, 3.

What are these,
So withered, and so wild in their attire,
That look not like the inhabitants o' the
earth,
And yet are on 't? Ib.

If you can look into the seeds of time,
And say, which grain will grow, and which will not. Ib.

To be king
Stands not within the prospect of belief. Ib.

The earth bath bubbles, as the water has,
And these are of them. Ib.

The insane root,
That takes the reason prisoner. Ib.

And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths;
Win us with honest trifles, to betray us
In deepest consequence. Ib.

Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme. Ib.

Present fears
Are less than horrible imaginings. Ib.

Nothing is
But what is not. Ib.

Come what come may,
Time and the hour runs through the roughest
day. Ib.

Nothing in his life
Became him like the leaving it; he died
As one that had been studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he owed
As 'twere a careless trifle. Act 1, 4.

There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face;
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust. Ib.

Yet do I fear thy nature;
It is too full o' the milk of human kindness
To catch the nearest way; thou wouldst be great;
Art not without ambition; but without The illness should attend it. What thou wouldst highly
That wouldst thou holily; wouldst not play false,
And yet wouldst wrongly win. Act 1, 5.

Thy letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present. Ib.
Your face, my thane, is as a book where men
May read strange matters. Ib.

Look like the innocent flower,
But be the serpent under it. Ib.

Coign of vantage. Act 1, 6.
If it were done, when 'tis done, then 'twere
well
It were done quickly. Act 1, 7.

That but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here. Ib.
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued, against
The deep damnation of his taking off. Ib.

I have no spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only
Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself,
And falls on the other. Ib.

I have bought
Golden opinions from all sorts of people. Ib.
Letting "I dare not" wait upon "I would,"
Like the poor cat i' the adage.* Ib.
I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more is none. Ib.

Nor time nor place
Did then adbere. Ib.

We fail!
But screw your courage to the sticking-place,
And we'll not fail. Ib.
Memory, the warder of the brain. Ib.
False face must hide what the false heart doth know. Ib.

There's husbandry in heaven;
Their candles are all out. Act 2, 1.

Shut up
In measureless content. Ib.

* See Proverbs: "The cat would eat fish," etc.

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee :—

I have thee not and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
Macbeth. Act 2, 1.

Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going. Ib.

Hear it not, Duncan; for it is a knell
That summons thee to heaven or to hell! Ib.

The fatal bellman which gives the stern'st good-night. Act 2, 2.

The attempt, and not the deed,
Confounds us. Ib.

Consider it not so deeply. Ib.

I had most need of blessing, and "Amen"
Stuck in my throat. Ib.

Methought I heard a voice cry, "Sleep no
more!

Macbeth does murder sleep,"—the innocent
sleep;

Sleep that knits up the ravelled sleeve of
care,

The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,

Balm of hurt minds, great Nature's second course,*

Chief nourisher in life's feast. Ib.

Infirm of purpose! Ib.

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood

Clean from my hand? No; this my hand will rather

The multitudinous seas incarnardine,
Making the green—one red. Ib.

The labour we delight in physics pain.

Act 2, 3.
Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit. Ib.

The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees

Is left this vault to brag of. Ib.

Who can be wise, amazed, temperate, and furious,

Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man.
Ib.

To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
Which the false man does easy. Ib.

There's daggers in men's smiles. Ib.

Upon my head they placed a fruitless crown,
And put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
Thence to be wrenched with an unlineal
hand,

No son of mine succeeding. Act 3, 1.

Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men. Ib.

I am one, my liege,
Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world

Have so incensed, that I am reckless what I do to spite the world. Ib.

Naught's had, all's spent,
Where our desire is got without content:

'Tis safer to be that which we destroy,
Than, by destruction, dwell in doubtful joy.
Act 3, 2.

Things without all remedy
Should be without regard; what's done is done. Ib.

We have scotched the snake, not killed it.
Ib.

After life's fitful fever he sleeps well.
Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor poison,

Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing,
Can touch him further. Ib.

A deed of dreadful note. Ib.

But now, I am cabined, cribbed, confined, bound in. Act 3, 4.

Now good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both! Ib.

Thou canst not say I did it: never shake
Thy gory locks at me. Ib.

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with. Ib.

What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The armed rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger;

Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble. Ib.

Hence, horrible shadow!
Unreal mockery, hence! Ib.

You have displaced the mirth, broke the good meeting,

With most admired disorder. Ib.

Can such things be,
And overcome us like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder? Ib.

Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once. Ib.

Macb. What is the night?
Lady M. Almost at odds with morning.
Ib.

And you all know, security
Is mortal's chiefest enemy. Act 3, 5.

* In Hammer's edition the "voice" is continued to the end of Macbeth's speech. Johnson made it stop at "murder sleep" (as above).

Double, double, toil and trouble.

Macbeth. Act 4, 1.

Black spirits and white,
Red spirits and grey,
Mingle, mingle, mingle,
You that mingle may.* Ib.

By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes;
Open locks, whoever knocks. Ib.

How now, you secret, black, and midnight
hags! Ib.

A deed without a name. Ib.

But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate. Ib.

What, will the line stretch out to the crack of doom? Ib.

The weird sisters. Ib.

When our actions do not,
Our fears do make us traitors. Act. 4, 2.

Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell. Act 4, 3.

I would not be the villain that thou think'st
For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,
And the rich East to boot. Ib.

Boundless intemperance
In nature is a tyranny; it hath been
The untimely emptying of the happy throne,
And fall of many kings. Ib.

Stands Scotland where it did? Ib.

What, man! ne'er pull your hat upon your brows;
Give sorrow words: the grief that does not speak
Whispers the o'erfraught heart, and bids it break. Ib.

What, all my pretty chickens and their dam,
At one fell swoop? Ib.

But I must also feel it as a man;
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me. Ib.

O, I could play the woman with mine eyes. Ib.

Out, damned spot! out, I say! Act 5, 1.

Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeared? Ib.

Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him? Ib.

All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Ib.

What's done cannot be undone. Ib.

Foul whisperings are abroad. Ib.
The devil damn thee black, thou cream-faced loon!

Where gott'st thou that goose look? Act 5, 3.

This push
Will cheer me ever, or dis-seat me now.
I have lived long enough; my way of life
Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf;
And that which should accompany old
age,

As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,

I must not look to have; but in their stead,
Curses, not loud but deep, mouth-honour,
breath,

Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not. Ib.

Canst thou not minister to a mind diseased;
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow;
Raze out the written troubles of the brain;
And, with some sweet oblivious antidote,
Cleanse the stuffed bosom of that perilous
stuff,

Which weighs upon the heart? Ib.

Throw physic to the dogs, I'll none of it. Ib.

I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again. Ib.

Hang out our banners on the outward walls;
The cry is still, "They come." Our castle's strength

Will laugh a siege to scorn. Act 5, 5.

I have supped full with horrors;
Direness, familiar to my slaughterous
thoughts,
Cannot once start me. Ib.

To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day,
To the last syllable of recorded time;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!

Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player,
That struts and frets his hour upon the
stage,

And then is heard no more: it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing. Ib.

To doubt the equivocation of the fiend,
That lies like truth. Ib.

There is nor flying hence, nor tarrying here,
I 'gin to be a weary of the sun. Ib.

Blow, wind! come, wrack!
At least we'll die with harness on our back. Ib.

I bear a charmed life. Act 5, 8.

* This song is found in Middleton's "The Witch" (1604). Act 5, 2.

And be these juggling fiends no more
believed,
That palter with us with a double sense;
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope.

Macbeth. Act 5, 8.

Lay on, Macduff;
And damned be him that first cries, "Hold enough!" Ib.

For this relief, much thanks.

Hamlet. Act 1, 1.

O! farewell, honest soldier. Ib.

Ber. What is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him. Ib.

Is not this something more than fantasy? Ib.

This bodes some strange eruption to our state. Ib.

Whose sore task
Does not divide the Sunday from the week. Ib.

Doth make the night joint-labourer with the
day. Ib.

Of unimproved metal hot and full. Ib.

Some enterprise
That hath a stomach in 't. Ib.

In the most high and palmy state of Rome.
Ib.

We do it wrong, being so majestical,
To offer it the show of violence. Ib.

And then it started, like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons. Ib.

So hallowed and so gracious is the time. Ib.

But look, the morn. in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern * hill. Ib.

Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature,
That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves. Act 1, 2.

With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage,
In equal scale weighing delight and dole. Ib.

The head is not more native to the heart Ib.

He hath, my lord, wrung from me my slow leave

By laboursome petition; and, at last,
Upon his will I sealed my hard consent. Ib.

A little more than kin, and less than kind.
Ib.

Thou know'st 'tis common, all that lives must die,
Passing through nature to eternity. Ib.

Seems, madam! Nay, it is; I know not "seems."

'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forced breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected 'haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, modes,* shapes of grief,

That can denote me truly; these indeed
seem,

For they are actions that a man might play,
But I have that within which passeth show;
These but the trappings and the suits of woe. Ib.

But to perséver

In obstinate condolement, is a course
Of impious stubbornness; 'tis unmanly grief;
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven,
A heart unfortified, a mind impatient. Ib.

O, that this too too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew!
Or that the Everlasting had not fixed
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter. O God!
God!

How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world!
Fie on 't! O fie! 'tis an unweeded garden
That grows to seed! Things rank and gross in nature

Possess it merely. That it should come to this! Ib.

Hyperion to a satyr: so loving to my mother,
That he might not beteem the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly.

Why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on. Ib.

Frailty, thy name is woman! Ib.

A little month. Ib.

Like Niobe, all tears. Ib.

A beast, that wants discourse of reason. Ib.

But no more like my father,
Than I to Hercules. Ib.

It is not, nor it cannot come to good. Ib.

We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart. Ib.

The funeral baked meats
Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven
Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio! Ib.
In my mind's eye, Horatio. Ib.
He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again. Ib.

* "Modes" is the modern reading; "moods" in the folio and quartos.

* "Eastward" in the quartos.

In the dead vast* and middle of the night.

Hamlet. Act 1, 2.

Armed at all points. Ib.

These hands are not more like. Ib.

But answer made it none. Ib.

A countenance more in sorrow than in anger. Ib.

While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred. Ib.

A sable silvered. Ib.

I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape,
And bid me hold my peace. Ib.

If you have hitherto concealed this sight,
Let it be tenable in your silence still ;
And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue.
I will requite your loves. Ib.

Foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes. Ib.

A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting.
The perfume and suppliance of a minute.

Act 1, 3.

His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own ;

For he himself is subject to his birth :
He may not as unvalued persons do,
Carve for himself ; for on his choice depends
The safety and the health of the whole state. Ib.

And keep you in the rear of your affection. Ib.

The chariest maid is prodigal enough,
If she unmask her beauty to the moon ;
Virtue itself 'scapes not calumnious strokes.
The canker galls the infants of the spring,†
Too oft before their buttons be disclosed ;
And in the morn and liquid dew of youth,
Contagious blastments are most imminent. Ib.

Be wary, then ; best safety lies in fear. Ib.

Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven,
Whilst, like a puffed and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,

And reck's not his own rede. Ib.

A double blessing is a double grace. Ib.

* "Waist" in many editions ; afterwards printed "waste." "Vast" in the quarto of 1603.

† See "Love's Labour's Lost" : "The first-born infants of the spring," Act 1, 1.

And these few precepts in thy memory
See thou character. Give thy thoughts no tongue,

Nor any unproportioned thought his act.

Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.

The friends thou hast, and their adoption

tried,

Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel ;

But do not dull thy palm with entertainment

Of each new-hatched, unfledged comrade.

Beware

Of entrance to a quarrel ; but, being in,

Bear 't that th' oppos'd may beware of thee.

Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice ;

Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,

But not expressed in fancy ; rich not gaudy ;

For the apparel oft proclaims the man ;

And they in France, of the best rank and station,

Are most select and generous chief in that.

Neither a borrower nor a lender be :

For loan oft loses both itself and friend ;

And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.

This above all,—To thine own self be true ;

And it must follow, as the night the day,

Thou canst not then be false to any man.

Farewell ; my blessing season this in thee ! Ib.

'Tis in my memory locked,

And you yourself shall keep the key of it. Ib.

You speak like a green girl,

Unsifted in such perilous circumstance. Ib.

Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do know

When the blood burns, how prodigal the

soul

Lends§ the tongue vows. Ib.

Be somewhat scanter of your maiden presence. Ib.

It is a nipping and an eager air. Act 1, 4.

But, to my mind—though I am native here,

And to the manner born—it is a custom

More honoured in the breach than the observance. Ib.

Angels and ministers of grace defend us ! Ib.

Be thy intents wicked or charitable,

Thou com'st in such a questionable shape,

That I will speak to thee. Ib.

Let me not burst in ignorance ! Ib.

In complete steel,

Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon,

Making night hideous. Ib.

† "Hooks" in many editions, but without authority.

§ "Gives" in the folio ; "lends" in the quartos.

With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls. Hamlet. Act 1, 4.

Look, with what courtous action
It waves* you to a more removed ground. Id.

I do not set my life at a pin's fee;
And, for my soul, what can it do to that,
Being a thing immortal as itself? Id.

Go on; I'll follow thee. Id.

My fate cries out,
And makes each petty artery in this body
As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve. Id.

Something is rotten in the state of Denmark. Id.

Whither wilt thou lead me? speak; I'll go no further. Act 1, 5.

But that I am forbid
To tell the secrets of my prison house,
I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood,
Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres,

Thy knotted and combined locks to part
And each particular hair to stand on end,
Like quills upon the fretful porcupine;
But this eternal blazon must not be
To ears of flesh and blood.—List, list, O list! Id.

Murder most foul, as in the best it is,
But this most foul, strange, and unnatural. Id.

With wings as swift
As meditation, or the thoughts of love. Id.
O my prophetic soul! mine uncle! Id.

O, Hamlet, what a falling off was there!
From me, whose love was of that dignity,
That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage. Id.

But soft! methinks, I scent the morning's air. Id.

Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhousel'd, disappointed, unaneled;
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head;
O horrible! O horrible! most horrible!
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not. Id.

Leave her to Heaven,
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
To prick and sting her. Id.

While memory holds a seat
In this distracted globe. Remember thee!
Yea, from the table of my memory
I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,
All saws of books, all forms, all pressures
past,
That youth and observation copied there. Id.

Within the book and volume of my brain. Id.

O villain, villain, smiling, damnèd villain! Id.

My tables—meet it is I set it down,
That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain;
At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmark. Id.

There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave
To tell us this. Id.

And so, without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit that we shake hands and part;
You, as your business and desire shall point
you,

For every man hath business and desire,
Such as it is—and for mine own poor part,
Look you, I'll go pray. Id.

These are but wild and whirling words, my lord. Id.

It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you. Id.

Art thou there, truepenny?
Come on,—you hear this fellow in the cellarage. Id.

O day and night, but this is wondrous strange! Id.

There are more things in heaven and earth,
Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your† philosophy. Id.
Rest, rest, perturbed spirit. Id.

The time is out of joint;—O cursed spite,
That ever I was born to set it right! Id.

The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind;
A savageness in unreclaimed blood. Act 2, 1.

Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth. Id.

By indirections find directions out. Id.
He raised a sigh so piteous and profound,
That it did seem to shatter all his bulk. Id.

This is the very ecstasy of love. Id.

Such thanks
As fits a king's remembrance. Act 2, 2.
Thou still hast been the father of good news. Id.

Brevity is the soul of wit. Id.
More matter with less art. Id.

That he is mad, 'tis true; 'tis true 'tis pity;
And pity 'tis 'tis true; a foolish figure;
But farewell it, for I will use no art. Id.

* "Wafts" in the folio.

† The original reading is "our philosophy."

And now remains
That we find out the cause of this effect;
Or, rather say, the cause of this defect,
For this effect, defective, comes by cause.

Hamlet. Act 2, 2.

That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase;
"beautified" is a vile phrase. Ib.

Doubt thou the stars are fire;
Doubt that the sun doth move;
Doubt truth to be a liar;
But never doubt I love. Ib.

Hath there been such a time, I'd fain know that,

That I have positively said "'Tis so,"
When it proved otherwise? Ib.

Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm, and carters. Ib.

Hamlet. You are a fishmonger.

Polonius. Not I, my lord.

Hamlet. Then I would you were so honest
a man. Ib.

Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.* Ib.

Still harping on my daughter. Ib.

Words, words, words! Ib.

The satirical rogue says here, that old men have grey beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber and plum-tree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams: all which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for you yourself, sir, shall grow old as I am, if,
like a crab, you could go backward. Ib.

Though this be madness, yet there is method in it. Ib.

These tedious old fools. Ib.

As the indifferent children of the earth. Ib.

On Fortune's cap we are not the very button. Ib.

Hamlet. What's the news?

Rosencrantz. None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest.

Hamlet. Then is doomsday near. Ib.

There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so. Ib.

O God! I could be bounded in a nut-shell, and count myself a king of infinite space,
were it not that I have bad dreams. Ib.

The very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream. Ib.

I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality that it is but a shadow's shadow. Ib.

* "Two thousand" in the folio; "ten" in the quartos.

Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks. Ib.

It goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you,—this brave o'er-hanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire,—why, it appears no other thing to me but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world!
the paragon of animals! and yet, to me,
what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me; no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling, you seem to say so. Ib.

There was no such stuff in my thoughts. Ib.

And the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for it. Ib.

'Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin, to tarre them to controversy. Ib.

There is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out. Ib.

I am but mad north-north-west; when the wind is southerly, I know a hawk from a handsaw. Ib.

Come, give us a taste of your quality. Ib.

The play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general. Ib.

Let them be well used; for they are the abstract, and brief chronicles, of the time:
after your death you were better have a bad epitaph, than their ill report while you live. Ib.

Use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity; the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Ib.

O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I!
Ib.

What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba,
That he should weep for her? Ib.

He would drown the stage with tears,
And cleave the general ear with horrid
speech;

Make mad the guilty, and appal the free;
Confound the ignorant; and amaze, indeed,
The very faculties of eyes and ears. Ib.

A dull, and muddy-mettled rascal. Ib.

But I am pigeon-livered, and lack gall
To make oppression bitter. Ib.

Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,
And fall a-cursing, like a very drab.

Hamlet. Act 2, 2.

For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak

With most miraculous organ. Ib.

The devil hath power
To assume a pleasing shape. Ib.

I'll have grounds
More relative than this; the play's the thing
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king. Ib.

'Tis too much proved,—that with devotion's visage

And pious action, we do sugar o'er
The devil himself. Act 3, 1.

To be, or not to be; that is the question:—
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind, to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them. To die,—to sleep:—

No more; and, by a sleep, to say we end
The heart-ache, and the thousand natural shocks

That flesh is heir to,—'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished. To die—to sleep;—
To sleep! perchance to dream;—ay, there's the rub;

For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,

When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause: there's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life:

For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,

The oppressor's wrong, the proud* man's contumely,

The pangs of despised† love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurns

That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make

With a bare bodkin? Who would fardels bear,‡

To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after death,

The undiscovered country, from whose bourn
No traveller returns, puzzles the will,

And makes us rather bear those ills we have,
Than fly to others that we know not of?

Thus conscience doth make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution

Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought;
And enterprises of great pith and moment,

With this regard, their currents turn awry,||
And lose the name of action. Ib.

* "The poor man's contumely" in the folio.
† "Dispriz'd" in the folio; "despis'd" in the quarto.

‡ "Who would these fardels bear," in the folio.
|| "Awry" in the quarto; "away" in the folio.

Nymph, in thy orisons
Be all my sins remembered. Ib.

For, to the noble mind,
Rich gifts wax poor, when givers prove unkind. Ib.

Get thee to a nunnery. Ib.

I am myself indifferent honest. Ib.

What should such fellows as I do crawling between heaven and earth? We are arrant knaves, all. Ib.

Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool nowhere but in 's own house. Ib.

Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow,
thou shalt not escape calumny. Ib.

If thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool;
for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them. Ib.

I have heard of your paintings, too, well enough. God hath given you one face, and you make yourselves another. Ib.

O, what a noble mind is here o'erthrown!
The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye,
tongue, sword:

The expectancy and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion, and the mould of form,
The observed of all observers! quite, quite,
down!

And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That sucked the honey of his music vows,

Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,

Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;

That unmatched form and figure of blown youth,

Blasted with ecstasy. O, woe is me!
To see what I have seen, see what I see!

Ib.
Madness in great ones must not unwatched
go. Ib.

Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue: but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier had spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently, for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) the whirlwind of your passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness.

Act 3, 2.

Tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings; who for the most part are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb shows and noise. Ib.

It out-herods Herod: pray you, avoid it. Ib.

Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature. Hamlet. Act 3, 2.

The purpose of playing; whose end, both at the first, and now, was, and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature. Ib.

Though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of the which one must in your allowance o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. Ib.

Not to speak it profanely. Ib.

Having neither the accent of Christians, nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man. Ib.

I have thought some of nature's journey-men had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably. Ib.

I hope we have reformed that indifferently. Ib.

O, reform it altogether. Ib.

That's villainous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Ib.

Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man As e'er my conversation coped withal. Ib.

Nay, do not think I flatter: For what advancement may I hope from thee, That no revenue hast, but thy good spirits? Ib.

No, let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp; And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee, Where thrift may follow fawning. Ib.

A man, that fortune's buffets and rewards Has ta'en with equal thanks: and bless'd are those, Whose blood and judgment are so well co-mingled, That they are not a pipe for Fortune's finger To sound what stop she please. Give me that man

That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him

In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart, As I do thee.—Something too much of this. Ib.

And my imaginations are as foul As Vulcan's stithy. Ib.

Your only jig-maker. Ib.

Nay, then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. Ib.

Die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year; but, by'r lady, he must build churches then. Ib.

For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot. Ib.

Marry, this is miching mallecho; it means mischief. Ib.

Hamlet: Is this a prologue or the posy of a ring?

Oph.: 'Tis brief, my lord.

Ham.: As woman's love. Ib.

O, confound the rest! Such love must needs be treason in my breast:

In second husband let me be accus't! None wed the second but who killed the first. Ib.

I do believe you think what now you speak; But what we do determine off we break. Purpose is but the slave to memory. Ib.

If she should break it now! Ib.

Sleep rock thy brain; And never come mischance between us twain! Ib.

The lady doth protest too much, methinks. Ib.

No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence i' the world. Ib.

We that have free souls, it touches us not: let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung. Ib.

Why let the stricken deer go weep, The hart ungalled play; For some must watch, while some must sleep:

So runs the world away. Ib.

Put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair. Ib.

O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother!

The proverb is something musty. Ib.

'Tis as easy as lying. Ib.

It will discourse most eloquent* music. Ib.

You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass. Ib.

Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me.

It is backed like a weasel. Ib.

Very like a whale. Ib.

* In Knight's edition, "excellent music."

They fool me to the top of my bent. Ib.
Hamlet. Act 3, 2.

'Tis now the very witching time of night,
 When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes out
 Contagion to this world ; now could I drink
 hot blood,
 And do such bitter business as the day
 Would quake to look on. Ib.

Let me be cruel, not unnatural :
 I will speak daggers to her, but use none. Ib.

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven ;
 It hath the primal eldest curse upon 't,
 A brother's murder ! Act 3, 3.

My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent. Ib.

May one be pardoned, and retain th' offence ? Ib.

Try what repentance can ; what can it not ?
 Yet what can it, when one can not repent ? Ib.

Help, angels, make assay !
 Bow, stubborn knees ! and, heart, with strings of steel,
 Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe. Ib.

Now might I do it, pat. Ib.

Some act
 That has no relish of salvation in it. Ib.

Words without thoughts never to heaven
 go. Ib.

Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with. Act 3, 4.

How now ! a rat ?
 Dead, for a ducat, dead ! Ib.

And let me wring your heart : for so I shall,
 If it be made of penetrable stuff. Ib.

Such an act,
 That blurs the grace and blush of modesty. Ib.

As false as dicers' oaths. Ib.

Ah me, what act,
 That roars so loud, and thunders in the index ? Ib.

Look here, upon this picture, and on this,
 The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
 See, what a grace was seated on this brow ;
 Hyperion's curls, the front of Jove himself,
 An eye like Mars, to threaten and command ;
 A station like the herald Mercury
 New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill ;
 A combination and a form indeed,
 Where every god did seem to set his seal
 To give the world assurance of a man. Ib.

Like a mildewed ear,
 Blasting his wholesome brother. Ib.

Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
 And batten on this moor ? Ib.

At your age,
 The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
 And waits upon the judgment. Ib.

O shame, where is thy blush ? Ib.

A cutpurse of the empire and the rule,
 That from a shelf the precious diadem stole
 And put it in his pocket. Ib.

A king of shreds and patches. Ib.

Do you not come your tardy son to chide ?
Ib.

Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works. Ib.

Tears, perchance, for blood. Ib.

This is the very coinage of your brain :
 This bodiless creation ecstasy
 Is very cunning in. Ib.

My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep
 time,
 And makes as healthful music. It is not madness

That I have uttered : bring me to the test. Ib.

Lay not that flattering unction to your soul. Ib.

Repent what's past ; avoid what is to come. Ib.

For in the fatness of these pursy times,
 Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg. Ib.

Assume a virtue, if you have it not. Ib.

That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat. Ib.

For use almost can change the stamp of nature. Ib.

And when you are desirous to be blessed,
 I'll blessing beg of you. Ib.

I must be cruel, only to be kind :
 Thus bad begins, and worse remains behind. Ib.

For 'tis the sport, to have the engineer Hoist with his own petard ; and it shall go hard,
 But I will delve one yard below their mines,
 And blow them to the moon. Ib.

He keeps them, like an ape [does nuts], in the corner of his jaw ; first mouthed, to be last swallowed. Act 4, 2.

A knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear. Ib.

Diseases, desperate grown,
 By desperate appliance are relieved,
 Or not at all. Act 4, 3.

Your worm is your only emperor for diet.

Hamlet. Act 4, 3.

We go to gain a little patch of ground,
That hath in it no profit but the name.

Act 4, 4.

What is a man

If his chief good and market of his time
Be but to sleep and feed? A beast, no
more.
Sure, he that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and godlike reason
To fast in us unused. Ib.

Rightly to be great,
Is not to stir without great argument,
But greatly to find quarrel in a straw
When honour's at the stake. Ib.

We know what we are, but know not what we may be. Act 4, 5.

We must be patient: but I cannot choose but weep, to think they should lay him i'
the cold ground. Ib.

When sorrows come, they come not single spies,
But in battalions. Ib.

There's such divinity doth hedge a king,
That treason can but peep to what it would. Ib.

To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil!

Conscience and grace, to the profoundest pit! Ib.

There's rosemary, that's for remembrance;
pray you, love, remember: and there is pansies, that's for thoughts. Ib.

You must wear your rue with a difference. Ib.

They say he made a good end. Ib.

And will he not come again? Ib.

No, no, he is dead,
Go to thy death-bed,
He never will come again. Ib.

He is gone, he is gone,
And we cast away moan;
God ha' mercy on his soul! Ib.

His means of death, his obscure funeral,
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones,

No noble rite, nor formal ostentation. Ib.

And, where the offence is, let the great axe fall. Ib.

It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
"Thus diddest thou." Act 4, 7.

A very riband in the cap of youth. Ib.

He grew into his seat;

And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,

As he had been incorpsed and demi-natured
With the brave beast. Ib.

One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
So fast they follow. Ib.

Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears: but yet
It is our trick; nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will. Ib.

Crowner's-quest law. Act 5, 1.

There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers:
they hold up Adam's profession. Ib.

Cudgel thy brains no more about it; for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating. Ib.

Hath this fellow no feeling of his business? Ib.

The hand of little employment hath the daintier sense. Ib.

The pate of a politician, . . . one that would circumvent God. Ib.

Where he his quiddities now, his quilletts his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? Ib.

One that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead. Ib.

How absolute the knave is! we must speak
by the card, or equivocation will undo us. Ib.

The age is grown so picked, that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe. Ib.

Alas, poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio:
a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy. Ib.

Where be your gibes now? your gambols?
your songs? your flashes of merriment that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chopfallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that. Ib.

To what base uses we may return,
Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole? Ib.

'Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so.* Ib.

* "Platon estime qu'il y ait quelque vice d'impïété à trop curieusement s'enquérir de Dieu et du monde."—MONTAIGNE, "Essais" (1580), Book 2, ch. 12. (Plato holds that there is some vice of impiety in enquiring too curiously about God and the world.)

Imperial Cæsar, dead, and turned to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away.
Hamlet. Act 5, 1.

Lay her i' the earth;
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh,
May violets spring! Ib.

I tell thee, churlish priest,
A minist'ring angel shall my sister be,
When thou liest howling. Ib.
Sweets to the sweet: farewell! Ib.
Though I am not splenetic and rash,
Yet have I in me something dangerous. Ib.

Nay, an thou 'lt mouth,
I'll rant as well as thou. Ib.

And thus awhile the fit will work on him;
Anon, as patient as the female dove,
When that her golden couplets are disclosed,
His silence will sit drooping. Ib.

Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew, and dog will have his day.
Ib.

This grave shall have a living monument.
Ib.

There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will. Act 5, 2.

It did me yeoman's service. Ib.

What imports the nomination of this gentleman? Ib.

The phrase would be more germane to the matter. Ib.

Not a whit, we defy augury: there is special providence in the fall of a sparrow. Ib.

I have shot mine arrow o'er the house,
And hurt my brother. Ib.

I do receive your offered love, like love,
And will not wrong it. Ib.

A hit, a very palpable hit. Ib.

Why, as a woodcock to mine own springe,
Osric:

I am justly killed with mine own treachery.
Ib.

This fell sergeant, Death,
Is strict in his arrest. Ib.

Report me and my cause aright. Ib.

I am more an antique Roman than a Dane.
Ib.

Horatio, what a wounded name,
Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!

If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity a while,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in

pain,
To tell my story. Ib.

The rest is silence. Ib.

Now cracks a noble heart. Good-night, sweet prince. Ib.

The weakest goes to the wall.
Romeo and Juliet. Act 1, 1.

Ab. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?
Sam. Is the law of our side if I say ay? Ib.

Gregory, remember thy swashing blow. Ib.

An hour before the worshipped sun Peered forth the golden window of the east. Ib.

As is the bud bit with an envious worm,
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.* Ib.

From love's weak childish bow she lives unharm'd.† Ib.

Saint-seducing gold. Ib.

He that is stricken blind, cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost.
Ib.

And 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace.
Act 1, 2.

When well apparelled April on the heel
Of limping winter treads. Ib.

One fire burns out another's burning;
One pain is lessened by another's anguish.
Ib.

Compare her face with some that I shall
show,
And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.
Ib.

For I am proverbed with a grand-sire phrase. Act 1, 4.

Oh, then, I see, Queen Mab hath been with
you.

She is the fairies' midwife; and she comes
In shape no bigger than an agate-stone
On the forefinger of an alderman,
Drawn with a team of little atomies
Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep:
Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners'
legs;

The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers;
Her traces, of the smallest spider's web,
Her collars, of the moonshine's watery beams. Ib.

Not half so big as a round little worm
Pricked from the lazy finger of a maid. Ib.

Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut,
Made by the joiner squirrel, or old grub,
Time out o' mind the fairies' coach-makers.
Ib.

* The folio and earlier editions have "same" for
"sun."

† "Uncharmed" in the folio and earlier editions.

And sometimes comes she with a tithe-pig's tail,
Tickling a parson's nose as 'a lies asleep,
Then dreams he of another benefice:
Sometimes she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,
Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
Of healths five fathom deep.

Romeo and Juliet. Act 1, 4.

And being thus frightened, swears a prayer or two
And sleeps again. Ib.

I talk of dreams,
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy;
Which is as thin of substance as the air;
And more inconstant than the wind. Ib.
But He, that hath the steerage of my course,
Direct my sail! * Ib.

A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear,
Such as would please. Act 1, 5.

For you and I are past our dancing days. Ib.
O, she doth teach the torches to burn bright!
It seems she hangs† upon the cheek of night
Like a rich jewel in an Ethiop's ear. Ib.

He bears him like a portly gentleman:
And to say truth, Verona brags of him
To be a virtuous and well-governed youth. Ib.

We have a trifling foolish banquet towards. Ib.

My only love sprung from my only hate!
Too early seen unknown, and known too late! Ib.

When King Cophetua loved the beggar maid. Act 2, 1.

He jests at scars that never felt a wound. Act 2, 2.

O, that I were a glove upon that hand,
That I might touch that cheek! Ib.

O, Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo? Ib.

What's in a name? that which we call a rose,
By any other name‡ would smell as sweet. Ib.

For stony limits cannot hold love out. Ib.

Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye,
Than twenty of their swords: look thou but
sweet,
And I am proof against their enmity. Ib.

I have night's cloak to hide me from their eyes. Ib.

Thou know'st the mask of night is on my face,
Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek. Ib.

Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain deny
What I have spoke: but farewell compliment! Ib.

At lovers' perjuries,
They say, Jove laughs. Ib.

In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond. Ib.

I'll prove more true
Than those that have more cunning to be strange. Ib.

O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant
moon,
That monthly changes in her circled orb. Ib.

Do not swear at all;
Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the god of my idolatry. Ib.

It is too rash, too unadvised, too sudden;
Too like the lightning which doth cease to be Ere one can say "It lightens." Ib.

This bud of love, by summer's ripening
breath,
May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet. Ib.

My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep. Ib.

All this is but a dream,
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial. Ib.

And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay,
And follow thee my lord throughout the world. Ib.

O for a falconer's voice,
To lure this tassel-gentle back again!
Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud;
Else would I tear the cave where Echo lies. Ib.

How silver sweet sound lovers' tongues by
night,
Like softest music to attending ears! Ib.
So loving-jealous of his liberty. Ib.

Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.
Good night, good night! parting is such sweet sorrow,
That I shall say good-night, till it be morrow. Ib.

Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!
Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest! Ib.

O mickle is the powerful grace that lies
In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities :

For nought so vile that on the earth doth
live

But to the earth some special good doth give ;
Nor aught so good, but, strained from that fair use,

Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse :

Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied ;
And vice sometime 's by action dignified.

Romeo and Juliet. Act 2, 3.

It argues a distempered head
So soon to bid good-morrow to thy bed :
Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
And, where care lodges, sleep will never lie.

When, and where, and how,
We met, we wooed, and made exchange of
vow,

More than prince of cats. Ib.

Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashionmongers, these pardon-mes ? Ib.

O flesh ! flesh ! how thou art fishified ! Ib.

My business was great ; and in such a case
a man may strain courtesy. Ib.

I am the very pink of courtesy. Ib.

Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting : it is a most sharp sauce. Ib.

Why, is not this better now than groaning for love ? Ib.

One, . . . that God hath made himself

O, so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint :
A lover may bestride the gossamer
That idles in the wanton summer air. Ib.

Till holy church incorporate two in one. Ib.

Thou ! why, thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard, than thou hast. Act 3, 1.

Thy head is as full of quarrels, as an egg is full of meat. Ib.

Men's eyes were made to look, and let them
gaze :

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I. Ib.

O calm, dishonourable, vile submission ! Ib.

No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door ; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve : ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world :—a plague o' both your houses ! Ib.

I thought all for the best. Ib.

O, I am fortune's fool ! Ib.

Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill. Ib.

Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phœbus' lodging. Act 3, 2.

When he shall die,
Take him, and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine
That all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the garish sun. Ib.

Beautiful tyrant ! fiend angelical ! Ib.

Was ever book, containing such vile matter,
So fairly bound ? O that deceit should dwell

In such a gorgeous palace ! Ib.

There's no trust,
No faith, no honesty in men ; all perjured,
All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers. Ib.

He was not born for shame :
Upon his brow shame is ashamed to sit ;
For 'tis a throne where honour may be crowned

Sole monarch of the universal earth. Ib.

Romeo, come forth ; come forth, thou fearful man ;

Affliction is enamoured of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity. Act 3, 3.

For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death. Ib.

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy. Ib.

Hang up philosophy !
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet. Ib.

Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund
day

Stands tiptoe on the misty mountains' tops.
Act 3, 4.

Straining harsh discords and displeasing sharps. Romeo and Juliet. Act 3, 5.

Villain and he be many miles asunder. Ib.

For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.
Act 4, 1.

Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.
Act 4, 2.

Death lies on her, like an untimely frost
Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.
Act 4, 5.

"Music with her silver sound," because musicians have no gold for sounding. Ib.

If I may trust the flattering truth of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at
hand:

My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne.
Act 5, 1.

Meagre were his looks,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones. Ib.

A beggarly account of empty boxes. Ib.

Art thou so bare and full of wretchedness
And fear'st to die? Famine is in thy cheeks,

Need and oppression starveth in thine eyes,
Contempt and beggary hangs upon thy back,
The world is not thy friend, nor the world's law;

The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it. Ib.

My poverty, but not my will, consents. Ib.

The time and my intents are savage-wild;
More fierce, and more inexorable far
Than empty tigers, or the roaring sea.

Act 5, 3.

Can vengeance be pursued further than death? Ib.

Tempt not a desperate man. Ib.

Put not another sin upon my head
By urging me to fury. Ib.

One writ with me in sour misfortune's book.
Ib.

Beauty's ensign yet
Is crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheeks,
And death's pale flag is not advanced there.
Ib.

Eyes, look your last!
Arms, take your last embrace! Ib.

Come bitter conduct, come unsavoury guide!
Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on
The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!
Ib.

A greater Power than we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents. Ib.

Horribly stuffed with epithets of war.
Othello. Act 1, 1.

A fellow almost damned in a fair wife;
That never set a squadron in the field,
Nor the division of a battle knows,
More than a spinster. Ib.

The bookish theoretic. Ib.

Mere prattle without practice
Is all his soldiership. Ib.

'Tis the curse of service;
Preferment goes by letter and affection,
Not by the old gradation, where each second Stood heir to the first. Ib.

We cannot all be masters. Ib.

Whip me such honest knaves. Ib.

But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For daws to peck at: I am not what I am. Ib.

Zounds, sir, you are one of those that will not serve God if the devil bid you. Ib.

Who would be a father? Ib.

Though in the trade of war I have slain men,
Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience
To do no contrived murder. I lack iniquity Sometime to do me service. Act 1, 2.

The wealthy curled darlings of our nation.
Ib.

For my particular grief
Is of so floodgate and o'erbearing nature,
That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows.
Act 1, 3.

Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors,
My very noble and approved good masters,—
That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,

It is most true; true, I have married her:
The very head and front of my offending Hath this extent, no more! Rude am I in my speech,

And little blessed with the soft phrase of peace. Ib.

The tented field. Ib.

And little of this great world can I speak,
More than pertains to feats of broil and battle;

And therefore little shall I grace my cause,
In speaking for myself. Ib.

I will a round unvarnished tale deliver. Ib.

A maiden never bold;
Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
Blushed at herself. Ib.

I ran it through, even from my boyish days,
To the very moment that he bade me tell it:
Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents by flood and field,
Of hairbreadth 'scapes i' the imminent deadly breach,

Of being taken by the insolent foe,
And sold to slavery. Ib.

Wherein of antres vast, and deserts idle, Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch heaven,
 It was my hint to speak,—such was my process;
 And of the cannibals that each other eat,
 The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads Do grow beneath their shoulders. These things to hear
 Would Desdemona seriously incline.

Othello. Act 1, 3.

She gave me for my pains a world of sighs:
 She swore,—In faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange;
 'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful;
 She wished she had not heard it, yet she wished

That heaven had made her such a man: she thanked me,
 And bade me, if I had a friend that loved
 her,
 I should but teach him how to tell my story,
 And that would woo her. Upon this hint
 I spake:

She loved me for the dangers I had passed,
 And I loved her that she did pity them.
 This is the only witchcraft I have used. Ib.

Take up this mangled matter at the best:
 Men do their broken weapons rather use
 Than their bare hands. Ib.

I do perceive here a divided duty. Ib.

The robbed that smiles, steals something from the thief. Ib.

The tyrant custom, most grave senators,
 Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war,
 My thrice-driven bed of down. Ib.

I saw Othello's visage in his mind. Ib.

A moth of peace. Ib.

She has deceived her father, and may thee. Ib.

I will incontinently drown myself. Ib.

Virtue! a fig! 'tis in ourselves that we are thus, or thus. Ib.

Put money in thy purse. Ib.

The food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as coloquintida. Ib.

Thus do I ever make my fool my purse. Ib.

Framed to make women false. Ib.

I have 't;—it is engendered;—hell and
 night

Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light. Ib.

A maid

That paragons description and wild fame;
 One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens. Act 2, 1.

Do not put me to 't,
 For I am nothing if not critical. Ib.

I am not merry, but I do beguile
 The thing I am, by seeming otherwise. Ib.

She that could think, and ne'er disclose her
 mind,
 See suitors following, and not look behind. Ib.

To suckle fools, and chronicle small beer. Ib.

O most lame and impotent conclusion! Ib.
 Is he not a most profane and liberal counsellor? Ib.

He speaks home, madam; you may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar. Ib.

A slipper and subtle knave. Ib.

Making him egregiously an ass. Ib.

Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop
 Not to outspout discretion. Act 2, 3.

Potations pottle deep. Ib.

And let me the canakin clink!

A soldier's a man;

A life's but a span;

Why, then, let a soldier drink. Ib.

Most potent in potting. Ib.

'Tis pride that pulls the country down.* Ib.

'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep. Ib.

Silence that dreadful bell! Ib.

The world hath noted, and your name is great

In mouths of wisest censure. Ib.

But men are men; the best sometimes forget. Ib.

Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter. Ib.

Cassio, I love thee;
 But never more be officer of mine. Ib.

Ay, past all surgery. Ib.

Reputation, reputation, reputation! O,
 I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial. Ib.

O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil! Ib.

O God, that men should put an enemy in their mouths, to steal away their brains. Ib.

Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. Ib.

* From the old ballad, "Take thy old cloak about thee." In "Percy's Reliques" the line is given: "It's pride that putt's this countrey downe."

Every inordinate cup is unblessed, and the ingredient is a devil. Othello. Act 2, 3.

Come, come; good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used. Ib.

How poor are they that have not patience!
What wound did ever heal, but by degrees?
Ib.

Pleasure and action make the hours seem short. Ib.

Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul
But I do love thee! And when I love thee
not,

Chaos is come again. Act 3, 3.

Good name in man or woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:

Who steals my purse, steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;

'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;

But he that filches from me my good name,
Robs me of that which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed. Ib.

O, beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green-eyed monster, which doth mock

The meat it feeds on. Ib.

But, O, what damnèd minutes tells he o'er,
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet fondly loves.* Ib.

Poor and content is rich, and rich enough.
Ib.

To be once in doubt,
Is once to be resolved. Ib.

If I do prove her haggard,
Though that her jesses were my dear heartstrings,

I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind

To prey at fortune. Ib.

I am declined
Into the vale of years. Ib.

That we can call these delicate creatures
ours,
And not their appetites. Ib.

Trifles, light as air,
Are to the jealous, confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ. Ib.

Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'dst yesterday. Ib.

He that is robbed, not wanting what is stolen,
Let him not know't, and he's not robbed
at all. Ib.

* In the quarto edition "strongly loves" is the reading, instead of "fondly loves."

O, now, for ever,
Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content!

Farewell the plumèd troops,† and the big wars,

That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!

Farewell the neighing steed and the shrill
trump,

The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,

The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!

And, O you mortal engines, whose rude
throats

The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,

Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone! Ib.

Be sure of it: give me the ocular proof. Ib.

No hinge, nor loop
To hang a doubt on. Ib.

On horror's head horrors accumulate:
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amazed. Ib.

But this denoted a foregone conclusion. Ib.

O, that the slave had forty thousand lives!
One is too poor, too weak for my revenge. Ib.

O, hardness to dissemble! Act 3, 4.

The hearts of old gave hands:
But our new heraldry is—hands not hearts. Ib.

They laugh that win. Act 4, 1.

I would have him nine years a killing. Ib.

O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear! Ib.

But yet the pity of it, Iago!—O, Iago, the pity of it, Iago! Ib.

I understand a fury in your words,
But not the words. Act 4, 2.

Had it pleased heaven
To try me with affliction; had he rained
All kinds of sores and shames on my bare head,

Steeped me in poverty to the very lips,
Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes,
I should have found in some part of my soul

A drop of patience: but, alas, to make me
A fixed figure, for the time of scorn
To point his slow unmoving finger at!‡ Ib.

Patience, thou young and rose-lipped cherubin. Ib.

† Troops. The quarto has "troop."

‡ In the folio:

"The fixed figure for the time of scorn
To point his slow and moving finger at."

O thou weed,
Who art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet,
That the sense aches at thee, would thou hadst ne'er been born! Othello. Act 4, 2.

I will be hanged if some eternal villain,
Some busy and insinuating rogue,
Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some office,
Have not devised this slander. Ib.

Fie, there is no such man; it is impossible. Ib.

O heaven, that such companions thou'dst unfold,
And put in every honest hand a whip,
To lash the rascals naked through the world,
Even from the east to the west! Ib.

Sing willow, willow, willow. Act 4, 3.
'Tis neither here nor there. Ib.

Now, whether he kill Cassio,
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain. Act 5, 1.

He hath a daily beauty in his life. Ib.
Kill men i' the dark! Ib.

This is the night
That either makes me, or fordoes me quite. Ib.

It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,—
Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!—
It is the cause. Ib.

That whiter skin of hers than snow,
And smooth as monumental alabaster.
Act 5, 2.

Put out the light, and then put out the
light:
If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore,
Should I repent me;—but once put out thy
light,
Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heat
That can thy light relume. Ib.

I will kill thee,
And love thee after. Ib.
Had all his hairs been lives, my great
revenge
Had stomach for them all. Ib.
My wife! my wife! what wife?—I have no wife.
O, insupportable! O heavy hour!
Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
Of sun and moon. Ib.

It is the very error of the moon. Ib.
Then murder's out of tune,
And sweet revenge grows harsh. Ib.
A guiltless death I die. Ib.

O, the more angel she,
And you the blacker devil! Ib.
She was false as water. Ib.

If heaven would make me such another
world
Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,
I'd not have sold her for it. Ib.

But why should honour outlive honesty?
Ib.
Who can control his fate? Ib.

Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,
And very sea-mark of my utmost sail. Ib.

I have done the state some service, and they know 't. Ib.

Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate Nor set down aught in malice: then must you speak

Of one that loved not wisely, but too well;
Of one not easily jealous, but, being wrought, Perplexed in the extreme: of one, whose
hand

Like the base Indian,* threw a pearl away, Richer than all his tribe: of one, whose subdued eyes,

Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinal gum. Ib.

All that is spoke is marred. Ib.
I kissed thee, ere I killed thee. Ib.

Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge.
Titus Andronicus. Act 1, 1.

He lives in fame, that died in virtue's cause.
Ib.

She is a woman, therefore may be wooed;
She is a woman, therefore may be won;
She is Lavinia, therefore must be loved.
What, man! more water glideth by the mill
Than wots the miller of; and easy it is
Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know.
Act 2, 1.

Sorrow conceal'd, like an oven stopp'd,
Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.
Act 2, 4.

Comfortless
As frozen water to a starv'd snake.
Act 3, 1.

Two may keep counsel when the third's away.† Act 4, 2.

The eagle suffers little birds to sing,
And is not careful what they mean thereby.
Act 4, 4.

* Indian. "Judean" in the first folio.

† This is a proverbial expression. See: "For three may kepe a counsel, if twain be awaie."
CHAUCER, "The Ten Commandments of Love," 41; also, "Three may keepe counsaile, if two be away."—J. HAYWOOD, "Proverbs."

If one good deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very soul.

Titus Andronicus. Act 5, 3.

To sing a song that old was sung.

Pericles. Act 1. Prelude.

It hath been sung at festivals,
On ember eves, and holy-ales;
And lords and ladies in their lives
Have read it for restoratives. Ib.

Few love to hear the sins they love to act.
Act 1, 1.

Kings are earth's gods; in vice their law's their will;
And if Jove stray, who dares say Jove doth ill? Ib.

How courtesy would seem to cover sin! Ib.

They do abuse the king, that flatter him;
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin;
The thing the which is flattered, but a spark
To which that blast gives heat and stronger glowing. Act 1, 2.

'Tis time to fear, when tyrants seem to kiss.
Ib.

3rd Fisher. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

1st Fisher. Why, as men do a-land—the great ones eat up the little ones. Act 2, 1.

Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan
The outward habit by the inward man.
Act 2, 2.

'Tis more by fortune, lady, than my merit.
Act 2, 3.

The cat with eyne of burning coal.
Act 3. Prelude.

O you gods!

Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away? Act 3, 1.

We are strong in custom, Ib.

No vizor does become black villainy
So well as soft and tender flattery.
Act 4, 4.

Hunting he loved, but love he laughed to scorn. Poems. Venus and Adonis. St. 1.

Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or, like a fairy, trip upon the green,
Or, like a nymph, with long dishevelled
hair,

Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen.

Love is a spirit, all compact of fire,
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.
St. 25.

"Ah me," quoth Venus, "young, and so unkind!" St. 32.

Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel
What 'tis to love? St. 34.

Look, what a horse should have he did not lack,
Save a proud rider on so proud a back.
St. 50.

Like a melancholy malcontent. St. 53.

The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath none. St. 65.

Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover;
What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis plucked.

Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through, and picks them all at last. St. 96.

For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy
Doth call himself Affection's sentinel;
Gives false alarms, suggested mutiny.
St. 109.

This carry-tale, dissentious Jealousy
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring. St. 110.

Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on fear.
St. 115.

Love-lacking vestals, and self-loving nuns.
St. 126.

Foul cankering rust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets.
St. 128.

For know, my heart stands armèd in mine
ear,
And will not let a false sound enter there.
St. 130.

Love comforteth, like sunshine after rain.
St. 134.

More I could tell, but more I dare not say;
The text is old, the orator too green.
St. 135.

Finding their enemy to be so curst,
They all strain court'sy who shall cope him
first. St. 148.

Look, how the world's poor people are amazed
At apparitions, signs, and prodigies. St. 155.
Grief hath two tongues; and never woman
yet
Could rule them both without ten women's
wit. St. 168.

For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,
And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.
St. 170.

The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light. St. 172.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an orator.

appear.

St. 91.

Small lights are soon blown out, huge fires abide,

And with the wind in greater fury fret.

St. 93.

O comfort-killing Night, image of hell!
Dim register and notary of shame!

Black stage for tragedies and murders fell!
Vast sin-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!

St. 110.

O Opportunity, thy guilt is great!
'Tis thou that execut'st the traitor's treason.

St. 126.

Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood, and bring truth to light.

St. 7.

If music and sweet poetry agree,

As they must needs, the sister and the brother. St. 8.

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely plucked soon vaded,*

Plucked in the bud, and vaded in the spring!

Bright orient pearl, alack, too timely shaded!

Fair creature, killed too soon by death's sharp sting!

St. 10.

Crabbed age and youth

Cannot live together:

Youth is full of pleasance,

Age is full of care, St. 12.

Age, I do abhor thee;

Youth, I do adore thee. Id.

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good.

St. 13.

I supped with sorrow.

St. 14.

It was a lording's daughter, the fairest one of three. St. 16.

Her fancy fell a turning. Id.

But one must be refused; more mickle was the pain,

That nothing could be used, to turn them
both to gain. Id.

Thus art, with arms contending, was victor of the day. Id.

Then lullaby, the learned man hath got the lady gay;

For now my song is ended. Id.

My flocks feed not,

My ewes breed not,

My rams speed not,

All is amiss.

St. 18.

All my merry jigs are quite forgot. Id.

The strongest castle, tower, and town,

The golden bullet beats it down. St. 19.

Have you not heard it said full oft,

A woman's nay doth stand for nought? Id.

As it fell upon a day,

In the merry month of May.

St. 21.

Faithful friends are hard to find:

Every man will be thy friend,

Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend. Id.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW

(b. 1856).

It is clear that a novel cannot be too bad to be worth publishing. . . . It certainly is possible for a novel to be too good to be worth publishing.

Plays Pleasant and Unpleasant.

Vol. 1. Preface.

I never expect a soldier to think.

The Devil's Disciple. Act 3.

The British soldier can stand up to anything—except the British War Office. Id.

A thing that nobody believes cannot be proved too often. Id.

A great devotee of the Gospel of Getting
On. Mrs. Warren's Profession. Act 4.

The fickleness of the woman I love is only equalled by the infernal constancy of the women who love me.

The Philanderer. Act 2.

There is only one religion, though there are a hundred versions of it.

Vol. 2. Preface.

There is nothing so bad or so good that you will not find Englishmen doing it; but you will never find an Englishman in the wrong.
He does everything on principle. He fights you on patriotic principles; he robs you on business principles; he enslaves you on imperial principles. The Man of Destiny.

It is easy—terribly easy—to shake a man's faith in himself. To take advantage of that to break a man's spirit is devil's work.

Candida.

* "Vaded," a form used by Shakespeare for "faded."

Getting Patronage is the whole art of life.
A man cannot have a career without it.

Captain Brashbound's Conversion. Act 3.

Surely there must be some meaning beneath all this terrible irony.

Major Barbara.

JOHN SHEFFIELD, Duke of Buckinghamshire (1648-1721).

Of all those arts in which the wise excel,
Nature's chief masterpiece is writing well.

Essay on Poetry. l. 1.

There's no such thing in nature, and you'll draw

A faultless monster, which the world ne'er
saw. l. 231.

Read Homer once, and you can read no
more;

For all books else appear so mean, so poor,
Verse will seem prose, but still persist to read,

And Homer will be all the books you need. l. 322.

Our country challenges our utmost care,
And in our thoughts deserves the tender'st share. Ode to Brutus.

Such is the mode of these censorious days,
The art is lost of knowing how to praise.

On Mr. Hobbes. l. 1.

Love is the salt of life. Ode on Love. Canto 5.

PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY (1792-1822).

How wonderful is Death,
Death and his brother Sleep!
Queen Mab. Canto 1.

Innumerable systems rolled,
And countless spheres diffused
An ever-varying glory. l. 1b.

In this interminable wilderness
Of worlds, at whose immensity
Even soaring fancy staggers. l. 1b.

Nature's unchanging harmony. Canto 2.

For when the power of imparting joy
Is equal to the will, the human soul
Requires no other heaven. Canto 3.

And conscience, that undying serpent, calls

Her venomous brood to their nocturnal task. l. 1b.

There needeth not the hell that bigots
frame

To punish those who err: earth in itself
Contains at once the evil and the cure;
And all-sufficing Nature can chastise
Those who transgress her law,—she only knows

How justly to proportion to the fault
The punishment it merits. l. 1b.

Many faint with toil.

That few may know the cares and woe of sloth. l. 1b.

The virtuous man,
Who, great in his humility, as kings
Are little in their grandeur. l. 1b.

Power, like a desolating pestilence,
Polutes whate'er it touches; and obedience,
Bane of all genius, virtue, freedom, truth,
Makes slaves of men, and, of the human
frame,
A mechanized automaton. l. 1b.

Heaven's ebon vault,
Studded with stars unutterably bright,
Through which the moon's unclouded
grandeur rolls,
Seems like a canopy which love has spread
To curtain her sleeping world. Canto 4.

Startling pale midnight on her starry throne. l. 1b.

War is the statesman's game, the priest's
delight,

The lawyer's jest, the hired assassin's trade. l. 1b.

Twin-sister of religion, selfishness. Canto 5.

Commerce! beneath whose poison-breathing shade

No solitary virtue dares to spring;
But poverty and wealth, with equal hand,
Scatter their withering curses. l. 1b.

Necessity, thou mother of the world!
Canto 6.

Human pride
Is skilful to invent most serious names
To hide its ignorance. Canto 7.

The moonlight's ineffectual glow. Canto 8.

That sweet bondage which is freedom's self.
Canto 9.

The slimy caverns of the populous deep,
Alastor.

Two starry eyes, hung in the gloom of thought. l. 1b.

A dream
Of youth, which night and time have quenched for ever,
Still, dark, and dry, and unremembered
now. l. 1b.

But thou art fled
Like some frail exhalation. l. 1b.

Some respite to its turbulence unresting ocean knows ;

Whatever moves, or toils, or grieves, hath its appointed sleep. Stanzas. April 1814.

Nought may endure but Mutability.

Mutability.

And bloody Faith, the foulest birth of time.

Feelings of a Republican.

Honey from silkworms who can gather,

Or silk from the yellow bee ?

As soon as hate in me.

Lines to a Critic.

It stirs

Too much of suffocating sorrow.

Rosalind and Helen.

He was a coward to the strong :

He was a tyrant to the weak. 1b.

His name in my ear was ever ringing,

His form to my brain was ever clinging. 1b.

Darkly forward flowed

The stream of years. 1b.

It is unmeet

To shed on the brief flower of youth

The withering knowledge of the grave. 1b.

As to the Christian creed, if true

Or false, I never questioned it ;

I took it as the vulgar do. 1b.

So the priests hated him, and he

Repaid their hate with cheerful glee. 1b.

His soul seemed hovering in his eyes. 1b.

Fear not the tyrants shall rule for ever,

Or the priests of the bloody faith ;

They stand on the brink of that mighty river,

Whose waves they have tainted with death.

1b.

Many a green isle needs must be

In the deep wide sea of misery,

Or the mariner, worn and wan,

Never thus could voyage on.

Lines written among the Egeanean Hills.

The wingless, crawling hours.

Prometheus Unbound. Act 1.

Evil minds

Change good to their own nature. 1b.

And the future is dark, and the present is spread

Like a pillow of thorns for thy slumberless head. 1b.

Thy words are like a cloud of winged snakes. 1b.

From the dust of creeds out-worn. 1b.

Low, sweet, faint sounds, like the farewell of ghosts. Act 2. 1.

Those eyes which burn through smiles that fade in tears,

Like stars half-quenched in mists of silver
dew. 1b.

Sounds overflow the listener's brain

So sweet, that joy is almost pain. Act 2, 2.

He gave man speech, and speech created
thought,

Which is the measure of the universe.

Act 2, 4.

All spirits are enslaved which serve things evil. 1b.

All love is sweet,

Given or returned. Common as light is love,
And its familiar voice wearies not ever.

Act 2, 5.

They who inspire it are most fortunate,

As I am now ; but those who feel it most

Are happier still. 1b.

My soul is an enchanted boat,

Which, like a sleeping swan, doth float

Upon the silver waves of thy sweet singing.

1b.

We have passed Age's icy caves,

And Manhood's dark and tossing waves,

And Youth's smooth ocean, smiling to betray :

Beyond the glassy gulfs we flee

Of shadow-peopled Infancy.

Through Death and Birth, to a diviner day.

1b.

Thetis, bright image of eternity. Act 3, 1.

We two will sink on the wild waves of ruin,

Even as a culture and a snake outspent

Drop, twisted in inextricable fight,

Into a shoreless sea. 1b.

Weave harmonies divine, yet ever new.

Act 3, 2.

Death is the veil which those who live call
life :

They sleep, and it is lifted. Act 3, 3.

Or the dull sneer of self-loved ignorance.

Act 3, 4.

Man

Equal, unclassed, tribeless, and nationless.

1b.

Laugh with a vast and inextinguishable
laughter. Act 4.

To suffer woes which Hope thinks infinite ;
To forgive wrongs darker than death or
night ;

To defy Power, which seems omnipotent ;
To love, and bear ; to hope till Hope creates From its own wreck the thing it contemplates ;

Neither to change, nor falter, nor repent ;
This, like thy glory, Titan, is to be Good, great and joyous, beautiful and free ;
This is alone Life, Joy, Empire, and Victory ! 1b.

And narcissi, the fairest among them all,
Who gaze on their eyes in the stream's
recess,
Till they die of their own dear loveliness.

The Sensitive Plant. Part 1, st. 5.

And the jessamine faint, and the sweet tube-
rose,
The sweetest flower for scent that blows.

St. 10.

And singing still dost soar, and soaring ever singest.

To a Skylark.

Our sweetest songs are those that tell of saddest thought.

Ib.

We look before and after
We pine for what is not;
Our sincerest laughter
With some pain is fraught;

I could lie down like a tired child,
And weep away the life of care
Which I have borne, and yet must bear,
Till death like sleep might steal on me.

Stanzas, written in Dejection.

A pard-like spirit, beautiful and swift.

Adonais. St. 32.

He has out-soared the shadow of our night;
Envy and calumny, and hate and pain,
And that unrest which men miscall delight,
Can touch him not, and torture not again;
From the contagion of the world's slow
stain,

He is secure, and now can never mourn,
A heart grown cold, a head grown grey in vain.

St. 40.

Go thou to Rome,—at once the Paradise,
The grave, the city, and the wilderness.

St. 49.

Life, like a dome of many-coloured glass,
Stains the white radiance of Eternity.

St. 52.

'Tis malice, 'tis revenge, 'tis pride,
'Tis anything but thee.

To Harriet. May, 1814.

Fame is love disguised. An Exhortation.

Kings are like stars—they rise, they set,
they have
The worship of the world, but no repose.*

Hellas.

Those who inflict must suffer, for they see
The work of their own hearts, and that must be

Our chastisement or recompense.

Julian and Maddalo. l. 481.

Most wretched men
Are cradled into poetry by wrong:
They learn in suffering what they teach in song.

l. 543.

Then black despair,
The shadow of a starless night, was thrown
Over the world in which I moved alone.

The Revolt of Islam. Dedication, st. 6.

Can man be free if woman be a slave?

Canto 2, st. 43.

With hue like that when some great painter dips

His pencil in the gloom of earthquake and eclipse.

Canto 5, st. 23.

That orb'd maiden, with white fire laden,
Whom mortals call the moon.

The Cloud. 4.

I am the daughter of earth and water

And the nursing of the sky;

I pass through the pores of the ocean and shores;

I change, but I cannot die.

Ib. 6.

I am the friend of the unfriended poor.

To Cambria.

Music, when soft voices die,

Vibrates in the memory;

Odours, when sweet violets sicken,

Live within the sense they quicken.

Must be supreme.

Sonnet. Political Greatness.

Old men are testy, and will have their way.

The Cenci. Act 1, 2.

There are deeds

Which have no form, sufferings which have no tongue.

Act 3, 1.

How slow

Behind the course of thought, even sick with speed,

Lags leaden-footed time!

Act 4, 2.

The Gencl. Act 4, 3.

What is done wisely, is done well. Act 4, 4.

Worse than a bloody hand is a hard heart.
Act 5, 2.

What 'twas weak to do
'Tis weaker to lament, once being done.
Act 5, 3.

The fountains mingle with the river,
And the rivers with the ocean,
The winds of heaven mix for ever
With a sweet emotion;
Nothing in the world is single;
All things, by a law divine,
In one another's being mingle—
Why not I with thine?

Love's Philosophy.

The seed ye sow, another reaps;
The wealth ye find, another keeps;
The robe ye weave, another wears;
The arms ye forge, another bears.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE (1714-1763).

Come listen to my mournful tale,
Ye tender hearts and lovers dear;
Nor will you scorn to heave a sigh,
Nor need you blush to shed a tear.
Jemmy Dawson.

For seldom shall she hear a tale
So sad, so tender, and so true. Ib.

Ah me! full sorely is my heart forlorn
To think how modest worth neglected
lies,
While partial fame doth with her blasts adorn
Such deeds alone as pride and pomp disguise.

I do not mean to be disrespectful, but the attempt of the Lords to stop the progress of reform, reminds me very forcibly of the great storm of Sidmouth, and of the conduct of the excellent Mrs. Partington on that occasion. In the winter of 1824, there set in a great flood upon that town—the tide rose to an incredible height: the waves rushed in upon the houses, and everything was threatened with destruction. In the midst of this sublime and terrible storm, Dame Partington, who lived upon the beach,
was seen at the door of her house with mop and pattens, trundling her mop, squeezing out the sea water, and vigorously pushing away the Atlantic Ocean. The Atlantic was roused. Mrs. Partington's spirit was up; but I need not tell you that the contest was unequal. The Atlantic Ocean beat Mrs. Partington. She was excellent at a slop or a puddle, but she should not have meddled with a tempest.

This is our rock of strength; in every ill,
Sorrow, oppression, pain and agony,
The spirit of the good is unsubdued,

And suffer, as they may, they triumph still.
Part 18, 10.

And worst of enemies, their Sins were armed Against them. Roderick. Sec. 1.

Death is the only mercy that I crave,
Death soon and short, death and forgetfulness! Id.

The Faërie Queene. Introduction, st. 1.

A gentle knight was pricking on the plaine.
*Book 1, canto 1, st. 1.

And on his brest a bloodie crosse he bore,
The dear remembrance of his dying Lord.

St. 2.

But of his cheere did seeme too solemne sad, Yet nothing did he dread, but ever was ydrad. Ib.

The sayling pine; the cedar proud and tall;
The vine-propp elme; the poplar never dry;

The builder oake, sole king of forrests all;
The aspine good for staves; the cypresse
funerall. St. 8.

Will was his guide, and grieve led him astray. St. 12.

Virtue gives herself light through dark-nesse for to wade. St. 12.

But, full of fire and greedy hardiment,
The youthfull knight could not for ought be staide. St. 14.

The noblest mind the best contentment

A bold bad man. St. 37.

And fittest for to forge true-seeming lyes.
St. 38.

Better new friend than an old foe.

Canto 2, st. 27.

He oft finds med'cine who his grieve imparts.
St. 34.

Her angel's face
As the great eye of heaven, shyned bright,
And made a sunshine in the shady place;
Did never mortall eye behold such heavenly grace. Canto 3, st. 4.

O how can beautie maister the most strong!
St. 6.

For to the highest she did still aspyre,
Or, if ought higher were then that, did it desyre. St. 11.

Yet, wifull man, he never would forecast
How many mischieves should ensue his heedlesse hast. St. 34.

Sluggish idlenesse, the nourse of sin.

Canto 4, st. 18.

Whose welth was want, whose plenty made him poor. St. 29.

As when that divelish yron engin, wrought
In deepest hell, and framd by furies' skill,
With windy nitre and quick sulphur fraught,
And ramd with bollett rownd, ordaind to kill, Conceiveth fyre. Canto 7, st. 13.

Ay me, how many perils doe enfold
The righteous man, to make him daily fall,

Were not that heavenly grace doth him
uphold,

And stedfast Truth acquite him out of all!
Canto 8, st. 1.

But wise and wary was that noble pare.
St. 7.

Entire affection hateth nicer hands. St. 40.

Musing full sadly in his sullen mind.
Canto 9, st. 35.

Sleep after toyle, port after stormie seas,
Ease after warre, death after life, does

Losse is no shame, nor to be lesse than foe.
Canto 5, st. 15.

And is there care in heaven? and is there
love

In heavenly spirits to these creatures bace?
Canto 8, st. 1.

But O! th' exceeding grace
Of highest God that loves his creatures so,
And all his workes with mercy doth embrace.

The Faerie Queen. Book 2, canto 8, st. 1.
And all for love, and nothing for reward.

St. 2.
Vile is the vengeance on the ashes cold;
And envy base to barke at sleeping fame.

St. 13.
The wretched man gan them avise too late,
That love is not where most it is profest.

Canto 10, st. 31.
They reard a most outrageous dreadfull yelling cry. Canto 11, st. 17.

So greatest and most glorious thing on

May often need the helpe of weaker hand.

St. 30.
For all that here on earth we dreadfull hold,
Be but as bugs to fearen babes withall,
Compared to the creatures in the seas
entrall. Canto 12, st. 25.

And, that which all faire workes doth most aggrace,
The art, which all that wrought, appeared in no place. St. 58.

Effsoones they heard a most melodious sound,
Of all that mote delight a daintie eare.

St. 70.
Gather therefore the rose whilst yet is prime,
For soone comes age that will her pride
defloure:

Gather the rose of love whilst yet is time:
Whilst loving thou mayst loved be with equall crime. St. 75.

Let Gryll be Gryll,* and have his hoggish

Faint friends when they fall out most cruel fomen bee. Canto 9, st. 27.

True he it said, whatever man it sayd,
That love with gall and hony doth abound.

Canto 10, st. 1.
O what an endlesse worke have I in hand!

Canto 12, st. 1.
Meseemes the world is runne quite out of square

From the first point of his appointed sourse;
And being once amisse growes daily wourse and wourse. Book 5, Introduction, st. 1.

Right now is wrong, and wrong that was is right;

As all things else in time are chaunged
quight. Introduction, st. 4.

It often fals, in course of common life,
That right long time is overborne of wrong.

Canto 11, st. 1.
Dearer is love than life, and fame than gold;
But dearer than them both your faith once plighted hold. St. 63.

O sacred hunger of ambitious mindes!
Canto 12, st. 1.

No greater shame to man than inhumanitie.
Book 6, canto 1, st. 26.

In vaine he seeketh others to suppresse,
Who hath not leardn himselfe first to subdew. St. 41.

Who will not mercie unto others shew,
How can he mercy ever hope to have?

St. 46.
True is that whilome that good poet sayd,
The gentle mind by gentle deeds is knowne;

For a man by nothing is so well bewray'd
As by his manners. Canto 3, st. 1.

Gentle bloud will gentle manners breed.
St. 2.

Give salves to every sore, but counsell to the minde. Canto 6, st. 5.

For not that, which men covet most, is best;
Nor that thing worst, which men doe most refuse:

But fittest is that all contented rest
With that they hold: each hath his fortune in his brest. Canto 9, st. 29.

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON
(1850-1894).

Even if we take matrimony at its lowest, even if we regard it as no more than a sort of friendship recognised by the police.

Virginibus Puerisque. Part 1.

I have always suspected public taste to be a mongrel product, out of affectation by dogmatism. Ib.

A little amateur painting in water-colour shows the innocent and quiet mind. Ib.

No woman should marry a teetotaller, or a man who does not smoke. Ib.

Man is a creature who lives not upon bread alone, but principally by catch-words.

Part 2.

The weather is usually fine when people are courting. Part 3.

The cruellest lies are often told in silence.

Virginibus Puerisque. Part 4.

When an old gentleman waggles his head and says: "Ah, so I thought when I was your age," it is not thought an answer at all, if the young man retorts: "My venerable sir, so I shall most probably think when I am yours." And yet the one is as good as the other.

Crabbed Age and Youth.

Old and young we are all on our last cruise.

Ib.

For God's sake give me the young man who has brains enough to make a fool of himself!

Ib.

A man finds he has been wrong at every preceding stage of his career, only to deduce the astonishing conclusion that he is at last entirely right.

Ib.

Age may have one side, but assuredly Youth has the other. There is nothing more certain than that both are right, except perhaps that both are wrong.

Politics is perhaps the only profession for which no preparation is thought necessary.

Yoshida-Torajiro.

Language is but a poor bull's-eye lantern wherewith to show off the vast cathedral of the world.

Walt Whitman.

There are not words enough in all Shakespeare to express the merest fraction of a man's experience in an hour.

Ib.

I hate cynicism a great deal worse than I do the devil; unless, perhaps, the two were the same thing?

Ib.

Each has his own tree of ancestors, but at the top of all sits Probably Arboreal.

Memories and Portraits.

The first duty of a man is to speak, that is his chief business in this world.

Ib.

All speech, written or spoken, is a dead language, until it finds a willing and prepared hearer.

Essay on Conversation.

How hard soe'er it be to bridle wit,
Yet memory oft no less requires the bit.
How many, hurried by its force away,
Forever in the land of gossips stray. Id.

EARL OF STIRLING (Sir William Alexander) (1567 ?–1640).

What life refused, to gain by death he
thought:
For life and death are but indifferent
things,
And of themselves not to be shunned nor sought,
But for the good or ill that either brings.

Tragedy of Darius.

Death is the port where all may refuge find,
The end of labour, entry unto rest. Id.

What thing so good which not some harm
may bring?
Even to be happy is a dangerous thing.

Chorus 1.

Of all the tyrants that the world affords,
Our own affections are the fiercest lords.

Julius Cæsar.

Although my hap be hard, my heart is high.
Aurora. Sonnet 30.

To love and be beloved, this is the good,
Which for most sovereign all the world will prove. Sonnet 44.

Things out of sight do straight forgotten die.
Sonnet 63.

I hope, I fear, resolved, and yet I doubt,
I'm cold as ice, and yet I burn as fire;
I wot not what, and yet I much desire,
And trembling too, am desperately stout.
Sonnet 68.

Though I was long in coming to the light, Yet may I mount to fortune's highest height. Sonnet 98.

A kindly flower of knights, a sunflower,
That shone against the sunlight like the sun.
The Complaint of Lisa.

Sleep; and if life was bitter to thee, pardon;
If sweet, give thanks; thou hast no more to live;
And to give thanks is good, and to forgive.
Ave atque Vale.

The old dew still falls on the old sweet flowers,
The old sun revives the new-fledged hours,
The old summer rears the new-born roses.
Age and Song.

Old thanks, old thoughts, old aspirations,
Outlive men's lives and lives of nations. Id.

Time takes them home that we loved, fair names and famous,
To the soft long sleep, to the broad sweet bosom of death;

But the flower of their souls he shall not take away to shame us,
Nor the lips lack song for ever that now
lack breath.

For with us shall the music and perfume that die not, dwell,
Though the dead to our dead bid welcome,
and we farewell.

In Memory of Barry Cornwall. St. 6.

Not a kindlier life or sweeter
Time, that lights and quenches men,
Now may quench or light again.
Epicede. (J. L. Graham, died 1876.)

Prince of sweet songs made out of tears and fire;
A harlot was thy nurse, a God thy sire;
Shame soiled thy song, and song assoiled thy shame.
But from thy feet now death hath washed
the mire,
Love reads out first, at head of all our choir,
Villon, our sad bad glad mad brother's
name.*

A Ballad of François Villon. Envoi.

And sweet red splendid kissing mouth.
Translation of Villon. Complaint of the Fair Armouress.

And song is as foam that the sea-winds
fret,
Though the thought at his heart should be deep as the sea.

A child and weak,
Mine, a delight to no man, sweet to me. Ib.
What ailed thee then to be born? Chorus.

Peace and be wise; no gods love idle speech.
Meleager.

Have all thy will of words; talk out thine heart. Ib.

A little fruit a little while is ours,
And the worm finds it soon. Chorus.

But ye, keep ye on earth
Your lips from over-speech,
Loud words and longing are so little worth;
And the end is hard to reach.
For silence after grievous things is good,
And reverence, and the fear that makes men whole,
And shame, and righteous governance of
blood,
And lordship of the soul.
But from sharp words and wits men pluck
no fruit,
And gathering thorns they shake the tree at root;
For words divide and rend;
But silence is most noble till the end. Ib.

No man doth well but God hath part in him.
Ib.

A name to be washed out with all men's tears. Althæa.

What shall be said? for words are thorns to grief. Chorus.

Thy cradled brows and loveliest loving lips,
The floral hair, the little lightening eyes,
And all thy goodly glory. Althæa.

Lament, with a long lamentation,
Cry, for an end is at hand. Semi-chorus.

Mother, thou sole and only, thou not these,
Keep me in mind a little when I die,
Because I was thy first-born
Forget not, nor think shame; I was thy son.
Time was I did not shame thee; and time was

I thought to live and make thee honourable.

Whose life in low estate began,
And on a simple village green ;
Who breaks his birth's invidious bar,
And grasps the skirts of happy chance,
And breasts the blows of circumstance,
And grapples with his evil star :
Who makes by force his merit known,
And lives to clutch the golden keys,
To mould a mighty state's decrees,
And shape the whisper of the throne. Canto 64.

The pillar of a people's hope,
The centre of a world's desire ;
Yet feels, as in a pensive dream,
When all his active powers are still,
A distant dearthness in the hill,
A secret sweetness in the stream. Ib.

The shadow of his loss drew like eclipse, Darkening the world. We have lost him;
 he is gone:

We know him now: all narrow jealousies
 Are silent; and we see him as he moved,
 How modest, kindly, all - accomplished,
 wise,

With what sublime repression of himself,
 And in what limits, and how tenderly;
 Not swaying to this faction or to that;
 Not making his high place the lawless perch
 Of winged ambitions, nor a vantage-ground
 For pleasure; but through all this tract of

"Our gracious monarch viewed with equal eye
The wants of either university;
Troops he to Oxford sent, well knowing why,
That learned body wanted loyalty;
But books to Cambridge sent, as well discerning
That that right loyal body wanted learning."

Another version (which has been attributed to Thos. Warton, sen., Professor of Poetry at Oxford) runs:

"Our royal master saw with heedful eyes
The state of his two universities;
To one he sends a regiment, for why?
That learned body wanted loyalty.
To the other books he gave, as well discerning,
How much that loyal body wanted learning."

Rob Roy's Grave.

Of old things all are over old,
Of good things none are good enough;
We'll show that we can help to frame
A world of other stuff.

Ah! why should we undo it?

Ib.

A day of shame
For them whom precept and the pedantry
Of cold mechanic battle do enslave.

In the Pass of Killiecrankie.

Oh, for a single hour of that Dundee
Who on that day the word of onset gave!
Like conquest would the men of England
see;
And her foes find a like inglorious grave.

Ib.

Who, though she bears
Our mortal complement of years,
Lives in the light of youthful glee.

There let a mystery of joy prevail.
Fly, some kind spirit.

Still tempering from the guilty forge
Of vain conceit, an iron scourge!

The Brownie's Cell.

Thou, O Clyde, hast ever been Beneficent as strong.

Composed at Corra Linn.

The man of abject soul in vain
Shall walk the Marathonian plain.

Ib.

The freshness, the eternal youth,
Of admiration sprung from truth;
From beauty infinitely growing
Upon a mind with love o'erflowing.

On the Banks of the Bran.

But thou, that didst appear so fair
To fond imagination,
Dost rival in the light of day
Her delicate creation:
Meek loveliness is round thee spread,
A softness still and holy;
The grace of forest charms decayed,
And pastoral melancholy.

Yarrow Visited.

She who dwells with me, whom I have loved
With such communion, that no place on earth
Can ever be a solitude to me.

There is an eminence.

That famous youth, full soon removed From earth, perhaps by Shakspeare's self approved,
 Fletcher's associate, Jonson's friend beloved.
Inscription in the Grounds of Coleorton.

'Tis not in battles that from youth we train
 The governor who must be wise and good.
Sonnet.

Happy is he, who, caring not for Pope,
 Consul, or King, can sound himself to know
 The destiny of man, and live in hope.
Calais. August 15, 1802.

Once did she hold the gorgeous East in fee,
 And was the safeguard of the West.

 the Venetian Republic.*
 She was a maiden city, bright and free. Ib.

Men are we, and must grieve when even the shade
 Of that which once was great is passed away. Ib.

Who, taking counsel of unbending truth,
 By one example hath set forth to all
 How they with dignity may stand; or fall,
 If fall they must.
Sonnet. The King of Sweden.

Thou hast left behind
 Powers that will work for thee, air, earth,
 and skies:
 There's not a breathing of the common
 wind
 That will forget thee; thou hast great allies;
 Thy friends are exultations, agonies,
 And love, and man's unconquerable mind.
To Toussaint L'Ouverture.

Thou art free,
 My country! and 'tis joy enough and pride
 For one hour's perfect bliss, to tread the grass
 Of England once again.

In the Valley, near Dover.
 Two voices are there; one is of the sea,
 One of the mountains; each a mighty voice,
 In both from age to age thou didst rejoice,
 They were thy chosen music, liberty!

London.

Plain living and high thinking are no more;
 The homely beauty of the good old cause
 Is gone; our peace, our fearful innocence.
 And pure religion breathing household laws.
Ib.

Milton! thou shouldst be living at this hour:
 England hath need of thee; she is a fen
 Of stagnant waters. Ib.

Thy soul was like a star, and dwelt apart.
Ib.

So didst thou travel on life's common way
 In cheerful godliness. Ib.

Perpetual emptiness! unceasing change!
 No single volume paramount, no code,
 No master spirit, no determined road:
 But equally a want of books and men.

That watches and receives.

St. 8.

Who is the happy warrior? Who is he
 That every man in arms should wish to be?

It is the generous spirit, who, when brought
 Among the tasks of real life, hath wrought

Upon the plan that pleased his childish
 thought:

Whose high endeavours are an inward light
 That makes the path before him always bright:

Who with a natural instinct to discern What knowledge can perform, is diligent to learn. Character of the Happy Warrior.

Whither is fled the visionary gleam?
Where is it now, the glory and the dream?
Canto 4.

Our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting:
The Soul that rises with us, our life's Star,
Hath had elsewhere its setting,

And cometh from afar:
Not in entire forgetfulness,
And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory, do we come
From God, who is our home:
Heaven lies about us in our infancy!

Is littleness. Lines left upon a Seat.

I had been nourished by the sickly food
Of popular applause. I now perceived
That we are praised, only as men in us
Do recognise some image of themselves,
An abject counterpart of what they are,
Or the empty thing that they would wish to be.
The Borderers. Act 4.

SIR HENRY WOTTON (1568-1639).

Virtue is the roughest way,
But proves at night a bed of down.

Death, and Immortality. Night 4.

Wishing, of all employments, is the worst. Ib.

Wishing, that constant hectic of a fool. Ib.

Why all this toil for triumphs of an hour?
What though we wade in wealth, or soar in fame?

Earth's highest station ends in, "Here he lies,"

And "dust to dust" concludes her noblest song. Ib.

Man wants but little; nor that little long. Ib.

A God all mercy, is a God unjust. Ib.

Oh love of gold! thou meanest of amours! Ib.

Could angels envy, they had envied here. Ib.

A truth so strange! 'twere bold to think it true;

If not far bolder still to disbelieve! Ib.

Angels are men of a superior kind;
Angels are men in lighter habit clad. Ib.

Eternity, too short to speak thy praise. Ib.

'Tis impious in a good man to be sad. Ib.

Read Nature; Nature is a friend to truth;
Nature is Christian; preaches to mankind;
And bids dead matter aid us in our creed. Ib.

And then, exulting in their taper, cry,
"Behold the Sun;" and, Indian-like, adore.†

A Christian is the highest style of man. Ib.

"Oh let me die his death!" all Nature cries.
"Then live his life."—All Nature falters there. Ib.

Less base the fear of death than fear of life.
O Britain, infamous for suicide! Ib.

Our funeral tears from different causes rise. Ib.

Early, bright, transient, chaste, as morning dew,
She sparkled, was exhaled, and went to Heaven.‡ Ib.

We see Time's furrows on another's brow,
And Death entrenched, preparing his assault.

How few themselves in that just mirror see! Ib.

Like our shadows,
Our wishes lengthen, as our sun declines. Ib.

And gently slope our passage to the grave. Ib.

While man is growing life is in decrease;
And cradles rock us nearer to the tomb.

Our birth is nothing but our death begun. Ib.

Sinking in virtue, as you rise in fame. Ib.

That life is long which answers life's great end. Ib.

The man of wisdom is the man of years. Ib.

Not simple conquest, triumph is his aim. Ib.

Sure as night follows day,
Death treads in pleasure's footsteps round the world,

When pleasure treads the paths which reason shuns,

When, against reason, riot shuts the door. Ib.

Soon, not surprising, Death his visit paid.

Her thought went forth to meet him on his way. Ib.

Yet peace begins just where ambition ends. Ib.

Death loves a shining mark, a signal blow. § Ib.

Nothing is dead, but that which wished to die;

Nothing is dead, but wretchedness and pain. Night 6.

What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun? 1, 3.

[What profit hath man . . . wherein he laboureth under the sun?—R.V.]

One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh; but the earth abideth for ever. 1, 4.

[One generation goeth, and another generation cometh; and, etc.—R.V.]

All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full. 1, 7.

All things are full of labour; man cannot utter it: the eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing. 1, 8.

[. . . full of weariness; etc.—R.V.]

The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be, and that which is done is that which shall be done: and there is no new thing under the sun. 1, 9.

[That which hath been is . . . ; and that which hath been done, etc.—R.V.]

All is vanity and vexation of spirit. 1, 14.

[. . . and a striving after wind.—R.V.]

In much wisdom is much grief. 1, 18.

He that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow. 16.

Wisdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness. 2, 13.

One event happeneth to them all. 2, 14.

To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven: a time to be born, and a time to die. 3, 1, 2.

Wherefore I praised the dead which are already dead more than the living which are yet alive. 4, 2.

But woe to him that is alone when he falleth. 4, 10.

A threefold cord is not quickly broken. 4, 12.

God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be few. 5, 2.

Better is it that thou shouldst not vow, than that thou shouldst vow and not pay. 5, 5.

The sleep of a labouring man is sweet. 5, 12.

A good name is better than precious ointment. 7, 1.

It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to go to the house of feasting. 7, 2.

For as the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of the fool. 7, 6.

Better is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof. 7, 8.

Say not thou, What is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not enquire wisely concerning this. 7, 10.

Wisdom giveth life to them that have it. 7, 12.

[Wisdom preserveth the life of him that hath it.—R.V.]

In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider. 7, 14.

[. . . and in the day of adversity . . . —R.V.]

Be not righteous over much. 7, 16.

God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions. 7, 29.

To eat and to drink and to be merry. 8, 15; see also St. Luke 12, 19.

A living dog is better than a dead lion. 9, 4.

Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest. 9, 10.

The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favour to men of skill: but time and chance happeneth to them all. 9, 11.

Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour. 10, 1.

[Dead flies cause the ointment of the perfumer to send forth a stinking savour.—R.V.]

He that diggeth a pit shall fall into it. 10, 8.

Wine maketh merry: but money answereth all things Ecclesiastes. 10, 19.

[Wine maketh glad the life; and money answereth all things.—R.V.]

Curse not the king, no not in thy thought; and curse not the rich in thy bedchamber; for a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter. 10, 20.

Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days. 11, 1.

In the place where the tree falleth, there it shall be. 11, 3.

[. . . shall it be.—R.V.]

He that observeth the wind shall not sow; and he that regardeth the clouds shall not reap. 11, 4.

Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun. 11, 7.

Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth; and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth. 11, 9.

Childhood and youth are vanity. 11, 10.

[Youth and the prime of life are vanity.—R.V.]

Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not. 12, 1.

[Remember also thy Creator in the days of thy youth, or ever the evil days come.—R.V.]

And the grinders cease because they are few. 12, 3.

And the grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail: because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets. 12, 5.

[And the grasshopper shall be a burden and the caper-berry shall fail; because etc.—R.V.]

Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern. 12, 6.

Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it. 12, 7.

[; and the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit return unto God who gave it.—R.V.]

He gave good heed, and sought out, and set in order many proverbs. 12, 9.

[He pondered, and sought out, and set in order many proverbs.—R.V.]

The words of the wise are as goads. 12, 11.

Of making many books there is no end; and much study is a weariness of the flesh. 12, 13.

Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man. 12, 13.

[This is the end of the matter; all hath been heard: fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of men.—R.V.]

For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil. 12, 14.

[. . . every hidden thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil.—R.V.]

As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters.

Song of Solomon.* 2, 2.

[As a lily among thorns, etc.—R.V.]

For lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land. 2, 11 and 12.

The little foxes, that spoil the vines. 2, 15.

[. . . spoil the vineyards.—R.V.]

I sleep, but my heart waketh. 5, 2.

[I was asleep, but my heart waked.—R.V.]

Love is strong as death; jealousy is cruel as the grave. 8, 6.

Many waters cannot quench love. 8, 7.

The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib. Isaiah. 1, 3.

The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint. 1, 5.

From the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment. 1, 6.

[. . . and festering sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with oil.—R.V.]

Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me. 1, 13.

And the strong shall be as tow, and the maker of it as a spark, and they shall both burn together, and none shall quench them. 1, 31.

[And the strong shall be as tow, and his work as a spark; and they shall both burn together, and none shall quench them.—R.V.]

They shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning hooks. (See Joel 3, 10, and Micah 4, 3.) 2, 4.

- To the moles and to the bats.
Isaiah. 2, 20.
- Grind the faces of the poor. 3, 15.
- In that day seven women shall take hold of one man. 4, 1.
[And seven women shall take hold of one man in that day.—R.V.]
- And he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes. 5, 2.
- And he looked for judgment, but behold oppression; for righteousness, but behold a cry. 5, 7.
- Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no place! 5, 8.
[. . . . till there be no room.—R.V.]
- Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink! 5, 11.
- Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cart rope! 5, 18.
- Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil! 5, 20.
- Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes! 5, 21.
- For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still. 5, 25.
- I am a man of unclean lips. 6, 5.
- For a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offence. 8, 14.
- Wizards that peep, and that mutter. 8, 19.
[Wizards that chirp and that mutter.—R.V.]
- Thou hast multiplied the nation, and not increased the joy: they joy before thee according to the joy in harvest, and as men rejoice when they divide the spoil. 3, 3.
[Thou hast multiplied the nation, thou hast increased their joy: they joy, etc.—R.V.]
- The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid. 11, 6.
[And the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, etc.—R.V.]
- Hell from beneath is moved for thee to meet thee at thy coming. 14, 9.
- How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! 14, 12.
[How art thou fallen from heaven, O daystar, son of the morning!—R.V.]
- And in mercy shall the throne be established. 16, 5.
[And a throne shall be established in mercy.—R.V.]
- Babylon is fallen, is fallen. (See Revelation 18, 2.) 21, 9.
- Watchman, what of the night? 21, 11.
- Let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we shall die. 22, 13.
- Whose merchants are princes. 23, 8.
- A feast of fat things. 25, 6.
- But they also have erred through wine, and through strong drink. 28, 7.
[But these also have erred through wine, and through strong drink are gone astray.—R.V.]
- For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little. 28, 10.
[For it is precept upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, there a little.—R.V.]
- We have made a covenant with death. 28, 15.
- Speak unto us smooth things; prophesy deceits. 30, 10.
- In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength. 30, 15.
- One thousand shall flee at the rebuke of one. 30, 17.
- This is the way, walk ye in it. 30, 21.
- But the liberal deviseth liberal things; and by liberal things shall he stand. 32, 8.
[But the liberal deviseth liberal things; and in liberal things shall he continue.—R.V.]
- And the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose. 35, 1.
- And sorrow and sighing shall flee away. 35, 10.
- Thou trustest in the staff of this broken reed, on Egypt; whereon, if a man lean, it will go into his hand and pierce it. (See 2 Kings, 18, 21.) 36, 6.
[. . . . this bruised reed, even upon Egypt; whereon, etc.—R.V.]
- Set thine house in order. 38, 1.
- All flesh is grass, and all the goodness thereof is as the flower of the field. 40, 6.
- Behold, the nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance. 40, 15.
- They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles. 40, 31.
- A bruised reed shall he not break, and the smoking flax shall he not quench. 42, 3.

Seeing many things, but thou observest not. Isaiah. 42, 20.
[Thou seest many things, but thou observest not.—R.V.]

Shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it, What makest thou? 48, 9.

In the furnace of affliction. 48, 10.

There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked. (See Isaiah 57, 21.) 48, 22.

I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair. 50, 6.

Drunken, but not with wine. 51, 21.

How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace. 52, 7.

His visage was so marred more than any man. 52, 14.

Who hath believed our report? 53, 1.

When we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him. 53, 2.

[When we see him, etc.—R.V.]

A man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief. 53, 3.

He was despised, and we esteemed him not. 53, 3.

He was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth. 53, 7.

[He was oppressed yet he humbled not himself and opened not his mouth; as a lamb that is led to the slaughter, and as a sheep that before her shearers is dumb; yea, he opened not his mouth.—R.V.]

He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied. 53, 11.

Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters. 55, 1.

Without money and without price. 55, 1.

Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which satisfieth not? 55, 2.

For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways. 55, 8.

I will give them an everlasting name, that shall not be cut off. 56, 5.

They are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark. 56, 10.

Their feet run to evil, and they make haste to shed innocent blood. 59, 7.

We roar all like bears, and mourn sore like doves.* 59, 11.

* See Shakespeare: "I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove"—which may have been suggested by this passage.

Beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. 61, 3.

[A garland for ashes . . . —R.V.]

Glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of his strength. 63, 1.

[Glorious in his apparel, marching in the greatness of his strength.—R.V.]

I have trodden the wine-press alone. 63, 3.

I looked, and there was none to help. 63, 5.

All our righteousnesses are as filthy rags; and we all do fade as a leaf. 64, 6.

[All our righteousnesses are as a polluted garment; and we all do fade as a leaf.—R.V.]

The prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means; and my people love to have it so: and what will ye do in the end thereof? Jeremiah. 5, 31.

Saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace. 6, 14.

The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved. 8, 20.

Is there no balm in Gilead; is there no physician there? 8, 22.

Oh that I had in the wilderness a lodging-place of wayfaring men! 9, 2.

I was like a lamb or an ox that is brought to the slaughter. 11, 19.

Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? 13, 23.

The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked. 17, 9.

[. . . and it is desperately sick.—R.V.]

They have digged a pit for my soul. 18, 20.

Weep ye not for the dead, neither bemoan him: but weep sore for him that goeth away: for he shall return no more, nor see his native country. 22, 10.

O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the Lord. 22, 29.

The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge.† 31, 29.

[The fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge.—R.V.]

And seekest thou great things for thyself? seek them not. 45, 5.

She that was great among the nations, and princess among the provinces, how is she become tributary! Lamentations. 1, 1.

Is it nothing to you all ye that pass by? behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, which is done unto me. 1, 12.

† See "Τὰ τῶν τεκόντων," κ.τ.λ.

It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not. Lamentations. 3, 22.

It is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth. 3, 27.

He giveth his cheek to him that smiteth him. 3, 30.

[Let him give his cheek to him that smiteth him.—R.V.]

As if a wheel had been in the midst of a wheel. Ezekiel. 10, 10.

[As if a wheel had been within a wheel.—R.V.]

The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge. (See Jeremiah, 31, 29.) 18, 2.

We are not careful to answer thee in this matter. Daniel. 3, 16.

[We have no need to answer thee in this matter.—R.V.]

TEKEL; Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting. 5, 27.

According to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not. 6, 8.

For they have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind. Hosea. 8, 7.

[For they sow the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind. R.V.]

Ye have plowed wickedness, ye have reaped iniquity. 10, 13.

That which the palmerworm hath left hath the locust eaten. Joel. 1, 4.

Your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions. 2, 28.

Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision. 3, 14.

Can two walk together, except they be agreed? Amos. 3, 3.

[Shall two walk together, except they have agreed?—R.V.]

As a firebrand plucked out of the burning. 4, 11.

Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it.* Habakkuk. 2, 2.

A brand plucked out of the fire. Zechariah. 3, 2.

For who hath despised the day of small things? 4, 10.

They made their hearts as an adamant stone. 7, 12.

Prisoners of hope. 9, 12.

Woe to the idle shepherd that leaveth the flock! 11, 17.

[Woe to the worthless shepherd . . . —R.V.]

With which I was wounded in the house of my friends. 13, 6.

Have we not all one father? hath not one God created us? Malachi. 2, 10.

Those that oppress the hireling in his wages. 3, 5.

Unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings. (See "Wisdom of Solomon," 5, 6.) 4, 2.

[In R.V. Sun is given with a small "s."]

* "He that runs may read." The inverted form of this text is from Cowper's "Tirocinium." The Septuagint text is:—

ὅπως δίσκη ὁ ἀναγινώσκων αὐτά.

This has been alleged to mean "That he that reads may make haste to escape." But Jerome interpreted the passage as meaning that the writing was to be so plain that the reader might run and not be impeded from reading by his speed. Grotius considered it to mean "that it was to be so written that the reader should be quick in comprehending it"; or able to read it easily. The R.C. translation from the Vulgate ("Ut percurrat qui legerit eum"), gives the passage: "That he that readeth it may run over it."

APOCRYPHA.

Women are strongest: but above all things Truth beareth away the victory. 1 Esdras. 3, 12.

As for the truth, it endureth, and is always strong; it liveth and conquereth for evermore. 4, 38.

[But truth abideth, and is strong for ever; she liveth and conquereth for evermore.—R.V.]

Great is Truth, and mighty above all things. 4, 41.

[. . . and strong above all things.—R.V.]

Swallow then down, O my soul, understanding, and devour wisdom. 2 Esdras. 8, 4.

[Swallow down understanding, then, O my soul, and let my heart devour wisdom.—R.V.]

Give alms of thy substance; and when thou givest alms, let not thine eye be envious, neither turn thy face from any poor, and the face of God shall not be turned away from thee. Tobit. 4, 7.
[. . . ; turn not thy face . . . —R.V.]

If thou hast abundance, give alms accordingly; if thou hast but a little, be not afraid to give according to that little. 4, 8.
[As thy substance is, give alms of it according to thine abundance: if thou have little, be not afraid to give alms according to that little.—R.V.]

But they that sin are enemies to their own life. 12, 10.

Love righteousness, ye that be judges of the earth. Wisdom of Solomon. 1, 1.

Let us crown ourselves with rosebuds, before they be withered.* 2, 8.

We fools accounted his life madness, and his end to be without honour: How is he numbered among the children of God, and his lot is among the saints! 5, 4 and 5.
[. . . his end without honour; How was he numbered among sons of God? And how is his lot among saints?—R.V.]

For mercy will soon pardon the meaneest: but mighty men shall be mightily tormented. 6, 6.

[For the man of low estate may be pardoned in mercy, But mighty men shall be searched out mightily.—R.V.]

He hath made the small and the great, and careth for all alike. 6, 7.

Yet he knyld and fought on hys knee.
St. 30.

The later and more commonly received version, supposed to have been written about a century later, gives these lines as follows :—
For Witherington needs must I wayle,
As one in doleful dumpes ;
For when his leggs were smitten off,
He fought upon his stumpes.

Fight on, my men, Sir Andrew says,
A little I'm hurt, but yet not slain ;
I'll but lie down and bleed awhile,
And then I'll rise and fight again.
Ballad of Sir Andrew Barton. (16th Century.)

† In the more modern version :—
"The child may rue that is unborne,
The hunting of that day."

Fight on, fight on, my merry men all,
A little I am hurt, yet not slain;
I'll but lie down and bleed awhile,
And come and fight with you again.
Ballad of Sir Andrew Barton.
(Another Version.)

The Broderers' Song. Ancient song, said to have been repeated or sung at the dinners of the Broderers' (Em-broiderers') Company.

My mind to me a kingdom is;
Such perfect joy therein I find
As far exceeds all earthly bliss
That God or Nature hath assigned.*
Printed about 1585 in Byrd's "Psalms, Sonets, and Songs of Sadnes and Pietie."

I laugh not at another's loss,
I grudge not at another's gain. Id.

I think Nature hath lost the mould
Where she her shape did take;
Or else I doubt if Nature could
So fair a creature make.

A Praise of his Lady. Tottel's "Miscellany," 1557.

Similar lines appear in "A Praise of his Love," by the Earl of Surrey, d. 1547.

A ship is sooner rigged by far than a

And love is love, in beggars as in kings.

"A. W." in Davison's "Rhapsody." (16th Century.)

If you your lips would keep from slips,
Five things observe with care:
To whom you speak, of whom you speak,
And how, and when, and where.
Thirly Hall. By W. E. Norris. Vol. 1, p. 315.

Men have many faults;
Poor women have but two:
There's nothing good they say,
And nothing right they do. Anon.

It's a very good world that we live in,
To lend, or to spend, or to give in;
But to beg, or to borrow, or come by your
own,

It's the very worst world that ever was known. Anon.

Usually quoted in this form. An older form, however, is that in which it appears in "A Collection of Epigrams," 12mo, London, 1737:

This is the best world, that we live in,
To lend and to spend and to give in;
But to borrow, or beg, or to get a man's own,
It is the worst world that ever was known.

And from the top of all my trust
Mishap hath thrown me in the dust.

The Lover that once disdained Love. (Tottel's Collection of Songs and Sonnets, pub. 1557.)

These lines are said to have been written by Mary Queen of Scots, with a diamond, on a window in Fotheringay Castle.

And when the pipe is foul within,
Think how the soul's defiled with sin;
To purge with fire it does require,
Thus think, and drink tobacco.

From a MS. of early part of 17th century, signed "G. W.," and sometimes attributed to George Wither. The poem was first published in 1831, in "The Soule's Solace," by Thos. Jenner.

There are many subsequent editions, varying materially in the text.

O what a parish, what a terrible parish,
O what a parish is Little Dunkel!
They hae hangit the minister, drowned the precentor,
Dung down the steeple, and drucken the

Whatever turn the matter takes,
I deem it all but ducks and drakes.
Careless Content. (Anon.)

He sighed in his singing and after each grone,
Come willow, willow, willow!
I'm dead to all pleasure, my true love is gone;

Oh willow, willow, willow!
Willow, Willow, Willow. (Old Ballad.)
See "Othello," Act 4, 3. (p. 325.)

Shepherd, be advised by me,
Cast off grief and willow-tree;
For thy grief brings her content;
She is pleased if thou lament.
The Willow Tree. (Ancient Black-letter Ballad.)

And he loved keeping company.
The Heir of Linne, St. 2. (Old Ballad.)

Oh, waly, waly, gin love be bonny,
A little while, when it is new;
But when it's auld it waxeth cauld,
And fades awa' like morning dew.
Old Scottish Song. (Quoted by Burns.)

It is good to be merry and wise
It is good to be honest and true,
It is best to be off with the old love,
Before you are on with the new.
Published in "Songs of England and Scotland," London, 1835, Vol. 2, p. 73.

Avon.

Man's life is like unto a summer's day:
Some break their fast and so away;
Others stay dinner then depart full fed;
The longest age but sups and goes to bed:

* Early tradition states that these lines were selected by the poet for his epitaph; it is not thought that they were his own composition.

O reader, then, behold and see
As we are now so must you be.

Old Epitaph found with variations in different churches. Attributed to Jos. Henshaw, Bishop of Peterborough (d. 1678).

How time runs away ! and we meet with death always ere we have time to think ourselves alive. One doth but breakfast here, another dines, he that liveth longest doth but sup ; we must all go to bed in another world.

Dr. John Brown's "Horæ Subsecivæ" (1858-60).

Here lies a poor woman, who always was tired ;
She lived in a house where help was not hired.

Her last words on earth were : " Dear friends, I am going
Where washing ain't done, nor sweeping, nor sewing ;
But everything there is exact to my wishes ;
For where they don't eat there's no washing of dishes.

I'll be where loud anthems will always be ringing,
But, having no voice, I'll be clear of the singing.
Don't mourn for me now ; don't mourn for me never—

I'm going to do nothing for ever and ever."
The Tired Woman's Epitaph. Quoted before 1850. (Authorship unknown.)

Past is the fear of future doubt,
The sun is from the dial gone,
The sands are sunk, the glass is out,
The folly of the farce is done.

Here lies one whose name was writ in water.

Epitaph on John Keats's Tomb, 1820.

Circles though small are yet complete.
Inscribed on a monument to two children (family, Musgrave), Northleigh Church, Oxon (c. 1800.)

And if there be no meeting past the grave,
If all is darkness, silence, yet 'tis rest.
Be not afraid ye waiting hearts that weep.

Lines on the grave of Prof. Huxley, 1825-95, stated to be written by his wife, with two additional lines :—

For still He giveth His beloved sleep,
And if an endless sleep He wills, 'tis best.

Summer, as my friend Coleridge waggishly writes, has set in with its usual severity.

Had you seen this road before it was made,
You would lift both your hands and bless General Wade.

In reference to General (afterwards Field Marshal) Wade, who employed 500 soldiers in road-making in the Highlands, 1726-1729. The lines are said to be by "an Irish ensign."

It was well known that the Dean (Swift) could write finely upon a broomstick.

Remark stated by Delany to have been made by "Stella" (Mrs. Johnson) in reference to Dean Swift and his poems in praise of "Vanessa" (Miss Vanhomrigh).

Such is the variable and fickle nature of women, by whom all mischiefs in the world (for the most part) do happen and come.

Giraldus Cambrensis (b. 1146). (Old Translation.)

The Rule of the Road—and Path :—

The rule of the road is a paradox quite,
Both in riding and driving along ;
If you keep to the left, you are sure to be right,
If you keep to the right you are wrong ;
But in walking the streets 'tis a different case,
To the right it is right you should bear ;
Whereas to the left should be left enough space

For those whom you chance to meet there.

Mary had a little lamb,

His fleece was white as snow,
And everywhere that Mary went
The lamb was sure to go.

Often attributed to Mrs. Sarah G. Hale, but by John Rolleston, of Massachusetts (c. 1817).

This gate hangs high, and hinders none ;
Refresh and pay, and travel on.

Inscription on the Sign of a Gate. (Sometimes the name of the Sign is different, and the second line runs "Come in and buy, and travel on.")

Life let us cherish.

Title of a pianoforte exercise; a translation of the first lines of Nägels's "Volkstied":—

"Freut euch des Lebens Weil noch das Lämpchen glüht."

I expect to pass through this world but once. Any good therefore that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any fellow creature, let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again.

Every effort to identify the author of this much-quoted saying has failed. It has been attributed to Stephen Grellet, an American quaker of French birth (b. 1773, d. 1855); R. W. Emerson; Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devon (this being, however, a mistake, due to a partial resemblance of the Earl's epitaph; see p. 445); Sir Rowland Hill (1744-1833); Marcus Aurelius; Miss A. B. Hageman, Addison, Thos. Carlyle, and others; and it is also said that the germ of it is to be found in the writings of a Chinese philosopher. There seems to be some authority in favour of Stephen Grellet being the author, but the passage does not occur in any of his printed works.

In "Blessed be Drudgery," by Wm. C. Gannett (Bryce, Glasgow), the saying is thus recorded: "The old Quaker was right: I expect to pass through life but once. If there is any kindness, or any good thing I can do to my fellow beings, let me do it now. I shall pass this way but once."

For the Lord Jesus Christ's sake,

Do all the good you can,
To all the people you can,
In all the ways you can,
As long as ever you can.

Said to be from a tombstone at Shrewsbury. (Quoted by D. L. Moody, American Evangelist.)

* Richard Hooker (1553-1600).

† The nearest approach to the saying in Marcus Aurelius is: "No man, remember, can lose another life than that which he now loses. The present is the same for all; what we now lose or win is just the flying moment." Seneca has many parallel passages.

O! for a booke and a shadie nooke,
Eyther indooore or out;
With the grene leaves whispering over-heade,

Or the streete cryes all about.

Referred to by Lord Avebury in "Pleasures of Life" as "an old English song,"—but probably modern.

A Sabbath well spent brings a week of content,
And health for the toils of the morrow;
But a Sabbath profaned, whatsoe'er may be gained,
Is a certain forerunner of sorrow.

Traditional.

A lady after performing with the most brilliant execution a sonata on the piano-forte in the presence of Dr. Johnson, took the liberty of asking him if he was fond of music. "No, madam," replied the Doctor, "but of all noises I think music the least disagreeable."

Great fleas have little fleas upon their backs to bite 'em,
And little fleas have lesser fleas, and so ad infinitum.

Quoted in Prof. Augustus De Morgan's (1806-1871) "Budget of Paradoxes" (c. 1850.)

So naturalists observe, a flea

There is so much good in the worst of us,
And so much bad in the best of us,

To find fault with the rest of us.

The authorship of these lines—often quoted with slight variations—has hitherto defied all efforts at identification. They are usually credited to R. L. Stevenson, but they are not given in any of his published works, and Mr. Lloyd Osbourne—his stepson and literary executor—informs us that so far as he knows R. L. S. was not the author. "The Reader," of Sept. 7, 1907, gives them to Governor Hoch, of Kansas, but in answer to a query Governor Hoch writes: "I regret to say that I am not the author of the verse you quote, though I have been widely credited with it—a great honour." They have also been assigned to the Hon. Mrs. Felkin (Ellen Thomeycroft Fowler—who writes that they are not hers), to Elbert Hubbard, and to Joaquin Miller.

the game of catch as catch can, till the gunpowder ran out at the heels of their boots.

*Printed in this form in Miss Edgeworth's
"Harry and Lucy, Concluded," Vol.
2, p. 155 (1825). According to Miss Edgeworth, the story was by "Mr.
Foote."*

According to a writer on "Samuel Foote"
in the Quarterly Review, No. 190, Sept., 1854, these lines were produced by Samuel
Foote (1720-1777) at a lecture given by Chas.
Macklin (1697?-1797), in which he stated that he had brought his own memory to such perfection that he could learn anything by rote on once hearing it. Foote's sentences were handed to Macklin at the end of the lecture, with a request that he would read them and afterwards repeat them from memory. Macklin lectured in 1754.

According to a correspondent of Notes and Queries (Nov. 16, 1850), the author of "The Incoherent Story" was James Quin, the actor (1693-1766), who is said to have laid Foote a wager that he could speak some nonsense which Foote could not repeat off-hand after him. The version given is rather different from the above. The various memoirs of Foote, Quin, and Macklin contain no references to the story.

There is an older and longer story, entitled
"Sir Gammer Vans," which may have suggested the above. The following extract will show its resemblance to "The Incoherent Story":—

"Last Sunday morning, at six o'clock in the evening, as I was sailing over the tops of the mountains in my little boat, I met two men on horseback riding on one mare. So

* Often erroneously attributed to Dr. Johnson.

I asked them, 'Could they tell me whether the little old woman was dead yet, who was hanged last Saturday week for drowning herself in a shower of feathers?' So he took me into his garden. . . . And in the fourth [corner] there were twenty-four hipper-switches threshing tobacco, and at sight of me they threshed so hard that they drove the plug through the wall. . . . Out sprung a covey of partridges. I shot at them. Some say I killed eighteen, but I am sure I killed thirty-six, besides a dead salmon, which was flying over the bridge, of which I made the best apple-pie I ever tasted."

Though lost to sight, to memory dear.

This occurs in a song by Geo. Linley (c. 1835), but it is found as an "axiom" in the Monthly Magazine, Jan., 1827, and is probably of much earlier date. Horace F. Cutter (pseudonym Ruthven Jenkyns) uses the expression in the Greenwich Magazine for Mariners, 1707, but this date is fictitious.

Secrets travel fast in Paris.

When I want any good head-work done, I always choose a man, if suitable otherwise, with a long nose.

Everything unnatural is imperfect.

Public instruction should be the first object of government.

It is the cause, not the death, that makes the martyr.

Four hostile newspapers are more to be feared than a thousand bayonets.

Let the path be open to talent.

* See Sterne (p. 348).

Water, air, and cleanliness are the chief articles in my pharmacopœia.

Greatness is nothing unless it be lasting.

Revolutions are like noxious dung-heaps which bring into life the noblest vegetables.

I made all my generals out of mud.

The worse the man, the better the soldier; if soldiers be not corrupt they ought to be made so.

Imagination rules the world.

Independence, like honour, is a rocky island without a beach.

Men are led by trifles.

Honour your parents; worship the gods; hurt not animals.

From the traditional laws or precepts of Triptolemus (according to Plutarch).

Written laws are like spiders' webs, and will like them only entangle and hold the poor and weak, while the rich and powerful will easily break through them.*

Anacharsis (fl. B.C. 594).

This was the saying of Anacharsis to Solon when the latter was modelling his laws. Solon's reply was: "Men keep their engagements when it is an advantage to both parties not to break them."—Plutarch: Life of Solon.

That law of Solon [fl. B.C. 598] is justly commended which forbids men to speak ill of the dead. Plutarch: Life of Solon.

This command is also attributed to Chilo. (See Greek, "Τὸν νεκρὸν κτλ.")

Persons maimed in the wars should be maintained at the public charge.

One of the laws of Solon (according to Plutarch: Life of Solon).

Call no man happy before his death.

The saying of Solon (b. B.C. 638), according to Aristotle (b. B.C. 384, d. B.C. 322).

Cf. "Judge none blessed before his death."—Ecclesiasticus, 11, 28.

Business to-morrow.

Greek proverb founded on the remark of Archias of Thebes (about B.C. 560).

Archias delayed reading a letter of warning delivered to him at a banquet, and was in consequence assassinated.—Plutarch: Pelopidas.

O man! whosoever thou art, and whosoever thou comest, for come I know thou wilt, I am Cyrus, founder of the Persian empire. Envy me not the little earth that covers my body.

Epitaph of Cyrus (d. B.C. 529). (Plutarch: Life of Alexander.)

Love, as though some day you would have to hate; hate, as though some day you would have to love.

Saying of Chilo, Greek philosopher, 6th century B.C.

Whichever you do you will repent.

The advice of Socrates, when asked whether it was better to marry or not to marry.

Thales, one of the Greek sages, when young, and desired by his mother to marry, replied, "it was not yet time"; when he had come to full age, "that it was no longer time."—Montaigne, Book 2, ch. 8.

Much knowledge of things divine escapes us through want of faith.

Saying of Heraclitus, Greek philosopher, c. B.C. 500 (quoted by Plutarch: Life of Coriolanus.)

Words will build no walls.

Cratinus (B.C. 528-431) (quoted by Plutarch in his Life of Pericles) ridiculing the long wall proposed to be built by Pericles.

The first requisite to happiness is that a man be born in a famous city.

Plutarch ("Life of Demosthenes") states this was the remark of "Euripides (B.C. 480-B.C. 406) or some other" in his encomium on Alcibiades (B.C. 449-B.C. 404).

A bridge for a retreating enemy.

Saying of Aristides.

Plutarch, in his "Life of Themistocles," states that in order to sound Aristides, after the battle of Salamis, Themistocles pretended to think it advisable to go to the Hellespont and break down Xerxes' bridge of ships. To which Aristides replied: "Instead of breaking that bridge, we should, if possible, provide another, that he may retire the sooner out of Europe." (See "Proverbs," "Build a bridge of silver," etc.)

The Athenians will not sell their liberties for all the gold either above or under ground.

Reply of Aristides (d. B.C. 467) to the Lacedæmonians. (Plutarch: Life of Aristides.)

A general should have clean hands.

Saying of Aristides (d. B.C. 467). (Plutarch's Life.)

The good man only is free; all bad men are slaves.

Quoted by Plutarch as a maxim of the Stoics (Life of Cato the Younger). The sentiment is also attributed to Socrates (B.C. 468-398).

He would soon be delivered from all his troubles.

Enigmatic prophecy of the spirit of Cleonice (B.C. 448) to Cimon, foretelling his death. (Plutarch: Life of Cimon.)

* See Bacon (p. 12); and Swift (p. 353).

Nothing becomes a king so much as the distribution of justice. War is a tyrant, as Timotheus (c. B.C. 500) expresses it, but Pindar (B.C. 518-439) says, Justice is the rightful sovereign of the world.

Plutarch: Life of Demetrius.

True he can talk, and yet he is no speaker.

Eupolus (Greek poet, c. B.C. 435) in reference to a garrulous person who was no orator. (Cited by Plutarch: Life of Alcibiades.)

They love, they hate, but cannot do without him.*

Aristophanes, Greek poet, B.C. 434 (as cited by Plutarch: Life of Alcibiades—Langhorne's trans.)

Missress of the seas.

Lysander (d. B.C. 395), when handing over the command of the fleet to Callicratidas the Spartan (c. B.C. 406) said to him, "I deliver you a fleet that is mistress of the seas."—Plutarch: Life of Lysander.

Where the lion's skin falls short it must be eked out with the fox's.

Lysander's remark upon being told that he resorted too much to craft. (Plutarch: Life of Lysander.)

This saying has become a proverb in several modern languages.

Children are to be cheated with knuckle bones [substitutes for dice], and men with oaths. Saying of Lysander. Ib.

Appealing from Philip drunk to Philip sober.

This is founded on a passage in Valerius Maximus (fl. A.D. 14), who states that a certain woman of foreign origin, having been wrongly condemned by Philip when he was drunk, exclaimed, "Provocarem ad Philippum, sed sobrium" (I would appeal to Philip, but when he is sober).—Book 6, 2.

Not Philip, but Philip's gold, took the cities of Greece.

Plutarch (Life of Paulus Æmilius) quotes this as "a common saying." It refers to Philip II. of Macedon (c. B.C. 332-B.C. 336).

If I were not Alexander, I should wish to be Diogenes.

Remark of Alexander (B.C. 355-323), after Diogenes had made his request that the monarch "should stand a little out of his sunshine."—Plutarch: Life of Alexander.

I will not steal a victory.

Plutarch describes this as "that celebrated answer" by Alexander, when advised to surprise the Persian army in the darkness.—Ib.

* See Latin Quotations: "Difficilis, facilis," etc.; also Addison (p. 2): "There is no living with thee or without thee."

Great geniuses are generally melancholy.

Aristotle (B.C. 384-322). (Problem, sect. 30.)

Seneca ("De Tranquillitate animi") quotes: "Aristoteli, nullum magnam ingenium sine mixtura dementiae fuit." (The saying of Aristotle—no great genius was without an admixture of madness.)

Shame is an ornament to the young; a disgrace to the old.

Aristotle. (B.C. 384-322.)

Abstruse questions must have abstruse answers.

Saying of the Gymnosophist philosopher, when Alexander had questioned him and had received an enigmatic reply.—Plutarch: Life of Alexander.

Have I inadvertently said some evil thing?

Remark of Phocion (d. B.C. 317) to a friend, upon one of his sentences, in a public debate, being received with universal applause.—Plutarch: Life of Phocion.

A hoarseness caused by swallowing gold and silver.

Remark made when Demosthenes (B.C. 382-322), who had been bribed not to speak against Harpalus, pretended to have lost his voice.—Plutarch's Lives.

Elsewhere Plutarch describes Demosthenes' throat as "the silver quinsy." (See Ἀργυράχην πύσχει, under Greek.)

To smell of the lamp.

Demosthenes when taunted by Pytheas that all his arguments "smelled of the lamp," replied, "Yes, but your lamp and mine, my friend, do not witness the same labours."—Plutarch: Life of Demosthenes.

In his "Life of Timoleon," Plutarch quotes the expression as applying to over-finished paintings as well as to laboured compositions.

It is said of Horace that his odes smell more of wine than of oil.

While I am master of my sword, I shall never think any man greater than myself.

Saying of Eumenes (d. B.C. 315) to Antigonus. (Plutarch: Life of Eumenes.)

I have heard the nightingale herself.

Reply of King Agesilaus (B.C. c. 440-382), when asked to go to hear a man who imitated the nightingale to great perfection.—Plutarch: Life of Agesilaus.

The Kings of Epirus were sworn "to govern according to law," and the people "to defend the crown according to law."

Plutarch: Life of Pyrrhus, King of Epirus.

It being reported to Pyrrhus (B.C. 318 c.-B.C. 272), that certain young men had spoken disrespectfully of him, he asked them, "Did you really say these things?" "We did, sir," replied one, "and we should have said a good deal more, if we had had more wine." Whereupon he laughed and dismissed them.

Plutarch: Life of Pyrrhus.

He who has the sharpest sword.

Reply of Pyrrhus to one of the princes who asked which of them should be his heir.—Plutarch: Life of Pyrrhus.

A Pyrrhic victory.

Pyrrhus, after the battle of Asculum (B.C. 279), where, according to his own account, he lost 3,500 men, was congratulated on his victory. He replied: "Another such victory and we are undone." Ib.
(See a Cadmean Victory under "Greek Quotations.")

The whole is greater than the part; we are capable of wisdom, and we are part of the world. Therefore the world is wise.

Saying of Zeno (d. B.C. 264).

See the Greek Πᾶν ἥμισυ πάντος. "The half is greater than the whole."

A wise and good man can suffer no disgrace.

Saying of Fabius Maximus (d. B.C. 205). (Plutarch.)

Hannibal knows how to gain a victory, but not how to use it.

Remark of Barca, a Carthaginian, to Hannibal. (Plutarch: Life of Fabius Maximus.)

The last of the Greeks.

Plutarch says that Philopœmen, a Greek general, who died c. B.C. 161, was so called by "a certain Roman."

This Jupiter of Phidias is the very Jupiter of Homer.

A "celebrated saying" uttered (according to Plutarch) by Paulus Æmilius (d. B.C. 168) on seeing the statue of Jupiter at Olympia.

"This is the Jew that Shakespeare drew." This famous saying uttered by a spectator, said to be Alexander Pope, on Feb. 14, 1741, when Macklin was performing the character of Shylock, would seem to have been a conscious or unconscious imitation of the saying of Paulus Æmilius.

Fortune had so favoured me in this war that I feared, the rather, that some tempest would follow so favourable a gale.

Remark ascribed by Plutarch to Paulus Æmilius.

Where the shoe pinches.

The story of "a certain Roman" who put away his wife without apparent cause, but told his friends, who expostulated, that only the wearer of the shoe knows where it wrings him, is told by Plutarch, in the "Life of Paulus Æmilius." The Roman has been wrongly assumed to be Paulus Æmilius, but the context shows that this was not so.

A sardonic laugh.

"Your laugh is of the sardonic kind." Caius Gracchus [d. B.C. 121], when his adversaries laughed at his defeat—by unfair means —when applying for a third tribuneship.—Plutarch: Life of Caius Gracchus.

(The sardonic laugh was an involuntary distension of the muscles of the mouth, occasioned by a poisonous plant; therefore a forced or unnatural laugh.)

Feasts of Lucullus (c. B.C. 115—c. B.C. 48).

Lucullus prided himself upon the luxury of his feasts. On one occasion, when he happened to sup alone, the meal being less magnificent than usual, he rebuked his servant, saying: "Did you not know that this evening Lucullus sups with Lucullus?"—Plutarch: Life of Lucullus.

Let us rescue our liberties, or die in their defence.

Cato the Younger (b. B.C. 104, d. B.C. 46). (Plutarch's Life.)

The father of his country.

Title bestowed on Cicero (B.C. 64) after his consulship, "a mark of distinction which none ever gained before."—Plutarch: Life of Cicero.

Cæsar's wife must be above suspicion.

Julius Cæsar (B.C. 100—44) divorced his wife Pompeia, but declared at the trial that he knew nothing of what was alleged against her and Clodius. When asked why, in that case, he had divorced her, he replied: "Because I would have the chastity of my wife clear even of suspicion."—Plutarch: Life of Julius Cæsar.

As to Cæsar, when he was called upon, he gave no testimony against Clodius, nor did he affirm that he was certain of any injury done to his bed. He only said, "He had divorced Pompeia because the wife of Cæsar ought not only to be clear of such a crime, but of the very suspicion of it."—Plutarch: Life of Cicero.

Passing the Rubicon.

When he arrived at the banks of the Rubicon, which divides Cisalpine Gaul from the rest of Italy . . . he stopped to deliberate. . . . At last he cried out "The die is cast" and immediately passed the river.—Plutarch: Life of Julius Cæsar.

We shall meet at Philippi.

"Thou shalt see me at Philippi," was the remark of the spectre which appeared to Brutus in his tent at Abydos [B.C. 42]. Brutus answered boldly: "I will meet thee there." At Philippi the spectre reappeared, and Brutus, after being defeated, died upon his own sword."—Plutarch: Life of Cæsar.

Killed by physicians.

Adrian the Emperor (A.D. 76—117) exclaimed incessantly, when dying, "That the crowd of physicians had killed him." (See Montaigne, Book 2, chap. 37. Montaigne also cites the statement of a Lacedæmonian, when asked how he had preserved his life so long: "By my ignorance of medicine.")

* Also in Plutarch's "Life of Marcus Brutus."

See how these Christians love one another.

This saying appears first in Tertullian, "Apol. adv. Gent.," c. 29: "Vide, inquit, ut invicem se diligant."

Take, O boatman, thrice thy fee

Take,—I give it willingly;

For, invisible to thee,

Every man has his own style, like his own nose.

Lessing (as quoted by Carlyle).

The style is the man.

From the French. "Le style est l'homme même."—Comte de Buffon. Remark made in his discourse on taking his seat in the Academy, Aug. 25, 1753. (The style is the very man.)

Defects of his qualities. From the French.

Heureux l'homme quand il n'a pas les défauts de ses qualités!—Bishop Dupanloup. (Happy the man when he has not the defects of his qualities.)

His very faults smack of the raciness of his good qualities.—Washington Irving: The Sketch Book, John Bull (1820).

The key of the street.

In French, "La clef des champs." (The key of the field.) The French expression has a different meaning from the English, and refers to giving a man freedom to go where he pleases.

It was worse than a crime: it was a blunder.

From the French: C'estoit pire qu'un crime, c'estoit une faute. — Fouché (1763-1820).

War ought to be the only study of a prince.

Machiavelli.

Edmund Burke, quoting this saying (A vindication of Natural Society, 1756), adds: "and by a prince he means every sort of state, however constituted."*

A good man struggling with adversity.

Ecce spectaculum dignum, ad quod respiciat intentus operi suo Deus. Ecce par Deo dignum, vir fortis cum mala fortuna compositus. — Seneca. "Lib. de Divina providentia." The three things to be repented of.

Portius Cato said that he had only three things of which he repented, namely, when he had revealed a secret to his wife, when he had passed a day in idleness, and when he had journeyed by sea to any place accessible by land.—Rabelais: "Pantagruel," Book 4, chap. 24.

3.—PHRASES AND HOUSEHOLD WORDS.

"Gigmania," a term used by Carlyle and others in allusion to a celebrated passage at the trial of Thurtell:—

Q. What sort of a person was Mr. Weare?

A. He was always a respectable person.

Q. What do you mean by respectable?

A. He kept a gig.

"Thus does society naturally divide itself into four classes: Noblemen, Gentlemen, Gismen, and Men"—Carlyle's article on Boswell (Note), 1832.

That blessed word "Mesopotamia."

It was said of George Whitefield that he could reduce his hearers to tears by uttering this word. According to Mr. Francis Jaco. Garrick gave currency to the saying. The usual story is that an old woman once told her pastor that "she found great support in that comfortable word 'Mesopotamia.'"

A mess of pottage.

This expression seems to have been derived from the heading of Genesis 25 in Matthew's Bible, 1537—"Esaw selleth his byrthright for a messe of potage." It does not occur in the Authorised Version of the Bible.

Lest, selling that noble Inheritance for a poor mess of perishing Pottage, you never enter into His eternal rest.—Penn's "No Cross No Crown" (1668), Part 2, chap. 23, sec. 23.

Counsels of perfection.

A theological term of great antiquity applying to works of supererogation.

The false Southron.

This expression occurs in Blind Harry's "Death of Wallace," supposed to have been written in the 15th century.

Sent to Coventry.

Said to have originated during the Civil war from the habit of the Parliamentarians of sending doubtful or useless officers or soldiers, to the garrison at Coventry. The expression is used also in America:—"Send them into everlasting Coventry."—Emerson's Essay: "Manners."

"The Republic of Letters" is a very common expression among the Europeans.

Oliver Goldsmith, "Citizen of the World," 20, (1760).

That man has an axe to grind.

This expression occurs in "Essays from the Desk of Poor Robert the Scribe" by Chas. Miner (1780-1883) and first appeared in the "Wilkesbarre Gleaner" (1811).

To mix with brains.

John Opie (1761-1807) when asked with what he mixed his colours, replied "I mix them with my brains, sir." (See Smiles: "Self Help," chap. 5.)

The almighty dollar.

Expression used by Washington Irving and other American writers.

Sleepy Hollow.

"The legend of Sleepy Hollow," by Washington Irving, was published in 1820.

A woman with a past.

Title of a novel by Mrs. Berens, published 1886.

Billingsgate compliments.

Used as a proverbial expression in Richard Brome's play "The New Academy" printed, 1658. Brome died 1652.

A nation of shopkeepers.

A project fit only for a nation of shopkeepers.—Adam Smith: "Wealth of Nations" (1775), Vol. 2, book 4, chap. 7, pt. 3.

Also attributed to Samuel Adams, American statesman (1776.)

What is true of a shopkeeper is true of a shop-keeping nation.—Dean Tucker (1766).

We are indeed, a nation of shopkeepers.—B. Disraeli: "The Young Duke" (1831), Book 1, chap. 11.

Hearts of oak.

Yonkers that have hearts of oak at four-score years.—Old May of Herefordshire, 1609.
"Where are the rough brave Britons to be found With Heart of Oak, so much of old renowned?"—Epilogue to Mrs. Centlivre's "Cruel Gift," 1717.

Petticoat government.

There was one species of despotism under which he had long groaned, and that was petticoat government. — Washington Irving "Rip Van Winkle" (1820).

Our friend the enemy.

This perhaps originated with the French expression often used when the allies entered Paris (1814): "Nos amis, nos ennemis."

"English as she is spoke."

Title of a reprint of the English version of P. Carolino's "Guide of the Conversation in Portuguese and English," 1882. The title was due to the publisher, Mr. Tuer.

"The spoils to the victors."

The "watchword of corruption," attributed to Andrew Jackson.

Bag and baggage.

Richard Huloet's "Abecedarium Anglico-Latinum pro Tyrunculis," (1552).

The Vicar of Bray will be Vicar of Bray still.

"Fuller's Collection of Proverbs," 1732.

According to Fuller's Worthies of Berkshire, a Vicar of Bray, in that county was alternately Romish and Protestant under Henry VIII., Edward VI., Mary, and Elizabeth. The centenary Parr had similar principles. "He held it safer to be of the religion of the King or Queen that were in being, for he knew that he came raw into the world, and accounted it no point of wisdom to be broiled out of it." — John Taylor (Water poet), "The Old, Old, very Old Man," 1635.

The Man in the Street.

Expression used by Emerson, "Conduct of Life—Worship" and elsewhere.

A proverb describes proverbs as being "the wisdom of the street."

Going the whole hog.

(Hence in more recent times "whole-hoggers.")

Said to be connected with the slang "hog," a word meaning at different periods one shilling and five shillings. "Hoger" is Jewish-German for ducat. A correspondent of Notes and Queries (Sept. 27, 1851) ascribes an Irish origin to the expression, stating that in Ireland a shilling was called a hog.

Let them stew in their own grease.

A saying in use at the time of the Franco-German war, imported from Germany.

The lungs of London [i.e. the parks].

Said to have been used by Mr. Windham in a speech delivered before 1814. See also Chas. Dickens (p. 110).

"Bang went saxeence."

Peebles Body (to Townsman supposed to be in London): E-eh, Mac! ye're sune hame again. — Mac: E-eh, it's just a ruinous place that! Mun, a had na' been there abune twa hoours, when—Bang—went—Saxeence.

Punch joke, illustrated by Chas. Keene, Dec. 5, 1888. Said to have been communicated to Keene by Birket Foster, who had the story from Sir John Gilbert.

Masterly inactivity.

According to a correspondent in Notes and Queries (Nov. 29, 1879) this phrase was coined by Sir James Mackintosh (1765-1832). Vindiciæ Gallicæ (1791). It is a parallel phrase with Horace's "strenua inertia" (1 Epl. 11, 28).

Present company excepted.

This expression occurs in "The London Hermit" (by O'Keefe) (1793). Probably of earlier occurrence.

Good manners to except my Lord Mayor of London.—Ray's Proverbs.

A draught on Aldgate Pump.

Stated by Fielding in his "Essay on the Character of Men," to be, "a mercantile phrase for a bad note."

The girl I left behind me.

Song ascribed to the year 1759.

The roaring forties.

The rough part of the Atlantic between 40° and 50° N. latitude. Sometimes called "the rolling forties," and also applied to that part of the Southern Ocean between 40° and 50° S.

I heard the little bird say so.

Swift. Letter to Stella, May 23, 1711.

"A good bedside manner."

This phrase originated in Punch, March 15, 1884, in the letterpress accompanying a drawing by G. Du Maurier: "What sort of a doctor is he?" "Well, I don't know much about his ability; but he's got a very good bedside manner."

Lying like gas-meters.

Said to have originated in Dec., 1897, in a case at Southwark Police Court.

Not lost but gone before.

Title of a song published in Smith's Edinburgh Harmony, 1829.

"Non amittuntur sed præmittuntur." (They are not lost but sent before).—Seneca.

Hoping against hope.

Founded upon Romans 4, 18.

Macaulay's Schoolboy.

The frequency of Macaulay's reference to somewhat abstruse matters as subjects which any public schoolboy would know, has led to his being credited with the phrase. It is to be found, however, in many earlier authors, e.g.: "Every schoolboy hath that famous testament of Grunnius Corocotta Porocellus at his fingers' ends." — R. Burton: "Anat. Melan." (1621), Part 3, sec. 1, mem. 1, 1. See also Swift:

"Oh how our neighbour lifts his nose,
To tell what every schoolboy knows."

The Fourth Estate.

The "three estates of the realm" are the Lords Spiritual, The Lords Temporal, and the Commons. "Ane pleasant satyre of the Three Estatis" was a play by Sir David

Lindsay, produced in 1535. The Newspaper Press, owing to its greatly enhanced influence and power, became known as "The Fourth Estate" about the end of the 18th century. Burke is credited with having invented the term, but it does not appear in his published works.

In Rabelais's "Pantagruel," when Pantagruel visits the island of the Papimanes, he is met by four persons, a monk, a falconer, a lawyer, and a husbandman, and is told that they are "les quatre estatz de l'isle" (the four estates of the island.) (Book 4, chap. 48).

Culture is the passion for sweetness and light, and (what is more) the passion for making them prevail. Matthew Arnold.

The phrase "sweetness and light" was used by Dean Swift ("Battle of the Books," 1697) in an imaginary fable by Æsop as to the merits of the bee (the ancients) and the spider (the moderns). It concludes: "The difference is that instead of dirt and poison, we have rather chosen to fill our hives with honey and wax, thus furnishing mankind with the two noblest of things, which are sweetness and light."

4.—HISTORICAL AND TRADITIONAL.

"Thou hast conquered, O Nazarene," or, according to others, "Be content, O Nazarene."

Ascribed to Julian the Apostate, when at the point of death, in Persia, A.D. 363. (See Montaigne "Essais," 1580, book 2, chap. 19; also Swinburne: "Thou hast conquered, O pale Galilean," p. 354).

There, with the grace of God, goes
John Bradford.

Tradition ascribes this to John Bradford (b. 1510; burnt at Smithfield 1555) on seeing some criminals going to execution. (See "Nat. Dict. Biog.")

The English take their pleasures sadly.

"Ils s'amusaient tristement selon la coutume de leur pays," said Froissart. — Emerson's "English Traits," chap. 8.

"They" (the English), says Froissart, "amused themselves sadly after the fashion of their country" — "ils se rejoissaient tristement selon la coutume de leur pays." — Hazlitt, "Sketches and Essays: Merry England."

The passage is not found in Froissart, but it seems to be derived from the Duc de Sully's "Mémoires," written c. 1630, as follows: "Les Anglais s'amusaient tristement selon l'usage de leur pays." There is a mediæval Latin proverb, "Anglica gens est optima fletus et pessimæ ridens" (The English race is the best at weeping and the worst at laughing.) On the other hand, there is an early tribute to the jovial disposition of Englishmen: "The whole [English] nation, beyond all other mortal men, is most given to banquetting and feasts." — Trans. (by Burton, "Anat. Melan," 1621) from Paulus Jovius (1483-1552), "Hist.," Book 11.

A certain man has called us, "of all peoples the wisest in action"; but he added, "the stupidest in speech." — Carlyle, on "The Nigger Question" (1849).

Froth at top, dregs at bottom, but the middle excellent.

Voltaire's Description of the English Nation.

A great leap in the dark

Thomas Hobbes, b. 1588, d. 1679, author of "Leviathan," when about to die, is reported to have said, "Now I am about to take my last voyage, a great leap in the dark." Hence the expression, "Hobbes' voyage," Vanbrugh uses in the "The Provoked Wife" (1679), as referring to matrimony.

What has posterity done for us?

Erroneously attributed to Sir Boyle Roche (1743-1807) in a speech in the House of Commons; but the words occur in John Trumbull's "McFingal," canto 2 (1776). Mrs. Elizabeth Montagu, in a letter dated Jan. 1, 1742, has this allusion: "The man was laughed at as a blunderer who said in a public business, 'We do much for posterity; I would fain see them do something for us.'"

The King of France, with twenty thousand men,

Went up the hill, and then came down again.
Old Tarlton's Song. (Tarlton died 1583.)

Halliwel, in his "Nursery Rhymes," gives four versions of these lines, including one from a Sloane MS., temp. Chas. I.

And have they fixed the where, and when?
And shall Trelawny die?

Then twenty thousand Cornish men
Shall know the reason why!

Trelawny. (Song written at the time of the committal of Trelawny, Bishop of Bristol, to the Tower, 1688.)

All my eye and Betty Martin.

The older form is said to be, "All my eye, Betty Martin." [The tradition that "Betty Martin" is a survival of a mediæval invocation, "Beate Martine," is discredited.]

The sun never sets in the Spanish dominions.

*Quoted, as a saying of Spanish soldiers, by Capt. John Smith, 1579-1631.

* Also mentioned in Gage's "New Survey of the West Indies," 1648, as applicable to the Dutch as well as the Spaniards.

It may be well to wait a century for a reader, as God has waited six thousand years for an observer.

John Kepler (1571-1630).

If the Almighty God waited 6,000 years for one to see what he had made, I may surely wait 200 for one to understand what I have seen.—Carlyle (referring to Kepler); "Miscellanies" (Voltaire), 1829.

England expects every officer and man to do his duty this day.

Nelson's Signal, Oct. 26, 1805, as published in "The Times," Dec. 26, 1805.

Usually quoted as "England expects every man to do his duty."

Victory! or Westminster Abbey!

Lord Nelson (1758-1805) on boarding the "San Carlo."

"Victory, or else a grave."—Shakespeare, Henry VI., Part 3, Act 2, 2.

Every bullet has its billet.

Saying attributed to William III.

Suffice this to prove my theme withal,
That every bullet hath a lighting place.

—Osceola, "Fruits of War."

King William was of an opinion, an' please your Honour, quoth Trim, that everything was predestined for us in this world; inasmuch that he would often say to his soldiers that "every ball had its billet."—Sterne, "Tristram Shandy" (1759-1760), Vol. 8, ch. 19.

The Army and Navy for ever,

Three cheers for the Red, White, and Blue.

The Red, White, and Blue.

Song originating at the time of the Crimean war, and said to indicate the co-operation of redcoats and bluejackets.

No soldier can fight unless he is properly fed on beef and beer.

Attributed to the Duke of Marlborough.

A similar saying, "An army, like a serpent, goes on its belly," has been attributed to Frederick the Great.

"Soldiers, we must never be beat,—what will they say in England?"

Remark by the Duke of Wellington at Waterloo.

The thin red line.

Article in "The Times," describing the Highlanders drawn up at Balaklava or Inkerman.

"Up, Guards! and at 'em."

Ascribed to Wellington.

His real words, according to his biographer, Sir Herbert Maxwell, were, "Stand up, Guards."

He never would believe that Providence had sent a few men into the world, ready booted and spurred to ride, and millions ready saddled and bridled to be ridden.

Saying of Richard Rumbold, at his execution, 1685, as recorded by Lord Macaulay (History of England, Chap. 5).

All quiet along the Potomac.

Proverbial saying in America. Supposed to have originated in a report by General G. B. McLellan, U.S. (1826-1885).

Go West, young man! Go West.

John L. B. Soule, in the "Terre Haute Express" (1851).

Be sure you are right. Then go ahead.

David Crockett, U.S. (1786-1836).

Hold the fort! I am coming!

Signal to General Corse, in Allatoona (Oct. 5, 1864), by William F. Sherman (1820-1891).

The religion of all men of sense.

The Earl [Shaftesbury] said at last . . . "Men of sense are really but of one religion." Upon which says the lady, of a sudden, "Pray, my lord, what religion is that which men of sense agree in?" "Madam," says the earl, "men of sense never tell it."—*Note by Speaker Onslow, to Burnet's notice of the Earl of Shaftesbury, "History of his own Times," Vol. 1.

A similar anecdote is told of Samuel Rogers in Froude's "Short Studies on Great Subjects"—"A plea for the Free Discussion of Theological Difficulties"—no doubt a confusion of memory on Froude's part. The story is also told of Benjamin Disraeli, but this is due probably to his having put it into the mouth of Waldershare in his novel "Eudymion."

Lord Chatham, with his sword undrawn,

Is waiting for Sir Richard Strachan;

Sir Richard, longing to be at 'em,

Is waiting for the Earl of Chatham.

Epigram said to have appeared in the "Morning Chronicle" (1809).

The reference is to the recriminations following the failure of the military operations of John Pitt, second Earl of Chatham, in the expedition to Walcheren, 1809. He attributed his own fatal delays to the dilatoriness of Admiral Sir Richard Strachan, who retaliated that the Earl was unpunctual in fulfilling his arrangements, and nicknamed him "the late Earl of Chatham." Another version (given in the "Nat. Dict. Biog.") is:

Great Chatham, with his sabre drawn,
Stood waiting for Sir Richard Strachan;
Sir Richard, longing to be at 'em,
Stood waiting for the Earl of Chatham.

See also Cowper (p. 95) "Admirals extolled for standing still."

To Banbury came I, O profane one!

Where I saw a Puritane one

* Old Lord Shaftesbury, conferring with Major Wildman about the many sects of religion . . . came to this conclusion . . . All wise men are of the same religion. Whereupon a lady in the room . . . demanded what that religion was. To whom Lord Shaftesbury straight replied, "Madam, wise men never tell."—JOHN TOLAND, "Clidophorus" (1720).

Hanging of his cat on Monday,
For killing of a mouse on Sunday.
Braithwait's "Drunken Barnaby."

Banbury is described by Mr. S. R. Gardiner ("History of England," Vol. S, p. 93), as "that most Puritan of all Puritan towns."

Here lie the bones of Robert Lowe:
Where he's gone to I don't know.
If to the realms of peace and love,
Farewell to happiness above.
If he's gone to a lower level,
I can't congratulate the devil.

From the "Owl" (about 1871). Attributed to E. Knatchbull-Hugessen (afterwards Lord Brabourne).

We don't want to fight,
But, by Jingo, if we do,
We've got the ships, we've got the men,
We've got the money too.

Music Hall Song, 1877. Hence came the term "Jingoes" as applied to fire-eating politicians.

Hops, Reformation, Bays, and Beer
Came into England all in one year.

Old Rhyme.

Hops, carp, pickerel, and beer
Came into England all in one year.

Another version of the same, referring to 1532.

You may prove anything by figures.

Stated by Carlyle to be the saying of "a witty statesman." Chartism No. 2.

All evil comes from Spain: all good from the north.

According to Sir T. Challoner, writing from Florence, 1597, this was then "a common proverb in every man's mouth." (Notes and Queries, 10th Ser., Vol. 2, 23).

Never was Legate or Cardinal that did good in England.

Referred to by Hall ("Chronicle," 16th century) as being an "olde saive" in the time of Henry VIII.

With how little wisdom the world is governed!

"Thou little thinkest what a little foolery governs the whole world." A saying ascribed to "a wise Pope" in Selden's "Table Talk" (see p. 275); also to the Swedish Chancellor Oxenstierna; also told in connection with Conrad van Benningen, the Dutch statesman (1648). Lord Chatham, in a letter to Lord Shelburne (Jan. 25, 1775), writes of the expression as "the saying of one of the Popes—Alexander VI., Jules, or Leo—to a son of his."

The world is governed too much.

Motto of the "Globe" newspaper (U.S.). See Emerson, "Essay: New English Reformers."

Woman's reason:

"It is a woman's reason to say I will do such a thing because I will."
"Burroughs on Hosea," published 1652, Vol. 4.

"Mere man."

"No mere man since the Fall, is able in this life perfectly to keep the Commandments."
Shorter Catechism.

Modesty is a very good thing, but a man in this country may get on very well without it.

Motto said to have been inscribed on a banner in a Western State.

O Athenians, what toil do I undergo to please you!

Alexander the Great. Quoted by Carlyle.

5.—POLITICAL PHRASES.

Drifting into war.

Expression used by the Earl of Clarendon, 1608-1674.

Every man has his price.

Ascribed to Sir Robert Walpole, Earl of Orford (1676-1745). His nephew, Horace Walpole, in a letter dated Aug. 26, 1785, says it was a maxim ascribed to Sir Robert "by his enemies."

Peace, Retrenchment, and Reform.

"No sooner does he hear any of his brothers mention reform or retrenchment, than up he jumps.—Washington Irving, "The Sketch Book: John Bull." (1820).

An H. B. cartoon of Nov. 26, 1830, represents Earl Grey as informing William IV. that his conditions are "Retrenchment, Reform, and Peace."

I am for Peace, for Retrenchment, and for Reform—thirty years ago the great watch-words of the great Liberal party.—Speech by John Bright at Birmingham Town Hall, April 28, 1859.

"The three F's."

"Fair rents, fixity of tenure, and freedom of sale." The three F's were the policy of the Irish land legislation of 1881.

Never overlap business.

Favourite saying of Sir James Graham, founded on a rule of Francis Bacon.

"Gentlemen, I say ditto to Mr. Burke!"
Speech by Mr. Cruger after being returned with Mr. Burke as member for Bristol.

Party is the madness of many for the gain of a few.

Attributed to Pope and also to Swift. Pope is probably the author. Published in "Miscellanies: Thoughts on Various Subjects" (1736).

Peace with honour.

Expression used by Lord Beaconsfield on his return from the Berlin Congress on the Eastern Question, July, 1878.

He had rather spend £10,000 on Embassies to keep or procure peace with dishonour, than £10,000 on an army that would have forced peace with honour.—Sir Anthony Weldon, "The Court and Character of King James," 1650.

Register! Register! Register!

From a speech by Sir Robt. Peel at a "civic festival" (c. 1835). ("Ay, register, register, register!" said the Duke. "Those were immortal words." "I can tell you Grace three far better ones," said Mr. Tadpole, with a self-complacent air. "Object, object, object!"—B. Disraeli: "Coningsby" Book 2, chap. 2.)

Policy of pin-pricks.

This is from the French expression "coups d'épingle" which seems to have been classical as early as the middle of the 18th century.

Defence not defiance.

Motto of the Volunteer Movement (c. 1852.) "An attitude not only of defence, but defiance."—Prof. Thos. Gillespie: "The Mountain Storm."

Three acres and a cow.

An expression often attributed to the Right Hon. Jesse Collings, M.P. (b. 1831), who carried the Small Holdings amendment against Lord Salisbury's Government in 1886.—John Stuart Mill ("Principles of Political Economy," 1848, Book 2, chap. 6, sec. 5), referring to peasant-farming in Flanders, wrote: "When the land is cultivated entirely by the spade, and no horses are kept, a cow is kept for every three acres of land."

D. Defoe (1663-1731):—"Tour through the whole Islands of Great Britain" (published posthumously?)—suggested a provision of three acres of ground for every man in a settlement, and a certain quantity of common-land where they should have a few sheep and cows.

"Ten acres and a mule."—American phrase indicating the expectations of emancipated slaves (1862).

The unspeakable Turk.

Expression used by Carlyle. Article on Das Niebelungen Lied. 1831.

All political parties die at last of swallowing their own lies.

Attributed to John Arbutnot, M.D. (1675-1735), in "Life of Emerson," p. 165.

The classes and the masses.

A phrase used by Mr. Gladstone.

"This new rage for rhyming badly, Which late hath seized all ranks and classes, Down to that new estate 'the masses.'"
"The Fudges in England," (1835). Letter 4. T. Moore.

The Duty of an Opposition is to oppose.

Quoted by Lord Randolph Churchill.

When I first came into Parliament, Mr. Tierney, a great Whig authority, used always to say that the duty of an Opposition was very simple—it was to oppose everything and propose nothing.—Lord Stanley: Hansard's Parliamentary Debates, June 4, 1841.

Are we downhearted? No!

This expression, which came into vogue in England towards the close of the General Election of Jan., 1906, seems to have originated in a speech by Mr. Joseph Chamberlain at Smethwick, Jan. 15, 1906, in which he said: "We are not downhearted, but we cannot understand what is happening to our neighbours."

Terminological inexactitude.

"It [Chinese Labour in South Africa] could not, in the opinion of His Majesty's Government, be classified as slavery in the extreme acceptance of the word without some risk of terminological inexactitude."—Mr. Winston Churchill in the British House of Commons, Feb. 22, 1906. ("Times" report.)

6.—FORENSIC.

Corporations have no souls.

Lord Chancellor Thurlow said that the corporations have neither bodies to be punished nor souls to be damned; they therefore do as they like.—Foynder's "Literary Extracts." "They [corporations] feel neither shame, remorse, gratitude, nor goodwill."—Hazlitt: "Table Talks," Essay 27.

The glorious uncertainty of the law.

Alleged to have originated in a toast at a legal dinner, 1756.

The law of England is the greatest grievance of the nation, very expensive and dilatory.

Bishop Burnet's "History of his own Times" (1724).

When he [a judge] put on his robes, he put off his relation to any; and like Melchisedech, becomes without pedigree.

Fuller's "Holy State" (1642).

As guardian of His Majesty's conscience.

Lord Chancellor Thurlow's speech in his defence in the House of Lords, c. 1780 ("Butler's Reminiscences," p. 199).

Eight points of the law.

1. A good cause; 2. A good purse; 3. An honest and skilful attorney; 4. Good evidence; 5. Able counsel; 6. An upright judge; 7. An intelligent jury; 8. Good luck.

Old saying, attributed to Mr. Selwyn, a former candidate for the Chamberlaincy of the City of London.

No one could be so wise as Thurlow looked.

*Attributed by Lord Campbell to Fox.—See "Lives of the Lord Chancellors," Vol.
5, 661.*

A silly old man who did not understand even his silly old trade.

Attributed to Lord Westbury in reference to a witness from Herald's College.

Also attributed to Lord Chesterfield, and quoted by Burke (see p. 41). G. B. Shaw gives it as a saying by Whately.

Here you are, an able-bodied man, re-spectably brought up, instead of which you go about the country stealing ducks.

*Said to have been addressed to a prisoner
by an Indian judge.*

The man of law
Who never saw
The way to buy or sell,

Who seeks to rise

By merchandise,
God never speeds him well.

In Warton's "History of English Poetry," Sec. 48, the lines (which are attributed to Sir Thomas More) appear:—

A man of law that never saw
The ways to buy and sell,
Wenying to rise by merchandize,
I pray God speed him well.

Lines to similar effect are attributed to Sir
John Fortescue, Chief Justice (1422-1476).

For lawyers and their pleading,
They 'steem it not a straw;
They think that honest meaning
Is of itself a law.

"Psalmes Sonets and Songs of Sadnes and Pietie, made into musicke of five partes," by
W. Byrd, 1568.

7.—TOASTS.

Here's to thee and me and aw' on us!
May we ne'er want nought, none of us!
Neither thee nor me nor anybody else,
Aw on us—nawn on us.

Old Toast.

God speed the Plow and bless the Corn-mow.

*Title of a Blackletter rhymed Dialogue.
16th century.*

Horn, corn, wool, and yarn.

Agricultural Toast formerly proposed at farming and other dinners in North Britain.

Here's a health to all those that we love,
Here's a health to all those that love us,
Here's a health to all those that love them that love those
That love them that love those that love us.

Old Toast.

Merry met, and merry part,
I drink to thee with all my heart.
Old Cup Inscription.

Here's a health unto his majesty,
With fa, la, la;

Conversion to his enemies,

With fa, la, la,

And he that will not pledge his health,
I wish him neither wit nor wealth,
Nor yet a rope to hang himself,
With a fa, la, la, etc.

collection.*

8.—FOLK-LORE AND WEATHER RHYMES.

Weather Proverbs are included under the general heading of Proverbs, but will be found indexed, in the General Index, under the heading "Weather Proverbs."

The red is wise,
The brown trusty;
The pale peevish,
The black lusty.

V. To a red man rede thy rede.

With a red man read thy rede;
With a brown man break thy bread;

At a pale man draw thy knife;
From a black man keep thy wife.
—Ray's Proverbial Rhymes.

Se l'uomini piccoli fussero valenti,
E l'uomini grandi fussero valenti,
E li rossi leali,
Tutto il mondo sarebbe uguale.

—Italian Proverb.

(If little men were patient and great men valiant, and red men loyal, all the world would be equal.)

Ne chese thu never to fere
Littelle mon, ne long, ne red,
Yif thu wld don after mi red.

—Proverbs of Alfred, l. 679.*

(Ochoose not ever as a companion a little man, nor a long, nor a red, if you will do after my counsel.)

Fair and foolish, little and loud,
Long and lazy, black and proud,
Fat and merry, lean and sad,
Pale and pettish, red and bad.

The lonke mon is lethe be;
Seldo comid his herte rei;
He havit stoni herte.

—Proverbs of Alfred.*

(The lanky man is lazy; seldom is his heart stirred; he has a stony heart.)

Blue is true,
Yellow's jealous,
Green's forsaken,
Red's brazen,
White is love,
And black is death!

The rose is red, the violet's blue,
The gilly-flower sweet, and so are you.

Said to be an Easter-day rhyme in Oxfordshire.—Halliwell.

To break a pasture will make a man,
To make a pasture will break a man.

Old Suffolk saying.

The rainbow in the morning
Is the shepherd's warning
To carry his coat on his back.
The rainbow at night

Is the shepherd's delight,
For then no coat will he lack.

See Proverbs: "The rainbow in the morning."

When the wind is in the east,
Then the fishes do bite the least;
When the wind is in the west,
Then the fishes bite the best;
When the wind is in the north,
Then the fishes do come forth;
When the wind is in the south,
It blows the bait in the fish's mouth.

Friday night's dream, on the Saturday told,
Is sure to come true, be it never so old.

East and West England.

Sow in the sop,
'Twill be heavy a-top. Id.

Born of a Monday, fair in face,
Born of a Tuesday, full of God's grace,
Born of a Wednesday, merry and glad,
Born of a Thursday, sour and sad,
Born of a Friday, Godly given,
Born of a Saturday, work for your living,
Born of a Sunday, ne'er shall we want,
So there ends the week, and there's an end on't. Brand's Popular Antiquities.

Monday's child is fair in face,
Tuesday's child is full of grace,
Wednesday's child is full of woe,
Thursday's child has far to go,

Friday's child is loving and giving,
Saturday's child works hard for its living;
And a child that's born on Christmas Day,
Is fair and wise, and good and gay.

From Halliwell's "Popular Rhymes and Nursery Tales."

Cut them on Monday, cut them for health;
Cut them on Tuesday, cut them for wealth;
Cut them on Wednesday, cut them for news;

Cut them on Thursday, a pair of new shoes;

Cut them on Friday, cut them for sorrow;

Cut them on Saturday, see your true love to-morrow;

Cut them on Sunday, your safety seek,
The devil will have you the rest of the week.

Lancashire law;

No stakes, no draw.

This saying implies that a wager does not hold good unless stakes are deposited.

Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John,

Bless the bed that I lay on;

Four corners to my bed,

Four angels round my head,

One at head and one at feet,

And two to keep my soul asleep.

J. O. Halliwell states that the first two lines were used in the time of Queen Mary, according to Ady, "Candle in the Dark," 1856.

Walk fast in snow,

In frost walk slow,

And still as you go,

Tread on your toe.

When frost and snow are both together,

Sit by the fire and spare shoe-leather.

11.—BOOK INSCRIPTIONS.

Steal not this book, for fear of shame,	He that stealeth the one
For in it is the owner's name;	Must be sure of the other.
And when you're dead, the Lord will	Found in a copy of Aristotle, dated 1578. say,
"Where is that book you stole away?"	He who doth this book borrowe,
There are many variants of this inscription.	And doth not bring it back,
The last two lines sometimes read:—	Certes shall he have sorrowe,
And if I catch you by the tail,	And comforte he shall lack.
You must prepare for Newgate jail.	Probably modern.
Sometimes there are two additional lines:—	If you this precious volume bone,
And if you say you do not know,	Jack Ketch will claim you as his own.
Down to the flames you'll have to go.	Traditional.
Small is the wren,	Steal not this book, mine honest friend,
Black is the rook;	For fear the gallows be thine end.
Blacker the sinner	Ib.
That steals this book.	Hic liber ad me pertinet,
Traditional rhyme.	Si quis furetur,
	Per collum suspendetur,
This boke is one thing,	In hoc modo.
The halter is another;	[A sketch of a gibbet follows.]

Casta ad virum matrona parendo imperat.—A chaste matron rules her husband in obeying him. Publius Syrus.

Casta est, quam nemo rogavit.—She is chaste whom no one has solicited.

Ovid. Amorum, Book 1, 8, 43.

Casta moribus et integra pudore.—A woman chaste in morals and spotless in modesty. Martial.

Castigo te non quod odio habeam, sed quod amen.—I chastise thee not because I have thee in hatred, but because I love thee.

Old flogging line.

Castor gaudet equis; ovo prognatus eodem Pugnans.

—Castor delights in horses; he that was sprung from the same egg, in fights.

Horace. Sat., Book 2, 1, 26.

* See "Sublata."

Castrant alios, ut libros suos, per se graciles, alieno adipe suffarciant.—They strip the books of others that they may stuff their own, meagre of themselves, with others' fat. Jovius.

Casus belli.—A reason for, or occasion of, war. Pr.

Casus in eventu est.—The event is in course of completion.

Ovid. Ars Amat., Book 1, 379.

Casus omissus.—A case not provided for. Law.

Casus questionis.—Loss of question: failure to maintain an argument. Law.

Casus quem sæpe transit, aliquando invenit.—Chance (or mischance) at some time discovers him whom it has frequently passed by. Publilius Syrus.

Casus ubique valet; semper tibi pendeat hamus.

Quo minime credas gurgite, piscis erit.—Opportunity is ever worth expecting; let your hook be ever hanging ready. The fish will be in the pool where you least imagine it to be.

Ovid. Ars Amat., Book 3, 425.

Cato contra mundum.—Cato against the world.

Cato esse, quam videri bonus, malebat.—Cato preferred rather to be, than to seem, good. Sallust. Catiline, 54.

Cato mirari se aiebat, quod non rideret aruspex aruspem cum vidisset.—Cato used to say that he wondered that one soothsayer did not laugh when he saw another.

Cicero. De Divinatione, 2, 24.

Catus amat pisces, sed non vult tangere plantas.—The cat loves fishes, but does not wish to dip its feet in the water. Mediæval.

A Portuguese proverb is to the same effect. See "Letting 'I dare not' wait upon 'I would,'" Like the poor cat i' the adage.—Shakespeare: "Macbeth."

Causa causans.—The causing cause (the first cause).

Causa latet: mala nostra patent.—The cause is hidden; but our woes are manifest.

Ovid. Heroides, 21, 53.

Causa latet, vis est notissima fontis.—The cause of the fountain is hidden, but the effect is very obvious.

Ovid. Metam., Book 4, 237.

Causa sine qua non.—An indispensable condition. Pr.

Caute, non astute. — Cautiously, not cleverly. Pr.

Cautionis est in re plus quam in persona.—There is more security in a thing than in a person. (Property is a better security than a personal undertaking.) Law.

Cautis pericla prodesse aliorum solent.—The dangers of others are wont to be profitable to the prudent. Phædrus.

Captor captus est.—The cautious man is caught. Plautus. Capteivei, Act 2, 2, 6.

Cautus enim metuit foveam lupus, accipiterque suspectos laqueos, et opertum miluus hamum.

Plus poscente ferent.

—Those who are silent before the king as to their poverty, will take away more than one who asks. Horace. Ep., Book 1, 17, 43.

Coronat virtus cultores suos.—Virtue crowns her worshippers. Pr.

* Juvenal ("Sat." 3, 86) uses the expression
"verso pollice." "Vertere" or "convertere pollicem" was the sign of condemnation;
"premere" or "comprimere pollicem" (to press or press down the thumb) signified popular favour.
To press down both thumbs (utroque pollice compresso) signified a desire to caress one who had fought well. (See Horace, Ep. 1, 18, 66.)

Corpora lente augescunt, cito extinguuntur; sic ingenia studiisque opprimeris facilius quam revocaveris.—Bodies grow quickly, but rapidly perish; so you will more easily stamp out intelligence and learning, than recall them.

Tacitus. Agricola, 3.

Corpora magnanimo satis est prostrasse leoni: Pugna suum finem, cum jacet hostis, habet.—It is enough to the noble-minded lion to have brought his victims to the ground: the fight is finished when the enemy lies low.

Ovid. Tristia, Book 3, 5, 33.

Corpori tantum indulgeas quantum bonæ valetudini satis est.—Indulge the body so much as is enough for good health.

Seneca. Ep. 8.

Corporis et fortunæ bonorum, ut initium, finis est. Omnia orta occidunt, et aucta senescunt.—To the chance of health and also of property, there is an end as there is a beginning. All things which rise, fall, and those which grow, grow old.

Sallust. Jugurtha, 2, 3.

Corpus delicti.—The body (i.e. the substance) of the offence.

Law.

Corpus eras sine pectore.—You were a body without a soul.

—There is a certain pleasure in weeping;
grief is appeased and expelled by tears.

Ovid. Tristia, Book 4, 3, 37.

Est quiddam gestus edendi.—One's behaviour in eating is something.

Ovid. Ars Amat., Book 3, 755.

Est quoque cunctarum novitas carissima rerum.—Novelty also is of all things the best loved.

Ovid. Ep. ex Pont., Book 3, 4, 51.

Est rosa flos Veneris; quo dulcia furta laterent,

Harpocrati matris dona dicavit amor.

Inde rosam mensis hospes suspendit amicis,

Convivæ ut sub ea dicta tacenda sciant.

—The rose is the flower of Venus; and Love, in order that her sweet dishonesties might be hidden, dedicated this gift of his mother to Harpocrates (god of silence). Hence the host hangs the rose over his friendly tables, that his guests may know that beneath it what is said will be regarded as secret. (Hence Sub rosa.)

Anon.

Est tempus quando nihil, est tempus quando aliquid, nullum tamen est tempus in quo dicenda sunt omnia.—There is a time for saying nothing, a time for saying something, but there is no time in which all things should be said.

Monkish Precept.

Este procul lites, et amaræ prælia lingue

Dulcibus est verbis mollis alendus amor.

—Get far hence contentions, and battles of the bitter tongue. Soft love is to be fostered with sweet words.

Ovid. Ars Amat., Book 2, 151.

Estne Dei sedes nisi terra, et pontus, et aer, Et cælum, et virtus? Superos quid quarimus ultra?

Jupiter est, quodcunque vides, quodcunque moveris.

—Has God any habitation except earth, and sea, and air, and heaven, and virtue? Why do we seek the highest beyond these? Jupiter is wheresoever you look, wheresoever you move. Lucanus. Pharsalia, Book 9, 578.

Estne novis nuptis odio Venus? Anne parentum

Frustrantur falsis gaudia lacrymulis?

—Is Venus odious to brides? Or is the joy of their parents cheated with false tears?

Catullus. 66, 15.

Esto perpetua.—Let it last for ever.

Last words of Paul Sarpi, referring to Venice. Motto of Amicable Society of London, 1706.

Esto quod es; quod sunt alii, sine quemlibet esse;

Quod non es nolis; quod potes esse velis.

—Be what you are; allow anyone else to be what others are; do not wish to be what you are not; desire to be what you are able to be.

Mediæval.

Esto quod esse videris.—Be what you seem to be.

Pr.

Esto, ut nunc multi, dives tibi, pauper amicis.—Be, as many are now, rich to yourself, poor to your friends.

let each fault lie hidden in the nearest good quality. Ovid. Ars Amat., Book 2, 662.

Et latro, et cautus præcingitur ense viator;
Ille sed insidias, hic sibi portat opem.

—The robber and the wary traveller are both girded with swords; but the one carries his for outrage, the other for self-defence.

Ovid. Tristia, 2, 271.

Et magis adducto pomum decerpere ramo,
Quam de cælata sumere lance juvat.

—And it is more pleasing to pluck an apple from the branch which you have seized, than to take one up from a graven dish.

Ovid. Ep. de Pont., Book 3, 5, 10.

Et mala sunt vicina bonis.—And evil things are neighbours to good.

Ovid. Rem. Am., 3, 23.

—The children of our children, and those who shall be descended from them.

Virgil. Æneid, 3, 93.

Et neque jam color est mixto candore rubori;
Nec vigor, et vires, et quæ modo visa place-
bant;

Nec corpus remanet.

—And now no longer is his complexion of white mixed with red; nor are his energy, nor his strength, nor those things which pleased our sight, nor even his body, left to us.

Ovid. Metam., 3, 491.

Et nova factaque nuper habebunt verba
fidem, si

Græco fonte cadunt parce detorta.

—And new and lately-coined words will obtain currency, if they come moderately distorted from a Greek source.

Horace. De Arte Poetica, 55.

Et nulli cessura fides, sini crimine mores,
Nudaque simplicitas purpureusque pudor.

—And fidelity which will give way to nothing, manners which are blameless, simplicity unadorned, and blushing modesty.

Et pudet, et metuo, semperque eademque precar.

Ne subeant animo tædia justa tuo.

—I am ashamed to be begging for ever and always for the same things, and I fear lest a natural disgust should gradually pervade your mind.

Ovid. Ep. ex Pont., Book 4, 15, 29.

Et quæ sibi quisque timebat,

Unius in miseri exitium conversa tulere.

—And those things which each one dreaded as against himself, they could endure when directed to the destruction of one poor unfortunate wretch. Virgil. Æneid, 2, 130.

Et quando uberior vitiorum copia?—
And when was there ever a richer abundance of vices? Juvenal. Sat., 1, 87.

Et qui aliis nocent, ut in alios liberales sunt, in eadem sunt injustitia ut si in suam rem aliena convertant.—And those who do injury to others, in order that they may be generous to others, are in the same position of injustice as if they had converted the goods of others to their own use.

Cicero. De Off., Book 1, 14.

Et qui nolunt occidere quenquam
Posse volunt.
